Now that the weather's getting better, we'll be spending more time outdoors. Last year several Cohasset citizens reported the presence of Lyme ticks and experienced bites, so it's important to remember how to prevent tick infestation. Lyme disease is transmitted to humans by the bite of infected blacklegged ticks. Typical symptoms include fever, headache, fatigue, and a characteristic circular skin rash called erythema migrans. Most cases of Lyme disease can be treated successfully with a few weeks of antibiotics, but if left untreated, infection can spread to joints, the heart, and the nervous system. So if you've found a tick bite it's best to check with someone familiar with the symptoms. Here are some simple steps you can take to protect yourself and your family:

- Avoid tick-infested areas. If you are in a tick-infested area, walk in the center of the trails to avoid contact with vegetation.
- Wear light-colored clothing, which allows you to see ticks that are crawling on your clothing. Tuck your pant legs into your socks so that ticks cannot crawl up inside of your pant legs. Some ticks can crawl down into shoes and are small enough to crawl through most socks. When traveling in areas with lone star ticks (which are associated with Southern tick-associated rash illness, ehrlichiosis, and Rocky Mountain spotted fever) you should examine your feet and ankles to ensure that ticks are not attached.
- Use chemical repellent with DEET or permethrin and wear protective clothing. Repellents containing permethrin can be sprayed on boots and clothing. When used in this manner, the repellent will be protective for several days. Repellents containing DEET (N, N-diethyl-m-toluamide) can be applied to the skin, but they protect for only a few hours before reapplication is necessary. Parents should apply this product to their children, avoiding the hands, eyes, and mouth. Contact the Board of Health concerning the use of Deet with children.
- Perform daily tick checks Check your body for ticks after being outdoors, even in your own yard. Conduct a body check upon return from potentially tick-infested areas by searching your entire body for ticks. Use a hand-held or full-length mirror to view all parts of your body and remove any tick you find. Check these parts of your body and your child's body for ticks: under the arms; in and around the ears; inside navel; back of the knees; in and around the hair; between the legs; around the waist.
- Check your children for ticks, especially in the hair, when returning from potentially tick-infested areas.

Check your clothing and pets for ticks. Ticks may be carried into the house on clothing and pets. Both should be examined carefully, and any ticks that are found should be removed. Placing clothes into a dryer on high heat effectively kills ticks. See the "Prevent ticks on animals" section of this page for more information.

- Safely remove ticks. Use fine-tipped tweezers and protect bare hands with a tissue or gloves to avoid contact with tick fluids. Grab the tick close to the skin. Do not twist or jerk the tick, as this may cause the mouth-parts to break off and remain in the skin. Gently pull straight up until all parts of the tick are removed. After removing the tick, wash your hands with soap and water (or waterless alcohol-based hand rubs when soap is not available). Clean the tick bite with an antiseptic such as iodine scrub, rubbing alcohol, or water containing detergents.
- Prevent ticks on animals Prevent family pets from bringing ticks into the home. Maintain your family pet under a veterinarian's care. Two of the ways to get rid of ticks on dogs and cats are putting on tick medicine or using a tick collar. Be sure to use these products according to the package instructions. For more information on animals and health, contact the Board of Health.

If you find a tick or suspect you have been bitten, get advice from a knowledgeable person. Judy Fitzsimmonds, the Public Health nurse at Town Hall has information about the characteristic rash from Lyme and other ticks and some information about areas found to be infested with ticks.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I too asked the questions...

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset is home to many smart, well-educated citizens who don't accept blind faith when it comes to running their town. Before joining the effort to promote our town override I too wanted to know the facts about the situation and our needs. Here's what I found out and why I support the $1.495k override.

First I looked to the state. I thought: "it would be great if the state had kept pace with funding our increasing town needs." Unfortunately, the truth is that the state is increasingly looking to affluent towns like Cohasset to fund an increasing percent of our own expenses. In fact, since 2003, Cohasset has seen a reduction of around $1.3M from the state – sound familiar? Additionally, Cohasset has a relatively low commercial tax base vs. peer towns, so a majority of revenues must come from its citizens.

Next I thought, "there must be alternatives, can we collect fees from parents to help defray the increasing expenses?" What I learned is that we already are collecting fees – at an increasing rate. Parents pay for their children to represent Cohasset in High School sports, up to $600; parents pay for new AP books for their children who take advantage of advanced classes; full-day kindergarten is funded by parents who choose to participate; parents continue to buy supplies for the classrooms (paper towels, Kleenex, copy paper, pencil sharpeners, etc); and have already cut middle school sports programs sponsored by the schools.

Then I thought, "but the schools are new, how bad can it be?" To be sure, we have much to be proud of, but the current trends of continual under-funding have to be reversed now. The facts are that in the grade schools we do have children in class sizes up to 27, sitting in rooms built to hold 20. We do have inconsistent delivery of health and gym classes in the grade school because one teacher shuttles between two schools. We do have high school language classes with over 30 students, limited AP classes and seniors sitting in 90 minutes of study hall or participating in gym classes of 60 students – because elective classes were cut. And we are not keeping our new schools as "polished" as they should be due to reduced custodian services.

OK, "then is this 5-6 percent annual increase in the school budget real?" The facts are that we have annual column increases in teacher salaries and contracts for other school employees which account for 3 percent annually over the total budget (salaries are 72 percent of the total budget). It would be great if the town's utility bills weren't increasing like ours at home, but Keyspan assisted in an audit and helped create the estimate represented in this year's budget, another 2percent increase over the total. These and other incidentals add up to the 5-6 percent annual required increase.

Finally I thought, "there must be some opportunities in the budget, don't all budgets have fat?" Again the facts are simple. All of the above has snowballed over the last three years, costing us teachers, programs and unaddressed issues like maintenance and security. It would be great if we didn't need to maintain security by having evening custodians and keeping some lights on in the buildings, but we do. It would be great if books didn't get old and our student population hadn't gown 14 percent in the last five years, but they have. It would be great if we could cut admin. costs in our school budgets, but having one full-time curriculum coordinator for the entire district, and a full-time business manager so we can have detailed budgets and monthly expense statements, seem like basic requirements. Finally, it would be great if we could get by without the teachers and assistants who have been cut in the last five years – but we can't. Not if we want our education system to return to the legacy of outstanding schools that generations before have benefited from.

Only one vote, yes, on $1.495k, moves down a path to address our issues. Unfortunately anything else is more of the same – or backwards.

I encourage all Cohasset citizens to base your vote for, or against, the override on the hard facts. The Committee Supporting Cohasset is available to anyone who needs additional details.

Financial folly?

TO THE EDITOR:

Override tax increases are not for one year. They are forever, year after year after year and even incur some compounding via the 2 1/2 percent system. They are on top of the 2 1/2 percent tax increase, which gets no publicity ("stealth tax") also being implemented, and which does not require voter approval, let alone much debate.

Thus, what is the actual cost to you for the tax increases? Let's just look at the next 20 years, assuming the average taxpayer-voter expects to be around for that period, and could earn an average of, say, 5percent in a CD or Money Market Account on that money if it were not paid out in taxes year after year.

First, for the $725,000 proposed Override, the 20-year total cost to the taxpayer with a residence assessed value of $750,000, is $11,000. For a residence assessed at $1 million, the cost is $14,800 and for a $2 million assessed residence, the cost is $29,600! Note that's just the cost of the Override if voted, which is just a fraction of your total real estate tax bill.

Now, for the record high proposed $1,495,000 tax Override, the 20-year total cost of that Override to the taxpayer with a residence assessed value of $750,000 is $20,300. For a residence assessed at $1 million the cost is $27,000, and for a residence assessed at $2 million, the cost is $54, 100!

Other notes of interest are that a significant number of those eligible to vote on the Overrides are not property owners in Cohasset and thus do not pay real estate taxes – and that the additional taxes to be collected by the Town for next year, even if no Overrides are voted, are approximately $1 million or about a 4.8 percent increase above 2006 collections, excluding annual capital debt interest payments. That new additional $1 million comes from the tax increase up to 2 1/2 percent that does not require voter approval plus new taxes collected from new construction above the 2006 tax base. With the $1.5 million Override voted, that tax collection jump goes from 4.8 percent up to an incredible 11.9percent, but "only" up to 8.3 percent if the lesser Override of $0.725 million is voted.

Finally, since 1988, a total of nine Operational Overrides were voted in Cohasset, which may well be a state record, with the average Override being $355,000. This is noteworthy in that most of the other 360 cities and towns in Massachusetts rarely, and many of them never, have to rely on tax Overrides.

You might be justified to ask if this upward spending spiral can ever be corrected in this beautiful, seaside town we love. Most certainly – with the correction of the unnecessary spending flaws now built into the town's structure from many past years of poor financial decisions and negotiations. Such corrections can, realistically, now only be forced by the voters.

Feeding the upward spiral by throwing even more money at it only further locks in the problems and will surely lead to future, more exponential tax increases. A $1.5 million tax Override? – 230 percent higher than the previous highest Override in the Town's history – 375 percent higher than 2004! We have moved, not a surprise, into the exponential increase phase. To throw money at these systemic problems is just plain financial folly. Perhaps some selectmen and the town manager are looking for some help from insightful voters?

Breaking down override request

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was addressed to Mr. Carlson

The Cohasset School Committee is writing in response to your letter in the March 24 edition of the Cohasset Mariner. First, let me extend our appreciation for your participation on the Strategic Planning Technology Action Committee. I hope that you felt your time was well spent, and that you can see some of the recommendations of our Action Committees take fruition in the 2007 school budget. We want to assure you that the deficiencies you outlined can in fact be addressed if the $1.495 million override is passed.

You stated that we should enable our committed teachers to "get our educational system back where it belongs." In fact, the budget process begins with our teachers. They provided us with a prioritized list of necessary curriculum, books and classroom tools to do just that. Of great importance, they, together with our principals, told us that they need more classroom support – they need more teachers, new text books and updated curriculum to get Cohasset back to the excellent level of education it once enjoyed. This was reinforced by a Curriculum Task Force made up of parents, teachers and community members in keeping with the goals of our Strategic Plan.

The $1.1M which the schools would receive from the $1.495M is broken out as follows:

New personnel – $581,760. This includes three new teaching positions at the Osgood School, to counter the effects of growing enrollment (30 new students are expected this fall). Three new teachers would be added at the Middle School, in English, language, and music. A guidance counselor for grades six through 12 would be added to reduce the current ratio of 400:1 at the Middle School and work with the existing counselors at the High School. It would also allow for the hiring of three new teaching positions at the High School in English, math and foreign language. High School enrollment will see an increase of approximately 30 new students.

It would also include additional health educators to keep up with state requirements, new custodial staff to meet Health Department standards and keep our new buildings from disrepair. Additionally, we would hire a part time athletic trainer in place of paying high fees to an EMT, which is required at all athletic events, thus a net savings for the Athletic Department.

Program improvements – $185,293. This amount would be used to update our curriculum and buy new and replacement test books, new software and science and math supplies. It would allow us to pay the second installment on a new reading program for Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. The Deer Hill School would also receive history, science and reading texts as well as new interactive math software. The Middle School would have new reading, math, science, world history, geography and social studies texts and resource materials, language arts and foreign language texts. We would also add a new Science, Engineering and Technology program. The High School would receive textbooks in English, Advanced Placement Finance and Statistics, Advanced Placement Science and Chemistry, Economics, World History, Sociology, Law and Psychology. The override money would also buy math, and foreign language textbooks, and adequately stock our science labs with microscopes and instructional supplies. We would also begin to update our MS/HS library books, which currently have an average copyright date of 1975.

Contractual obligations and fixed costs increases – $266,778. This includes basic transportation, SPED transportation, Special Education out of district tuition, technology licenses and Internet fees. It also covers increases to teacher salaries for length of service and further education. The latter was not included in the budget due to the unresolved CTA contract.

Teacher salary cost of living increases – $238,660. Again, this amount was not included in the original budget because of the CTA contract. Since the amount of increase was unresolved during budget preparation, we could not include it. We are pleased to say, however, that the contract has been settled pending ratification this week.

You have probably noticed that the above amounts of money totals to more than the $1.1 override money. These are the amounts the School Committee requested. After the override vote we will roll up our sleeves and make the necessary decisions depending on the outcome of the override.

In closing, the budget process has been a very inclusive one, with teachers, principals, community task forces, the superintendent and the School Committee working together to raise the level of education we provide our children, and live our mission with a continued commitment to excellence. This override is an opportunity to change the tide of cutbacks and begin to move forward on our Strategic Plan, which aims at blue ribbon schools the townspeople of Cohasset can look to with pride. We have done this under the pressures of increasing costs, state and federal education mandates, increasing enrollments, decreases in state funding and the challenges of these changing times. At the same time, we continue to work to increase our own revenue sources. We have prioritized our needs and listened to our teachers. We are aware of the deficiencies that you pointed out, and have done what we feel is necessary to begin to address them. The result is the 2007 school budget. We ask you to join us with your support of the $1.495M override.

In support of override

TO THE EDITOR:

As relatively new residents of Cohasset, we have followed the development of the town budget this winter with great interest and concern. Our experience comparing several school districts before our move to town in 2003 may be of help to those considering the value of this year's override vote.

In January 2003, we began the process of relocating from Charlotte, N.C., to the South Shore area. Identifying a premier public school for our three children was our top priority in choosing among several idyllic towns. Our evaluation of several South Shore school districts included multiple in-depth conversations with teachers, administrators, school committee members, business leaders and parents of students in public and private schools. We read local newspapers and accessed Web sites to glean further information on student test scores and to assess various towns' commitments to education. We engaged our children in the comparison having them visit several school systems, finally spending three full days in our top choice middle schools. Based on a dynamic small group discussion in an English class, the comfortable atmosphere in the cafeteria, attentive support from the guidance department and the unique middle school sports program, our children chose Cohasset as the school they most wanted to attend. Their assessment combined with Cohasset's record of achieving, and supporting, academic excellence led to our enthusiastic move to Cohasset.

In the spring of 2003, Cohasset was beaming with pride over the school renovation project and had a clear record of supporting the school budget. Articles in the Mariner were positive and upbeat. Just like neighboring towns, Cohasset citizens passed overrides when needed. Educational professionals tell us that positive teacher-student connections are essential in developing a lifelong love of learning and are more likely to happen in small schools with small class sizes. Cohasset's small school system in the spring of 2003 seemed uniquely able to provide an ideal learning environment.

The picture has changed over the past three years. If we were considering a move to Cohasset now, the issues being raised in the public debate would alarm us, and would dissuade us from moving here. We are concerned that the increasing class sizes are negatively impacting critical teacher-student connections and teaching effectiveness. We are concerned that our standardized test results are not improving. We are concerned that adjustment counselor/student ratios that exceed professional recommendations are not able to fully address the social/emotional needs of students. We are concerned that the loss of the middle school athletic program is affecting the physical and social health of students. We are troubled that our schools may not receive adequate funding to meet yearly contractual obligations and utility costs, or the necessary funds to make important

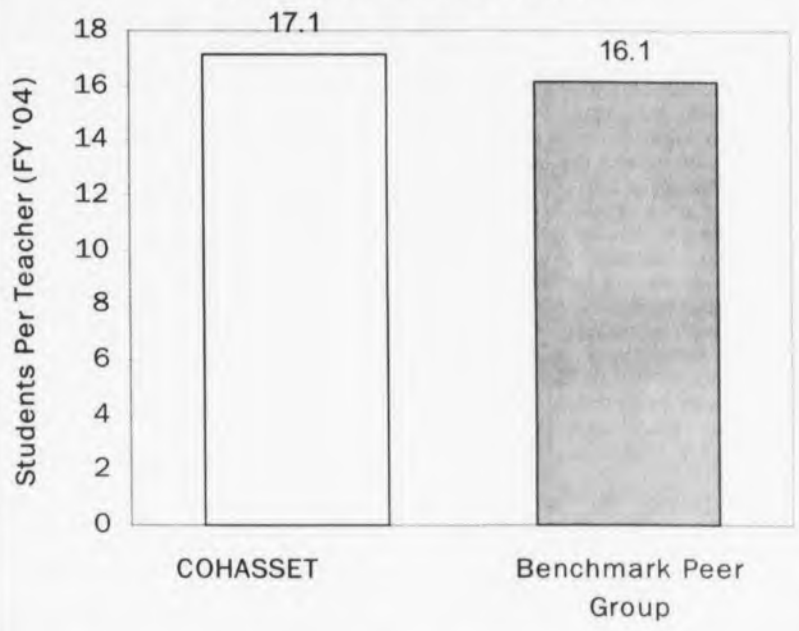
MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts. Tachers does not include paraprofessionals.

This chart shows the student/teacher ratio in 2004 in Cohasset as well as the median of its Benchmark Peer Group. By looking at the student/teacher ratio, one can get a general sense for the class size in Cohasset compared to other similar communities.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Meeting to tackle town business

voters is required before Town Meeting can get underway. Once a quorum is determined at the start of the meeting by the moderator, the presence of a quorum is presumed to continue unless it is challenged and a count shows a quorum is not present. Without a quorum, Town Meeting will be adjourned. Griffin said he did not think getting a quorum or keeping a quorum would be a problem.

Articles are slated to be taken up in the order they appear in the warrant. Article 1 will ask Town Meeting to accept the reports of the Town Officers that are printed in the Annual Town Report for calendar year 2005. Copies of the Town Report are available in the Town Clerk's office and the office of the Board of Selectmen.

Article 2 provides an opportunity for boards and committees to present a report directly to the Annual Town Meeting. At the time the warrant was printed, selectmen had not requested any specific reports.

The budget will be taken up in Article 3, and is expected to generate much discussion. Residents will be asked to vote on essentially three budget questions — to approve a total operating budget of $32,891,761 which stays within Prop. 2-1/2 and does not require an override; to approve a budget which would add $725,000 to the $32 million ($530,000 to the schools, $195,000 to the town); and to approve a budget which would add $1.495 million to the $32 million ($1.1 million schools, $395,000 town). Approving the budgets at Town Meeting only ensures they will move forward to be voted on at the May 6 special election.

Funding recommendations from the Community Preservation Committee will be taken up in Article 4. The CPC has recommended allocating $58,900 each to the historical resources sub-account, the open space sub-account, and to the community housing sub-account. It has also recommended allocating $10,000 for improvements to the Harborview Apartments, located at 60 Elm St.; $8,000 to restore the doors at Town Hall; $60,000 for a Veterans Memorial Park Project; $300,000 for the Beechwood Ballpark project; $120,000 for open space acquisition; and $80,000 for historic properties restoration. Under the Community Preservation Act, the CPC must recommend to Town Meeting each year how it believes the funds should be spent. A recommendation is required even if the CPC recommends the money be reserved rather than spent.

Article 5 will pay the town's unpaid bills. This year, the town has one bill outstanding to Robbins Garage for $450. Bills from previous fiscal years can only be paid by a super majority (4/5 approval) vote of Town Meeting.

Fiscal 2006 supplemental appropriations to the tune of $306,000 will be taken up in Article 6. The legal budget is experiencing a $40,000 shortfall, there is a $150,000 overtime shortfall for the police department and a $35,000 overtime shortfall for the fire department. There is also a $30,000 shortfall in the department of public works vehicle fuel budget, a $10,000 overtime shortfall for facility maintenance, a $20,000 shortfall for extraordinary facility repairs and maintenance, and a $21,000 shortfall for facility utilities and heating fuel.

Articles seven and eight will both deal with taxes. Article 7 will ask the town to reduce the rate of interest that accrues on property taxes deferred by eligible seniors from 8 percent to 4 percent. Article 8 will ask the town to allow the board of assessors to increase all exemptions made by the town by 100 percent. This would bring the allowable exemption for qualifying seniors from $1,000 per year to $2,000 per year.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said Article 9 will likely be withdrawn from the warrant. The article asks the town to provide $60,000 in funding for a new Veterans Memorial, but the funding has also been included in the CPC recommendations listed in Article 4.

Article 10 would reimburse George Roukounakis, owner of the James Lane Easement, for half the expenses he incurred for legal, engineering, and appraisal services while negotiating to sell the property to the town.

Article 11 will likely be indefinitely postponed. It would have given the town the opportunity to purchase the Cook Estate property from the heirs of the estate, which would have allowed the town more time to work out a deal with an interested buyer. At this time, the Weathervane Construction Corporation has put in a bid for the project and negotiations to sign a Land Disposition Agreement look promising. An LDA is a document similar to a purchase and sale agreement, and the developers and town must sign the LDA within 30 days from the town's tentatively awarding the company the bid.

Articles 12 through 18 are all zoning bylaws. Article 12, which would have allowed the town to remove ledge to create additional parking spaces on the town-owned land behind the Teen Garage, will likely be indefinitely postponed. Article 13 will ask the town to adopt a new inclusionary zoning bylaw, which would create a requirement that any new multi-family development with five or more units provide at least one affordable housing unit as part of the overall project. Article 14, which was proposed by the Economic Development Committee, would hopefully generate new commercial tax revenue by reducing the required parking in the highway business, technology business, and light industry districts from one space per 100 square feet to one space per 200 square feet, and would increase the 20 foot street frontage landscaped green strop to 35 feet.

Article 15 would allow the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District (SMROD) to "sunset" and therefore be removed from the town's zoning bylaws. The Cook Estate project would be the last project allowed to file under the bylaw.

Article 16 which deals with the Large House Site Plan Review, will likely be indefinitely postponed. Bylaws to change the large home regulations have come to Town Meeting more than once, and this year's proposed article would have amended the bylaw which currently exists to give the bylaw "more teeth."

Article 17 is the zoning bylaw likely to cause the most discussion. It would amend the town's zoning bylaws to create a new Transit Oriented Development overlay district for the Rte. 3A light industry district, which surrounds the proposed Greenbush train station. The overlay district would cover a 28-acre area, of which three acres would be used for the Greenbush station and parking. Sixteen acres has been purchased by the MBTA to replicate wetlands disturbed during train construction, which leaves roughly nine acres in private ownership for development or redevelopment. The article would facilitate higher density development and allow for mixed uses.

Article 18 would essentially be a housekeeping article that would take care of language changes that must be made in the town's zoning bylaws. Article 19 will also likely be indefinitely postponed. The article would have allowed the town to employ a full-time Town Planner.

Articles 20 and 21 are water commission articles. Article 20 would allow the water commission to continue to acquire land around the watershed to protect the town's water supply. Article 21 would authorize selectmen to grand additional easement width to National Grid for their power lines, which cross land recently acquired by the commission in the Brass Kettle Brook conservation area off King Street.

Article 22 would allow the board of health to enter into a mutual aid agreement with one or more other communities to provide public health service.

Article 23 would allow the town to pursue looking into taking the island known as Sassafras Rock, located in Little Harbor, by eminent domain and allow the property to be properly recorded by the Board of Assessors and the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. The article would not allow the property to be taken, but would authorize the town to look into the history of the property to determine whether it could be taken by eminent domain.

Article 24 will ask the town to adopt a new door-to-door solicitation bylaw. The bylaw would regulate solicitation through a permitting process, facilitated by the police department.

Town Meeting will begin promptly at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 1. The meeting will be held in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School. Extra copies of the Warrant will be available at the meeting.

Money matters

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Meeting will vote to authorize spending in many different forms Saturday. From CPC recommendations to last year's unpaid bills, money will be the root of a good number of articles.

There is roughly $755,000 to be divvied up in Community Preservation Funds through Article 4. Under the Community Preservation Act, the Community Preservation Committee is required to make a recommendation to Town Meeting each year, as to how it feels the funds should be spent.

Funds can be spent in the three specific areas of open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation. This year the CPC has made seven spending recommendations, all of which the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee unanimously recommend.

Recommendation A would allocate $58,900 each to the historical resources sub-account, the open space sub-account, and the community housing sub-account. Recommendation B would appropriate $10,000 to purchase commercial washers and dryers at the Harborview Apartments, the Cohasset Housing Authority property at 60 Elm Street.

Recommendation C would allocate $8,000 to restore the doors in the old part of Town Hall, for historic preservation. Recommendation D would provide half the funds to construct a new monument honoring the town's residents who are currently serving, or who have recently served in the armed forces (see related story).

Recommendation E would provide the funds to make improvements to the Beechwood Ballpark.

With $300,000, the field could be completely rebuilt, including reorienting the field so the players aren't facing the sun, which is now the case. Reorienting the field and locating home plate where right field is now would increase the distance down the left and right field foul lines. Stands and dugouts are also planned, as well as 20-foot fencing around the infield and 10-foot fencing in the outfield. The basketball court and tot play area would also be relocated and rebuilt, and there would be a permanent batting cage adjacent to the basketball court. There would also be restrooms and storage rooms constructed near the infield. There are currently no toilet facilities at the field.

Recommendation F would allocate $120,000 to the Water Commission to purchase a parcel of land near Brass Kettle Brook as part of the commission's ongoing effort to protect the town's water supply. Recommendation G would allocate $80,000 to restore the Captain John Wilson House and Maritime Museum on Elm Street in the village, and the Pratt Building on South Main Street. The Historical Society will provide $12,500 in funding for the projects.

The town will also be allocating funds for unpaid bills left over from fiscal 2006 in Article 5. The town has an outstanding bill for $450 for Robbins Garage which was incurred last year and must be paid. Bills from previous fiscal years can only be paid by a super-majority, which is 4/5 approval of Town Meeting.

There are supplemental appropriations which must be made as well through Article 6. The legal budget is experiencing a $40,000 shortfall, there is a $150,000 overtime shortfall for the police department and a $35,000 overtime shortfall for the fire department. There is also a $30,000 shortfall in the Department of Public Works vehicle fuel budget, a $10,000 overtime shortfall for facility maintenance, a $20,000 shortfall for extraordinary facility repairs and maintenance, and a $21,000 shortfall for facility utilities and heating fuel.

Through Article 10, voters will also be asked to allocate $5,671 to George Roukounakis for expenses he incurred for legal, engineering, and appraisal services associated with negotiations to sell and easement over James Lane to the town.

At the 2004 Annual Town Meeting, voters agreed to authorize selectmen to purchase the easement from Roukounakis for $64,200 in anticipation of the Greenbush construction. The easement is approximately 1,310 square feet.

However, prior to that Town Meeting vote, Roukounakis said he spoke about the purchase with then Town Manager Mark Haddad. Both Roukounakis and the town had appraisals done on the property. The town valued the property at $64,200, while Roukounakis ' appraisal was $330,000.

Roukounakis said therefore, because he felt the town's offer was too low and the town felt he was too high, he and Haddad agreed to meet somewhere in the middle. Roukounakis said Haddad told him the town would pay him the $64,000 in addition to his expenses, and "call it even."

However, Haddad resigned from his position in May 2004 and there is nothing on the books to back up the verbal agreement. Roukounakis says he has $11,346 in expenses, including lawyer's fees, engineering costs, and costs for the appraisal, and is willing to split that cost with the town.

improvements. We are stunned that Cohasset may be facing another year of eliminating teaching positions. Finally, we are worried that the waning support of the citizens of Cohasset will lead to a deterioration of school and town services.

We are committed to Cohasset, and we support a school system that provides a dynamic learning environment for the future leaders of our town, state, country and world. We support the $1.495 million override to provide the children of Cohasset with the education they deserve to be competitive, constructive contributors in today's changing world. We hope that our fellow Cohasset residents will join us in funding the forward momentum that Cohasset needs.

'Honest budget' best way to prevent override

To the Editor:

The Town of Cohasset Warrant is interesting reading mainly for what it doesn't say. It doesn't say that the selectmen overruled the carefully prepared budget recommendation of the School Board without their consultation. It doesn't say that the budget residents are being asked to approve is a "political" budget, but not a "reality" budget.

The Warrant provides almost no information about or rationale for the educational budget we are being asked to approve – even though the school department has provided the town with a very detailed 57-page line item accounting of the FY07 budget requested. The Warrant provides four pages of information about the new suggested law about Door-to-Door Solicitation, but one has to look to the bottom of Appendix A, page 13, to find the critical information about the school budget, with no detail or summary. This hardly seems fair.

Here on Appendix A, page 13, under Education we find two important numbers: "Department Requested – $13, 987,198" and "Recommended Budget without Override – $12,714,714." The difference in these two budgets is $1,272,484. "Department Requested" means that the School Committee certified as the budget what it believes it needs to run our schools for the following year. Rather than placing the real educational needs of the Cohasset schools into the Recommended Budget, the selectmen and town manager have recommended a politically based budget in order to force an override vote. We don't need an override vote. We need honest budgets. Cohasset residents assume that the selectmen will respect the work of the School Committee and their superintendent. This no longer seems to be the case. It is a shame to have our town leaders pitted against its children. I don't mean to be imputing motives, but the process seems designed to put the School Committee and the superintendent on the defensive. Instead, we need to be pulling together.

Here is what's at stake. The School Board has proposed a 13.3 percent budget increase. This is a catch-up budget from cuts made last year as well as one that seeks to address commitments already promised to Cohasset residents in the 2004-2009 Cohasset Public Schools Strategic Plan. If we want excellent schools, we will need to increase our per pupil commitments. The Massachusetts Department of Education five-year trend in regular per pupil cost show Cohasset at $7,227 in FY04, the same year Weston's per pupil costs were $10,828 per child. This is $182 less than last year! We're going backwards instead of catching up with the expenditures of the best school districts in the Commonwealth. Great schools and well-educated kids cannot happen on these terms.

The price of not giving our educators what they need to improve our schools will have a significant impact on our kids and their future. Dr. Walsh has a vision. She has told us what she needs to move our schools forward. We have a long way to catch up to Harvard Public Schools, but our educational leadership has a plan to get us there. It is time to stand with our School Board, superintendent, teachers, and children. We asked for an honest assessment of their needs. To then bury their request in the Warrant's fine print and to avoid giving voters the information they need to make an informed decision does little to build trust in our town's leadership.

We need to hear directly from Dr. Walsh at the Town Meeting what is at risk in our forthcoming decision. We don't need an override; we need an honest budget.

Play the game fair

To the Editor:

This is the time of year when the passion for politics runs highest in Cohasset. Debate never ceases, good friends agree to disagree, citizens listen to one another, sometimes arguing, often persuading. At a given moment, candidates' signs appear along our streets, icons of free expression. We go to political coffees, we consider the messages, we attend Town Meeting, we absorb the issues - and ultimately, we vote our conscience. It's all part of the game: the democracy game.

The democracy game in Cohasset is played with certain spoken and unspoken rules. Differences of opinion, even heated differences of opinion are allowed. Honest criticism is allowed. Slanderous public statements are unacceptable. Trespassing on private property and stealing another citizen's medium of personal expression is a heinous act. The bright signs that spring up like early tulips are not merely advertisements, they are extensions of our First Amendment right to free speech. Removing signs from private property is not a prank, it is criminal vandalism.

The theft of 20 signs from private property in the Little Harbor area last Sunday is a crime. If the perpetrators, young or old, are newcomers to our town, they should be taught that this is not the Cohasset way. If these lawbreakers are longtime residents, they should simply be ashamed.

Cohasset has been engaged in the democracy game for many years. This is not the way it's played.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse to Conduct 2nd Grade Clinic

This spring, the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program will conduct an eight-week second grade clinic for both boys and girls, starting in late April and going until the end of June. The clinic will offer an introduction to the programs as they are played in our U11 through U15 age groups.

The intent of the program is to provide an exposure to the game, develop skills, and most important of all, do it in a fun environment. Full gear is called for and there is a limited amount that can be borrowed from Cohasset Youth Lax. To register or for more information, call Hank Kucinski at 781-383-0634. Cost is $100, which covers eight sessions, USLL insurance, and a Cohasset Lax t-shirt.

New look for lady laxers

By Mark Goodman

Five-thirty a.m. practices, daily two-mile runs... if the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team's performance on the field matches the work they have put into the preseason, fans can expect a successful season.

With nine seniors having graduated from last year's state tournament team, however, it won't be quite as easy as it sounds. New head coach Chuck Jaffe says he is optimistic about the season, which begins Sunday afternoon at 2 with a home game against Nantucket.

"Without question, this team lost a lot from last year," Jaffe said. "[2005 leading scorer] Lauren Rizzotti is doing very well in college now, Mackenzie Holway scored a lot last year, and we lost a lot of good defensive players.

"But we're going to be helped by a phenomenal freshmen class, and offensively, we're very diversified."

It is in the attack that Cohasset appears to be its strongest. Leading the way will be senior Lisa Spirito, who led the team with 22 assists in '05, and junior Lindsey Durkin, who netted over 30 goals a year ago. One big strength of the team will be the number of players who can score, including senior tri-captains Cassie Rosano and Mia Lieb-Lappen, juniors Kara Wilcox, Mary Previte and Kaleigh Swain, and freshman Kaley Madge.

Rosano, Lieb-Lappen and the third captain, Marissa Evans, have impressed Jaffe in the preseason.

"They're all tough as nails, and they're learning to expand their games," he said. "Last year, they were mostly role

Going deep

Despite graduation losses, CHS boys lacrosse has a lot of options

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The modus operandi for Cohasset High boys lacrosse has been clear the last couple season.

Play an incredibly tough schedule, get into the middle of the pack of tournament-qualifying teams, and use that schedule to its advantage.

It nearly worked to perfection last season, as the Skippers made it to the Division 3 state championship game before losing to Medfield.

If the boys are to experience similar success in 2006, it will be a deeper, albeit younger, team that will do it.

The team lost nine quality players to graduation, including three Mariner All-Scholastics in Jake Previte, Joe Durkin and Crandon Leahy. Previte left CHS as its all-time leading scorer.

With opponents' attention on defense going to Previte last season, Aidan Buick was the top beneficiary, using his considerable quickness and overall skills to lead the team in scoring. This year, Skippers head coach Stew Curran figures Buick will be getting the star treatment from other teams, meaning others will need to step up the way that Buick did last season.

Two of the top candidates to do that are sophomore Mike Grimm and junior Mike Bunstein. As a freshman last season, Grimm had a superb second half to the season and established himself as one of the Skippers' top offensive threats.

"He has a real nose for the goal and does some special things out there," Curran said of Grimm. "He will be a force, not just this year but for the next couple years after that, as well."

It is in the midfield that Cohasset may have its most depth. Leading that group is Trevor Brady, one of Cohasset's three senior captains (with Buick and goalie Ben Libby). Brady is incredibly fast, has the ability to score goals, and will also consistently mark the opponents' top offensive player.

Not far behind is junior Dan Trendowicz, whom Curran says has looked "spectacular" in the preseason, which has featured four scrimmages. Trendowicz did a lot of work between seasons, including a couple indoor lacrosse leagues, and Curran says the result is a faster, stronger player who will play an expanded role for the team this season.

Junior Chris Davis and a host of sophomores will provide good depth for the team in the midfield spot. The program saw an influx of 13 freshmen last season, and the likes of middies P.J. McCaw, Mark Flibotte, Peter Ernst and Charlie Czerkawski have come to the forefront from that class. Czerkawski served as one of the team's face-off specialists last season.

Despite losing the likes of Leahy and Casey Coleman, the Skippers defense is again shaping up to be strong. Junior Jeff Brown was an All-Star at a summer tournament at the University of Delaware, an event that attracted top talent from all along the east coast.

"He's been the same kind of player here in the spring," Curran said. "He's been superb."

Sophomore Jake Cuneo will also be a prominent player in defense. An outstanding young offensive lineman in football, Cuneo is fast and has good foot-

Strength in numbers for CHS softball

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Five years ago, who would have ever predicted 19 athletes would try out for the Cohasset softball team in 2006?

Well, it's true. Keep in mind the softball team began only four years ago after several years of inactivity.

Last season they finished the year strongly despite a midseason plunge. In fact, 2005 marked the first time in 16 years the Lady Skippers landed a playoff berth. So the momentum of success has helped to rev up the softball engines.

Veteran coach Deb Bostwick couldn't be happier this year. Because of the great turnout, Bostwick hopes to field both a varsity and a JV team.

"They all seem like they worked hard in the off-season," she said. "There's just so much talent."

Seniors Erin Liddell, Melissa Crowley-Buck and Katie James will lead the charge in their captain roles. Besides the captains, two seniors, four juniors, one sophomore, and a staggering nine freshmen have literally stepped up to the plate to wreak havoc on the South Shore League.

In addition to the big turnout, Bostwick has observed some real aptitude among her players.

"The girls are so versatile when it comes to playing different positions," explained the coach. "They can move from infield to outfield, and play with confidence in both places."

Fans will see the return of veteran pitchers Christina Pinkus and Virginia Spofford, both in their junior year. James and senior Emily Savage will add depth on the mound.

Offensively speaking, the Skippers had little ice to shake off of their bats. Bostwick claims that even the newcomers have displayed some sharp eyesight and smooth swinging.

"The fundamentals just seem so much better this year," said Crowley-Buck. "The new players pick up everything really quickly. We have the potential in many different areas."

Bostwick noted one area of concern - the lack of team communication.

According to Bostwick, "this will definitely improve once everyone gets to know each other." She likes this type of challenge.

Bostwick brings to the playing field significant softball experience. After spending her high school years in nearby Marshfield, she enrolled at Keene State College in New Hampshire where she excelled in left field and at bat. Today, Bostwick continues her pastime in a competitive Braintree softball league.

Assistant coach Deb Beal will lend a hand again to Bostwick and the team. The players are very fortunate to work with such an experienced coaching staff.

Still, the girls know they need to work for respect in this league. Powerhouses like Abington and Hull will also fire up on all four burners this year.

"We're definitely coming in ready to play," said James. "Our new players show lots of promise, and the upperclassmen have been here since the start of this team. This combination should make for a great season."

The '06 season officially gets underway this week with the Skippers hosting Scituate on Tuesday.

7th grade boys win Patriot League basketball championship

On Sunday, the Cohasset 7th grade boys basketball team won the Patriot League Championship game, defeating Abington by the score of 43-38.

Shooting guard Robert Jones made several clutch plays in the waning minutes and was named Most Valuable Player of the championship game. The Patriot League Championship, the first in many years for a Cohasset team, capped an extraordinary season for the 7th grade boys, who led the league in scoring and finished the regular season with a solid lock on first place.

The team hit the court last November. After only two weeks of practice they entered the Preseason Hoopfest tournament at the Dana Barros center in Foxboro to test themselves against some of the finest competition from Southeastern Massachusetts.

The boys won their bracket by defeating teams from Mashpee, Westwood and Norton. In the final they went up against a tough, talented, and experienced Easton team. While the Easton game was tied at the mid-way point, the game slipped away from Cohasset in the second half to give the 7th grade boys their first taste of defeat.

The regular season started in December with home wins over Taunton, Quincy and Whitman. When the season resumed in 2006 the team stumbled, losing a home game to Bridgewater and an away game against a tall Pembroke squad. Five games into the season, the Cohasset 7th graders found themselves with a 3-2 record.

Cohasset responded to this early season adversity with a fast break offense and new half court offenses designed to open up the tight zone defenses they faced. On the defensive end they deployed a triangle and two scheme to simultaneously pressure the ball and protect the paint. The result? Twelve straight wins, against teams from much larger towns such as Hanson, Weymouth, East Bridgewater, Hull, Taunton, Quincy, Abington, Whitman and Silver Lake.

The 12-game winning steak included games where Cohasset simply overwhelmed its opponent, such as a February win over Hull by an 18-point margin and a home game win in March over Pembroke, also by 18 points, to avenge the early season loss.

The streak also included games where Cohasset had to fight hard to win, such as one-point victories on the road against Taunton, in overtime, and over Silver Lake in regulation. The Cohasset 7th grade boys finished the regular season with a record of 15-3 and the top-ranked offense in the league, averaging 44 points a game.

Playoffs began on March 19 in Halifax. Top-seeded Cohasset faced Taunton, a team that had three AAU players in its starting line-up and had forced Cohasset into overtime toward the end of the regular season. Using a low-post strategy to dominate the boards, Cohasset shocked the opposing coaches who were in the stands, scouting the game and hoping for an upset, by easily dispatching Taunton 54-34.

Gabe Seksay, playing his first game after sitting out for a week due to a concussion, had 19 rebounds and led all scorers with 20 points. Working off of the other low-post block, Kelby "KJ" Pontes had 18 points and 17 rebounds for Cohasset.

With the first round playoff win Cohasset advanced to the semifinals on the 25th in Halifax, playing Silver Lake on its home court. Cohasset scored the first 12 points of the game and never let Silver Lake get any closer than five for the rest of the game. Robert Jones

Cohasset's Gabriella Flibotte named among area's elite

Editor's Note: The Mariner's All-Scholastic teams take into consideration town public school athletes from the 13 towns covered by the Community Newspaper Company's South Shore office. Those towns are: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: hockey.

Gabriella Flibotte - Freshman
Guard - Cohasset

The only freshman to make the South Shore League All-Star team, Flibotte led the team in scoring with 15 points per game...Simply knows how to put the ball in the basket, and can do it on the drive or from the outside...Didn't shy away from the spotlight, either, as she scored a game-high 20 points in Division 4 South first round win over Bristol-Plymouth and 13 in semifinal loss to eventual state champion Marian...Poured in a career-high 32 in an early February win over Nantucket...Scored 25 points - including 19 in the second half - in Jan. 20 comeback win over league rival Norwell, a victory that set the tone for the rest of the Skippers' 15-8 season...Also a very good defender that led Cohasset's vaunted press...By the end of the season, played just about every minute of every game...Also plays lacrosse...Cohasset coach John Levangie: "Gabby was our high scorer and probably one of our best defenders. She had a huge impact for us."

Lauren Conway - Senior (Capt.)
Guard - Abington

This South Shore League All-star was the leading point-getter for the Green Wave this season, averaging just under 14 points per game...A senior captain, Conway's quickness was among her greatest assets and helped guide Abington to an 8-4 showing in the SSL, good for second place...Was a major catalyst in the Green Wave's ability to rebound from a tough 3-7 start to go 7-3 in their last 10 games and finish an even 10-10...Conway scored nine points in a big comeback win over Carver (36-29), which clinched a berth in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney for Abington...There, the had a tough draw in facing defending Div. 3 state champs, Case, in the opening round...A three-sport athlete at AHS, Conway played soccer in the fall and will rejoin the softball team this spring.

Brittney Chappron - Senior
Guard - Braintree

Arguably the Division 1 state champions' most improved player, Chappron was one of three Wamps to average at least a dozen points per game, finishing at 12.1...The first team Bay State Conference All-Star led the team with 23 3-pointers made on the season...Also Braintree's top free throw shooter, making clutch foul shots throughout the state tournament, including the game winners in the Division 1 South semifinal against Framingham...Scored 60 points in the Wamps' last four tournament games, including a team-best 19 against Framingham, and 14 in the state championship game against Springfield Central...In addition to her scoring, she also provided Braintree with solid defense and another good ball-handler to complement point guard Jessie DeGraan...Was noticeably quicker on the court this season, resulting in a lot more drives to the basket...A starting midfielder for the state champion soccer team in the fall...Still considering her options for college, with Suffolk University as her top choice, with business as a desired course of study...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "One of the things that gets forgotten about Brittney sometimes is her defense and key steals in crucial games. If she hadn't done that, who knows what would've happened."

Center - Braintree

The inspirational leader of a state champion team, Cook earns her second straight nod to Marinerland's All-Scholastic team...Saw her scoring numbers drop from last season, but made up for it with rebounding, tough defense and leadership...Scored four key points during overtime comeback against Brockton in Division 1 South final...Always had the knack for coming up with clutch rebounds; just ask Lowell, who saw Cook get seven boards in the second half and overtime of the state semifinal game at the TD Banknorth Garden...Had six points and five rebounds in state championship game against Springfield Central, and tipped out the game's final rebound to help run out the clock...Consistently asked to guard the other team's best player, and usually shuts them down despite often giving up six or more inches...A second-team Bay State Conference All-Star this season...Also plays softball and volleyball for Braintree, and is a two-time Marinerland All-Scholastic in the latter...Will continue her basketball career next year at Assumption College in Worcester...Undecided on a major, but is considering education or communications...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "I'm going to look back on my 27 years of coaching and Maegan will have a special place in my memory. She was our leader on and off the court. She brings out the heart, fight and emotion of this team, and she does it with a love of the game."

Stephanie Geehan - Senior
Forward - Braintree

After a strong regular season, the 6-foot Geehan stepped it up a notch in the state tournament, scoring a team-best 98 points in those six games for a 16.3 average...For the season, averaged 12.2 a game, and led the Wamps in rebounds and blocked shots...Scored a game-high 21 points, to go with nine rebounds, in Division 1 state championship game against Springfield Central...Had 20 points and 10 rebounds in state semifinal win over Lowell...Finished with 17 points and five blocked shots in Division 1 South final against Brockton...Scoring, passing, running the floor, defending, leading fast breaks; there isn't much Geehan can't do on the basketball court...Scored her 1,000th point on Feb. 14 against Brookline, and finishes her career at Braintree High with 1,127 total points...Also a three-time Marinerland All-Scholastic in volleyball...Made the Bay State Conference All-Star team all four years in a Wamps uniform...Will play basketball for Div. 1 Fairfield University on full scholarship...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "Often times you can look at a game on tape and recognize that Stephanie does so many things for the team, like changing opponents' shots, blocking shots and then getting the rebound, starting the fast break...You don't always appreciate everything she does until you see it on film. She does a ton of things that are often overlooked."

Merry MacDonald - Senior
Forward - Braintree

On a very balanced Braintree team that had three girls average in double figures, MacDonald led the Wamps in scoring at 12.6 points per game...Scored 12 or more points in all six tournament games, including a game-high 16 in Division 1 South quarterfinal win over Fontbonne Academy...Also had 19 in state semifinal against Lowell...Despite playing with an injured finger on her shooting hand in title game against Springfield Central, MacDonald finished with 13 points and eight rebounds, and hit the go-ahead shot with two minutes left...Often deadly with her trademark mid-range baseline jump shot, and could also put the ball on the floor when needed...Finished her high school basketball career with over 900 points...Also a good rebounder and defender...A remarkable all-around athlete, MacDonald is an All-Scholastic performer in volleyball and softball...Will play those two sports at Wheaton College next year...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "The thing I'm going to remember most about Merry is her rebounding effort in those last six games. She just got in there and did it all."

Lesley Guenard - Sophomore
Point-guard - Hanover

Was the leading scorer on the Hanover squad despite being the focus of every opposing defense...Guenard was third in the Patriot League Fisher Div. with an average 11 points per game...A highly athletic point-guard, Guenard was also a great defender, often drawing the task of guarding the opposing team's best player...Her consistent performance helped guide the Lady Indians to a 6-2 record in the Fisher Div., finishing second behind only unbeaten Rockland...At 11-9 overall, Hanover qualified for play in the Div. 3 South tourney, where they bumped into a tough Old Rochester team and fell 55-45...Guenard is a three-sport athlete at HHS, playing as a forward on the soccer team in the fall and second baseman on the softball team in the spring...Just a sophomore, Guenard still has a long athletic career ahead of her at Hanover High.

Jillian Watts - Junior
Forward - Hingham

Slipped into a starting role when center Hayley Wells was lost for the winter and boy did Watts deliver...The forward was the leading scorer on the injury-laden Hingham squad, averaging 13 points per game, placing her third in the Patriot League's Keenan Div...Watts helped power the Harborwomen squad to a second-place finish in the PL Keenan with a 10-3 record, while going 12-6 overall...The PL All-star, helped guide Hingham in a pair of big wins over rival Duxbury and a couple slim losses to champs Scituate...A solid all-around player, Watts was great when driving to the hoop and also provided solid defense in the paint...Just a junior, Watts will be one of a host of talented young players returning to the court for Hingham next season, making the Harborwomen a team to watch.

Gabriella Flibotte was the only freshman to make this year's All-Scholastic girls basketball team.

Kelsey Boothby - Senior (Capt.)
Guard - Holbrook

One of the most talented all-around athletes in Holbrook, Boothby is making her second all-scholastic appearance this year, having already garnered recognition for her work in the soccer season. On the hardwood this season she led the Bulldogs in scoring and was the go to player in crunch time for her team. She averaged 15 points a game this year with a few outstanding performances mixed in. Her efforts netted her Mayflower League all-star recognition as she helped lead Holbrook to the Mayflower Small div. championship. She also helped lead her team to the state tournament before falling to state champion Marian. She is a talented athlete that also competes on the softball team in the spring.

Head Coach Shannon Maloney, "Kelsey Boothby has become a great basketball player. She is an outstanding athlete, but she has become a great player. The girls look to her for the scoring."

Terri Duffy - Senior (Capt.)
Center - Marshfield

Paired with teammate Katie Wholey to create one of the most feared scoring tandems in the area...Duffy was a big presence in the paint, standing 6-feet and doing serious damage...Was among the leading scorers on the Lady Rams squad once again this season, averaging 17 points a game...She was behind only Wholey (17.9) in the Old Colony League standings...Her play on the inside helped Marshfield capture its first OCL title in several years (5-1)...Duffy regularly scored in double-figures and was almost as equally consistent in the rebounding department too...Her stellar play helped the Lady Rams to an 18-2 regular season record and second seed in the Div. 1 South tourney...There, Duffy racked up 24 points and 11 rebounds in a first-round lashing over Sandwich (55-38)...Also a talented tennis player at MHS, Duffy will reprise her role as the No. 1 singles player this spring...She plans to continue her basketball career in college.

Katie Wholey - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Marshfield

With her and Terri Duffy lighting up the hoop, few could compete with the Lady Rams this season...A great all-around player who was the team's leading scorer this season, Wholey made a name for herself...Averaged 17.9 points per game to lead Marshfield and the Old Colony League...A terrific shooter, Wholey's pull-up jumpers were deadly...She was also never afraid to drive inside when necessary...Also had a keen eye for the floor and consistently connected with Duffy for big points...A stellar defender, Wholey's consistent performance this season helped the Lady Rams capture the OCL title (5-1) and earn the No. 2 seed in the Div. 1 South tourney with an 18-2 record...There, Wholey scored 17 points and had four steals in a 55-38 win over Sandwich in the first round...Defensively, Wholey shut down her Sandwich opponent who had hit five three-pointers in a previous contest...The OCL All-star plays hoop year round and plans to continue her basketball career in college.

Katelyn Stravinsky - Junior
Forward - Norwell

Despite missing the last nine games of the season with a broken wrist, Stravinsky was voted by South Shore League coaches as the league's best player...Wrist has since healed nicely, and the 5-foot-8

forward is now focusing on playing AAU for Coastal Athletic…Led the SSL in scoring (for the second straight season) at over 17 a game, and averaged 13 rebounds per contest for good measure…Also a very good passer and shot blocker…Scored the 1,000th point of her career - on a 3-pointer, no less - in Norwell's Jan. 17 win at Harwich…Had a season-high 28 points in that game…Constantly double- and triple-teamed, making her scoring output all the more impressive…Can score in the post or off the drive, finishes extremely well in traffic, and can step out and shoot it from the outside… Recently played in a high school all-star game in Stonehill College for a South team that also featured fellow All-Scholastics Corey Cuddihy and Heidi Sheehan, both of Scituate…Was the starting goalie for the SSL champion soccer team in the fall…Plans to play college basketball, and has started looking into schools in the New England area

Shawna Carroll - Senior (Capt.) Forward - Rockland

Ended her illustrious five-year RHS career by eclipsing the 1,000-point plateau this winter and finishing with 1,091 career points…The offensive catalyst throughout her five years on the court as a Lady Bulldog, Carroll sacrificed some of her own scoring chances to assist others…Had an uncanny eye for the floor that resulted in her being one of the team's assists leaders with 3.7 per game (88 on the season)…Racked up 346 points this winter, averaging 14.4 per game…Was also a solid rebounder with an average seven boards per game (145 this season)…A Patriot League All-star for the third-straight season, Carroll's consistent play helped the Lady Bulldogs capture the Fisher Div. title (14-0) and earn the top-seed in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney at 20-2…She helped guide Rockland to the Hall of Fame tourney title with victories over eventual Div. 1 state champs Braintree (62-38) and Div. 3 state finalists Cardinal Spellman (46-37), earning an All-star nod…Carroll will continue her basketball career at Rivier College in New Hampshire. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "Shauna is such a talented athlete. She's one of those players who everyone keyed on and she still scored her 1,000th point. It was a great way to wrap-up her career."

Jess Mellen - Senior (Capt.) Forward - Rockland

Was one of those players who did all the dirty work and did it well…Another five-year player, Mellen was a scoring threat when she needed to be, but her worth to the Lady Bulldogs (21-3) went far beyond points…The team's leading rebounder for the last two seasons, Mellen averaged 9.3 boards per game (224 this season) and finished with 1,035 for her career…A consistent scorer on the inside, Mellen racked up 212 points this winter, for an average 8.8 per game…Playing with two other talented forwards, Mellen had a great eye for the pass and was among the assist leaders with 95 this season (four per game)…The three-time Patriot League All-star blocked 68 shots for an average 2.8 per game…Had 12 points and seven rebounds in the Hall of Fame tourney title game against Braintree, the eventual Div. 1 state champs, and was named to the All-star team for her efforts…Pulled down 17 boards a day earlier against Cardinal Spellman and scored 11 points and 13 rebounds against the Cardinals in a quarterfinal loss in the Div. 3 South tourney…Mellen plans to continue her basketball career at Roger Williams University. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "When Jess had to sit down for whatever reason we were not the same team. She was a great leader on the floor and called all the plays."

Jackie Bohenek - Sophomore Forward - Rockland

Blistering speed is this young up-and-comer's greatest asset on the court and it showed at Rockland this winter…Bohenek racked up 370 points this season to lead the Lady Bulldogs in scoring for the second-straight season with a 15.4 per game average…Scored the bulk of her points on fast-break opportunities, but was also a solid second-effort shooter with an average six rebounds per game…Tremendously athletic, Bohenek scored 13 points in the Lady Bulldogs' 62-38 victory over eventual Div. 1 state champs, Braintree, in the Hall of Fame tourney championship, helping to guide the Rockland team to a 20-2 record and top seed in the Div. 3 South Sectional…There, Bohenek scored eight hard-fought points in a quarterfinal loss to Spellman, an eventual Div. 3 state finalists…A two-time PL All-star, Bohenek is also a talented runner at RHS, running cross country in the fall and outdoor track in the spring…Just a sophomore, Bohenek still has a long career ahead of her at RHS. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "What can you say about a gazelle? Her quickness adds so much to our lineup. Her contribution has been immense."

Steph Crawford - Sophomore Point-guard - Rockland

She's everything a point-guard needs to be…Great shooter, great defender, great floor leadership…Crawford isn't the flashiest player on the Rockland squad, but she does all the little things a team needs to do to be successful and does them well…Crawford led the Lady Bulldogs (21-3) in a pair of categories this winter, steals and free throws…The Patriot League All-star averaged 4.5 steals per game (110 this season) and shot 70 percent from the stripe…Crawford averaged just under 10 points per game (9.4) via 225 points…Had arguably the best games of the season in the Hall of Fame tourney, particularly in the championship against Braintree…There, Crawford racked up 14 points, four assists, and six steals in a 62-38 victory over the eventual Div. 1 state champs…She was named the Tournament MVP for her efforts…Also a great defender, Crawford helped pace the Lady Bulldogs to a Fisher Div. title (14-0) and top seed in the Div. 3 South tourney…Just a sophomore, Crawford still has a lot of hoop to play at RHS. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "She was the key to our offense and our defense. She was the reason a lot of teams could not effectively press us. Without her defense, I don't want to know what could have happened this season."

Kate Carlezon - Senior (Capt.) Center - Scituate

Averaged over 18 points and 12 rebounds per game to finish her outstanding high school career…Named the Patriot League MVP for the third straight season…Immense in the Sailors' two state tournament wins, notching 21 points and 12 rebounds against Ashland and 21 points with 10 boards against Old Rochester…In those two games, made 24-of-29 free throws…Getting to the line and making those shots was routine for Carlezon, a gifted scorer who can post up, put the ball on the floor and hit the 18-foot jumper…Also controlled games on the defensive end with her rebounding and shot-blocking skills…Being 6-feet tall and possessing considerable instincts for the game make her a major factor defensively…Says her best game of the season came Feb. 3 at home against Hingham, where she became the first player in SHS girls basketball history to score 1,000 career points…Finished that night with 24 points and 14 rebounds…Also a Marinerland All-Scholastic for soccer in the fall…Will play college basketball, and is deciding between Ithaca College and Merrimack College…Likely will study business

Corey Cuddihy - Junior Guard - Scituate

Already one of the area's top perimeter shooters, Cuddihy improved her game this year to become a very good all-around player…Her instincts for the game - passing, court vision, and ability to get herself free for an open shot - are far above average for a high school player…Says the Sailors' Dec. 19 win in Hingham was her best of the season; in that game, she scored 19 points, including five 3-pointers…Also scored 19 on Feb. 7 against Randolph, including 17 in the first half on five 3-pointers…Had a solid game on Jan. 27 in win over Middleboro, with 16 points…Has a quick release and isn't afraid to shoot it in any situation…A solid defender as well, combining with teammate and fellow All-Scholastic Heidi Sheehan to hold most opposing backcourts in check …Recently played in a high school all-star game in Stonehill College for a South team that also featured Sheehan and another All-Scholastic, Katelyn Stravinsky of Norwell…Plays AAU ball for the Bay State Magic. Played soccer for SHS her freshman and sophomore years…Plans to play basketball in college.

Heidi Sheehan - Junior Point Guard - Scituate

A very solid point guard that just about always made the right pass, Sheehan averaged close to six assists per game this year…Can find an open teammate in transition or the half-court offense, and often broke opponents' presses single-handedly…Says one of her best games of the season came in Dec. 19 win over Hingham, where she finished with 10 points and eight assists…Another highlight was the Sailors' first win over Duxbury; Sheehan had six points, six rebounds and five assists, and head coach Brian Buckley called her "the best player on the floor" that night…Played a great game in Division 3 South first round win over Ashland, scoring eight of her 16 points in overtime…Also had five rebounds and six assists that night…Sheehan often had games of at least five rebounds from her backcourt position…Controls the game and rarely makes a bad pass or incorrect decision on offense…A good shooter, particularly from the free throw line…Also an excellent defender…Plays AAU ball for the Atlantic Belles…Plays field hockey and softball as well for SHS, and is considering playing sports in college

Samantha Ford - Sophomore Guard - Silver Lake

This season was a breakout year for the young floor leader of the Lakers. She was a workhorse who played a ton of minutes for head coach Dick Steele. On the season she averaged 9.1 points a game as a scorer, but her passing abilities were outstanding, leading the team in assists at 4.5 a game. Defensively she was a glove on opposing point guards picking up 3.5 steals a game. For her efforts she was named a Patriot League all-star this season an helped lead the Lakers to a 11-10 record, and the Lakers first tournament appearance in six years. Her and the rest of her young team should be a force to contend with in the Patriot League in the coming years. She's a year round player who is devoted to the game and improving her skills.

Head coach Dick Steele, "She just takes a beating and keeps on ticking. She can stand up to most guards who handle the ball in the league."

Erica Rate - Senior (Capt.) Guard - Weymouth

This senior shooting guard was the primary focus for defenses when facing Weymouth this season. Rate was an outstanding deep threat who led the Wildcats in scoring this season with just over 10 points a game, but was hampered in the final games as injuries mounted on the Wildcats and Rate was the only experienced option on offense and faced constant double teams. She scored over 200 points this year pushing her career total past the 700 mark. She had a breakout performance against Natick, scoring 22 second half points to erase a 13 point deficit and garner a win. She also led the team in assists this year at 4.5 a game. For her all-around efforts she was named a Bay State League all-star this season, leading a young squad to a surprising 8-12 record.

Head Coach Steve Shoff, "She was a great leader, and really kept the team together. She was always helping the team and was like a coach on the floor."

All-Scholastic girls basketball team

Cohasset's Gabriella Flibotte named among area's elite

Editor's Note: The Mariner's All-Scholastic teams take into consideration town public school athletes from the 13 towns covered by the Community Newspaper Company's South Shore office. Those towns are: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: hockey.

Gabriella Flibotte - Freshman
Guard - Cohasset

The only freshman to make the South Shore League All-Star team, Flibotte led the team in scoring with 15 points per game...Simply knows how to put the ball in the basket, and can do it on the drive or from the outside...Didn't shy away from the spotlight, either, as she scored a game-high 20 points in Division 4 South first round win over Bristol-Plymouth and 13 in semifinal loss to eventual state champion Marian...Poured in a career-high 32 in an early February win over Nantucket...Scored 25 points - including 19 in the second half - in Jan. 20 comeback win over league rival Norwell, a victory that set the tone for the rest of the Skippers' 15-8 season...Also a very good defender that led Cohasset's vaunted press...By the end of the season, played just about every minute of every game...Also plays lacrosse...Cohasset coach John Levangie: "Gabby was our high scorer and probably one of our best defenders. She had a huge impact for us."

Lauren Conway - Senior (Capt.)
Guard - Abington

This South Shore League All-star was the leading point-getter for the Green Wave this season, averaging just under 14 points per game...A senior captain, Conway's quickness was among her greatest assets and helped guide Abington to an 8-4 showing in the SSL, good for second place...Was a major catalyst in the Green Wave's ability to rebound from a tough 3-7 start to go 7-3 in their last 10 games and finish an even 10-10...Conway scored nine points in a big comeback win over Carver (36-29), which clinched a berth in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney for Abington...There, the had a tough draw in facing defending Div. 3 state champs, Case, in the opening round...A three-sport athlete at AHS, Conway played soccer in the fall and will rejoin the softball team this spring.

Guard - Braintree

Arguably the Division 1 state champions' most improved player, Chappron was one of three Wamps to average at least a dozen points per game, finishing at 12.1...The first team Bay State Conference All-Star led the team with 23 3-pointers made on the season...Also Braintree's top free throw shooter, making clutch foul shots throughout the state tournament, including the game winners in the Division 1 South semifinal against Framingham...Scored 60 points in the Wamps' last four tournament games, including a team-best 19 against Framingham, and 14 in the state championship game against Springfield Central...In addition to her scoring, she also provided Braintree with solid defense and another good ball-handler to complement point guard Jessie DeGraan...Was noticeably quicker on the court this season, resulting in a lot more drives to the basket...A starting midfielder for the state champion soccer team in the fall...Still considering her options for college, with Suffolk University as her top choice, with business as a desired course of study...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "One of the things that gets forgotten about Brittney sometimes is her defense and key steals in crucial games. If she hadn't done that, who knows what would've happened."

Center - Braintree

The inspirational leader of a state champion team, Cook earns her second straight nod to Marinerland's All-Scholastic team...Saw her scoring numbers drop from last season, but made up for it with rebounding, tough defense and leadership...Scored four key points during overtime comeback against Brockton in Division 1 South final...Always had the knack for coming up with clutch rebounds; just ask Lowell, who saw Cook get seven boards in the second half and overtime of the state semifinal game at the TD Banknorth Garden...Had six points and five rebounds in state championship game against Springfield Central, and tipped out the game's final rebound to help run out the clock...Consistently asked to guard the other team's best player, and usually shuts them down despite often giving up six or more inches...A second-team Bay State Conference All-Star this season...Also plays softball and volleyball for Braintree, and is a two-time Marinerland All-Scholastic in the latter...Will continue her basketball career next year at Assumption College in Worcester...Undecided on a major, but is considering education or communications...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "I'm going to look back on my 27 years of coaching and Maegan will have a special place in my memory. She was our leader on and off the court. She brings out the heart, fight and emotion of this team, and she does it with a love of the game."

Forward - Braintree

After a strong regular season, the 6-foot Geehan stepped it up a notch in the state tournament, scoring a team-best 98 points in those six games for a 16.3 average...For the season, averaged 12.2 a game, and led the Wamps in rebounds and blocked shots...Scored a game-high 21 points, to go with nine rebounds, in Division 1 state championship game against Springfield Central...Had 20 points and 10 rebounds in state semifinal win over Lowell...Finished with 17 points and five blocked shots in Division 1 South final against Brockton...Scoring, passing, running the floor, defending, leading fast breaks; there isn't much Geehan can't do on the basketball court...Scored her 1,000th point on Feb. 14 against Brookline, and finishes her career at Braintree High with 1,127 total points...Also a three-time Marinerland All-Scholastic in volleyball...Made the Bay State Conference All-Star team all four years in a Wamps uniform...Will play basketball for Div. 1 Fairfield University on full scholarship...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "Often times you can look at a game on tape and recognize that Stephanie does so many things for the team, like changing opponents' shots, blocking shots and then getting the rebound, starting the fast break...You don't always appreciate everything she does until you see it on film. She does a ton of things that are often overlooked."

Merry MacDonald - Senior
Forward - Braintree

On a very balanced Braintree team that had three girls average in double figures, MacDonald led the Wamps in scoring at 12.6 points per game...Scored 12 or more points in all six tournament games, including a game-high 16 in Division 1 South quarterfinal win over Fontbonne Academy...Also had 19 in state semifinal against Lowell...Despite playing with an injured finger on her shooting hand in title game against Springfield Central, MacDonald finished with 13 points and eight rebounds, and hit the go-ahead shot with two minutes left...Often deadly with her trademark mid-range baseline jump shot, and could also put the ball on the floor when needed...Finished her high school basketball career with over 900 points...Also a good rebounder and defender...A remarkable all-around athlete, MacDonald is an All-Scholastic performer in volleyball and softball...Will play those two sports at Wheaton College next year...Braintree coach Nick Krot: "The thing I'm going to remember most about Merry is her rebounding effort in those last six games. She just got in there and did it all."

Lesley Guenard - Sophomore
Point-guard - Hanover

Was the leading scorer on the Hanover squad despite being the focus of every opposing defense...Guenard was third in the Patriot League Fisher Div. with an average 11 points per game...A highly athletic point-guard, Guenard was also a great defender, often drawing the task of guarding the opposing team's best player...Her consistent performance helped guide the Lady Indians to a 6-2 record in the Fisher Div., finishing second behind only unbeaten Rockland...At 11-9 overall, Hanover qualified for play in the Div. 3 South tourney, where they bumped into a tough Old Rochester team and fell 55-45...Guenard is a three-sport athlete at HHS, playing as a forward on the soccer team in the fall and second baseman on the softball team in the spring...Just a sophomore, Guenard still has a long athletic career ahead of her at Hanover High.

Jillian Watts - Junior
Forward - Hingham

Slipped into a starting role when center Hayley Wells was lost for the winter and boy did Watts deliver...The forward was the leading scorer on the injury-laden Hingham squad, averaging 13 points per game, placing her third in the Patriot League's Keenan Div...Watts helped power the Harborwomen squad to a second-place finish in the PL Keenan with a 10-3 record, while going 12-6 overall...The PL All-star, helped guide Hingham in a pair of big wins over rival Duxbury and a couple slim losses to champs Scituate...A solid all-around player, Watts was great when driving to the hoop and also provided solid defense in the paint...Just a junior, Watts will be one of a host of talented young players returning to the court for Hingham next season, making the Harborwomen a team to watch.

Gabriella Flibotte was the only freshman to make this year's All-Scholastic girls basketball team.

Guard - Holbrook

One of the most talented all-around athletes in Holbrook, Boothby is making her second all-scholastic appearance this year, having already garnered recognition for her work in the soccer season. On the hardwood this season she led the Bulldogs in scoring and was the go to player in crunch time for her team. She averaged 15 points a game this year with a few outstanding performances mixed in. Her efforts netted her Mayflower League all-star recognition as she helped lead Holbrook to the Mayflower Small div. championship. She also helped lead her team to the state tournament before falling to state champion Marian. She is a talented athlete that also competes on the softball team in the spring.

Head Coach Shannon Maloney, "Kelsey Boothby has become a great basketball player. She is an outstanding athlete, but she has become a great player. The girls look to her for the scoring."

Terri Duffy - Senior (Capt.)
Center - Marshfield

Paired with teammate Katie Wholey to create one of the most feared scoring tandems in the area...Duffy was a big presence in the paint, standing 6-feet and doing serious damage...Was among the leading scorers on the Lady Rams squad once again this season, averaging 17 points a game...She was behind only Wholey (17.9) in the Old Colony League standings...Her play on the inside helped Marshfield capture its first OCL title in several years (5-1)...Duffy regularly scored in double-figures and was almost as equally consistent in the rebounding department too...Her stellar play helped the Lady Rams to an 18-2 regular season record and second seed in the Div. 1 South tourney...There, Duffy racked up 24 points and 11 rebounds in a first-round lashing over Sandwich (55-38)...Also a talented tennis player at MHS, Duffy will reprise her role as the No. 1 singles player this spring...She plans to continue her basketball career in college.

Forward - Marshfield

With her and Terri Duffy lighting up the hoop, few could compete with the Lady Rams this season...A great all-around player who was the team's leading scorer this season, Wholey made a name for herself...Averaged 17.9 points per game to lead Marshfield and the Old Colony League...A terrific shooter, Wholey's pull-up jumpers were deadly...She was also never afraid to drive inside when necessary...Also had a keen eye for the floor and consistently connected with Duffy for big points...A stellar defender, Wholey's consistent performance this season helped the Lady Rams capture the OCL title (5-1) and earn the No. 2 seed in the Div. 1 South tourney with an 18-2 record...There, Wholey scored 17 points and had four steals in a 55-38 win over Sandwich in the first round...Defensively, Wholey shut down her Sandwich opponent who had hit five three-pointers in a previous contest...The OCL All-star plays hoop year round and plans to continue her basketball career in college.

Katelyn Stravinsky - Junior
Forward - Norwell

Despite missing the last nine games of the season with a broken wrist, Stravinsky was voted by South Shore League coaches as the league's best player...Wrist has since healed nicely, and the 5-foot-8

Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "Shauna is such a talented athlete. She's one of those players who everyone keyed on and she still scored her 1,000th point. It was a great way to wrap-up her career."

Jess Mellen - Senior (Capt.) Forward - Rockland

Was one of those players who did all the dirty work and did it well…Another five-year player, Mellen was a scoring threat when she needed to be, but her worth to the Lady Bulldogs (21-3) went far beyond points…The team's leading rebounder for the last two seasons, Mellen averaged 9.3 boards per game (224 this season) and finished with 1,035 for her career. .A consistent scorer on the inside, Mellen racked up 212 points this winter, for an average 8.8 per game…Playing with two other talented forwards, Mellen had a great eye for the pass and was among the assist leaders with 95 this season (four per game)…The three-time Patriot League All-star blocked 68 shots for an average 2.8 per game…Had 12 points and seven rebounds in the Hall of Fame tourney title game against Braintree, the eventual Div. 1 state champs, and was named to the All-star team for her efforts…Pulled down 17 boards a day earlier against Cardinal Spellman and scored 11 points and 13 rebounds against the Cardinals in a quarterfinal loss in the Div. 3 South tourney…Mellen plans to continue her basketball career at Roger Williams University. Jackie Bohenek - Sophomore Forward - Rockland

Blistering speed is this young up-and-comer's greatest asset on the court and it showed at Rockland this winter…Bohenek racked up 370 points this season to lead the Lady Bulldogs in scoring for the second-straight season with a 15.4 per game average…Scored the bulk of her points on fast-break opportunities, but was also a solid second-effort shooter with an average six rebounds per game…Tremendously athletic, Bohenek scored 13 points in the Lady Bulldogs' 62-38 victory over eventual Div. 1 state champs, Braintree, in the Hall of Fame tourney championship, helping to guide the Rockland team to a 20-2 record and top seed in the Div. 3 South Sectional…There, Bohenek scored eight hard-fought points in a quarterfinal loss to Spellman, an eventual Div. 3 state finalists…A two-time PL All-star, Bohenek is also a talented runner at RHS, running cross country in the fall and outdoor track in the spring…Just a sophomore, Bohenek still has a long career ahead of her at RHS. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "What can you say about a gazelle? Her quickness adds so much to our lineup. Her contribution has been immense."

Steph Crawford - Sophomore Point-guard - Rockland

She's everything a point-guard needs to be…Great shooter, great defender, great floor leadership…Crawford isn't the flashiest player on the Rockland squad, but she does all the little things a team needs to do to be successful and does them well…Crawford led the Lady Bulldogs (21-3) in a pair of categories this winter, steals and free throws…The Patriot League All-star averaged 4.5 steals per game (110 this season) and shot 70 percent from the stripe…Crawford averaged just under 10 points per game (9.4) via 225 points…Had arguably the best games of the season in the Hall of Fame tourney, particularly in the championship against Braintree…There, Crawford racked up 14 points, four assists, and six steals in a 62-38 victory over the eventual Div. 1 state champs…She was named the Tournament MVP for her efforts…Also a great defender, Crawford helped pace the Lady Bulldogs to a Fisher Div. title (14-0) and top seed in the Div. 3 South tourney…Just a sophomore, Crawford still has a lot of hoop to play at RHS. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "She was the key to our offense and our defense. She was the reason a lot of teams could not effectively press us. Without her defense, I don't want to know what could have happened this season."

Kate Carlezon - Senior (Capt.) Center - Scituate

Averaged over 18 points and 12 rebounds per game to finish her outstanding high school career…Named the Patriot League MVP for the third straight season…Immense in the Sailors' two state tournament wins, notching 21 points and 12 rebounds against Ashland and 21 points with 10 boards against Old Rochester…In those two games, made 24-of-29 free throws…Getting to the line and making those shots was routine for Carlezon, a gifted scorer who can post up, put the ball on the floor and hit the 18-foot jumper…Also controlled games on the defensive end with her rebounding and shot-blocking skills…Being 6-feet tall and possessing considerable instincts for the game make her a major factor defensively…Says her best game of the season came Feb. 3 at home against Hingham, where she became the first player in SHS girls basketball history to score 1,000 career points…Finished that night with 24 points and 14 rebounds…Also a Marinerland All-Scholastic for soccer in the fall…Will play college basketball, and is deciding between Ithaca College and Merrimack College…Likely will study business

Corey Cuddihy - Junior Guard - Scituate

Already one of the area's top perimeter shooters, Cuddihy improved her game this year to become a very good all-around player…Her instincts for the game - passing, court vision, and ability to get herself free for an open shot - are far above average for a high school player…Says the Sailors' Dec. 19 win in Hingham was her best of the season; in that game, she scored 19 points, including five 3-pointers…Also scored 19 on Feb. 7 against Randolph, including 17 in the first half on five 3-pointers…Had a solid game on Jan. 27 in win over Middleboro, with 16 points…Has a quick release and isn't afraid to shoot it in any situation…A solid defender as well, combining with teammate and fellow All-Scholastic Heidi Sheehan to hold most opposing backcourts in check …Recently played in a high school all-star game in Stonehill College for a South team that also featured Sheehan and another All-Scholastic, Katelyn Stravinsky of Norwell…Plays AAU ball for the Bay State Magic. Played soccer for SHS her freshman and sophomore years…Plans to play basketball in college

Heidi Sheehan - Junior Point Guard - Scituate

A very solid point guard that just about always made the right pass, Sheehan averaged close to six assists per game this year…Can find an open teammate in transition or the half-court offense, and often broke opponents' presses single-handedly…Says one of her best games of the season came in Dec. 19 win over Hingham, where she finished with 10 points and eight assists…Another highlight was the Sailors' first win over Duxbury; Sheehan had six points, six rebounds and five assists, and head coach Brian Buckley called her "the best player on the floor" that night…Played a great game in Division 3 South first round win over Ashland, scoring eight of her 16 points in overtime…Also had five rebounds and six assists that night…Sheehan often had games of at least five rebounds from her backcourt position…Controls the game and rarely makes a bad pass or incorrect decision on offense…A good shooter, particularly from the free throw line…Also an excellent defender…Plays AAU ball for the Atlantic Belles…Plays field hockey and softball as well for SHS, and is considering playing sports in college

Samantha Ford - Sophomore Guard - Silver Lake

This season was a breakout year for the young floor leader of the Lakers. She was a workhorse who played a ton of minutes for head coach Dick Steele. On the season she averaged 9.1 points a game as a scorer, but her passing abilities were outstanding, leading the team in assists at 4.5 a game. Defensively she was a glove on opposing point guards picking up 3.5 steals a game. For her efforts she was named a Patriot League all-star this season an helped lead the Lakers to a 11-10 record, and the Lakers first tournament appearance in six years. Her and the rest of her young team should be a force to contend with in the Patriot League in the coming years. She's a year round player who is devoted to the game and improving her skills.

Head coach Dick Steele. "She just takes a beating and keeps on ticking. She can stand up to most guards who handle the ball in the league."

Erica Rate - Senior (Capt.) Guard - Weymouth

This senior shooting guard was the primary focus for defenses when facing Weymouth this season. Rate was an outstanding deep threat who led the Wildcats in scoring this season with just over 10 points a game, but was hampered in the final games as injuries mounted on the Wildcats and Rate was the only experienced option on offense and faced constant double teams. She scored over 200 points this year pushing her career total past the 700 mark. She had a breakout performance against Natick, scoring 22 second half points to erase a 13 point deficit and garner a win. She also led the team in assists this year at 4.5 a game. For her all-around efforts she was named a Bay State League all-star this season, leading a young squad to a surprising 8-12 record.

Head Coach Steve Shoff. "She was a great leader, and really kept the team together. She was always helping the team and was like a coach on the floor."

scored 29 points and led the way for the Cohasset squad. Cohasset won, 63-54, with Derek "Iceman" Youngman coolly nailing key foul shots down the stretch to put the game out of reach.

The championship game was held the next day at the new Whitman-Hanson Regional High School against Abington, a team that Cohasset had beaten on the road but lost to at home during the regular season. The game started slowly, and after four minutes the score was tied 2-2.

Cohasset, however, began to build a lead as Youngman ran a patient offense that rotated the ball to Jones and Ben Campbell on the wings and into Seksay in the low post and Pontes in the high post. Outside shooting by Jones and Campbell, artful slashes through traffic to the basket by Pontes from the high post, and low-post moves by Seksay combined to help Cohasset build a lead.

Jack Carrier entered the game and controlled the boards with a rebound on his first play. A short while later Carrier hit a jumper in traffic to help Cohasset maintain its advantage. Sam Richardson came off the bench to spark the Cohasset offense, first with a fast break basket and then with a nice up and under fake that left his defender in the air and Richardson with an open jumper that he nailed. Cohasset led by five at the halfway point.

Eric Wasel and Mike Monaco started the second half for Cohasset. Wasel claimed the low post as his own, and snared every rebound that came his way. Monaco took over the reins of the Cohasset offense at point guard and ran it with sure hands.

During one Cohasset offensive possession a long rebound evolved into a broken play at the foul line. Monaco dove for the ball, out-hustling two Abington defenders, and dished to a teammate down low for an easy basket. Alex Harper entered the game and took over at the small forward slot, playing tough defense and snaring a key rebound. Cohasset built a seven-point lead at one point, and it began to look as though the 7th grade boys might win going away.

Abington, however, was not a team to be easily denied, and clawed its way back into the game with three point shooting and tough defense. Abington worked away at the Cohasset lead until the score was tied at 35. Then, with a little over two minutes left in the game, Abington hit another three-pointer to take the lead 38-35.

With the game on the line Cohasset switched to a man-to-man defense, and stopped Abington on its next possession. Seksay, the dominant rebounder the entire championship game, rose above the crowd one more time to claim the ball. Seksay made an outlet pass to Campbell, who pushed the ball up the floor and calmly knocked down a three pointer to tie the game at 38.

Time was running out, and the pressure was on. On its next possession Abington tried an ill-advised pass across the floor while trying to execute its half-court offense. With just a shade over 30 seconds left on the clock Jones intercepted the ball and drove the length of the court for the go-ahead basket to put Cohasset ahead 40-38.

Cohasset had the lead and, after another Seksay rebound, had the ball again with time running out. Cohasset began to use the clock and kept the ball in the hands of Youngman and Jones. Abington kept fouling to stop the clock, finally putting Youngman on the line.

Youngman, like the day before, hit both foul shots to put the game out of reach, 42-38. Campbell was fouled next, and booked the final point of the championship game with another foul shot to make the final score 43-38.

Patriot League officials honored the entire Cohasset team at center court after the game, before an enthusiastic and appreciative crowd, introducing each player individually. During the post-game ceremonies Robert Jones was named Most Valuable Player of the championship game.

players. In this system, there are no role players. Everybody has to be able to go forward, and everybody has to be able to come back on defense."

The Skippers are also deep in the midfield, particularly with the arrival of freshman Gabriella Flibotte, the all-time leading scorer in the girls youth program.

"The best way to describe it is, as well as she plays everything else, her best sport is lacrosse," said Jaffe.

Evans and junior Emily Coggins will both play a big role in the midfield, as will junior Caren Garber, who has been battling illness during the preseason. Jaffe says sophomores Jen Silvia and Grace Steele will also be in the midfield mix.

Joanna Hamilton, who has looked very good in practice, will return for her third year as Cohasset's starter in net. Jaffe says Hamilton could be in for a breakout season as one of the league's top goalies. Junior Aisling Guinee will be her backup.

One of the biggest question marks for Cohasset heading into the season is who will be playing defensively in front of Hamilton. Junior Colleen Richardson is the only returning player with significant varsity experience at that position, and will see a lot of playing time. Another junior, Tessa Leahy, will be on the field a lot, as well.

Senior Jessica Wheelwright, who moved back into town after a couple years in Wisconsin, and freshman Lindsay Hill are both in the picture at defense. Hill is one of two Cohasset players, along with Flibotte, to have made the MassELITE program this year.

Junior Lara Novak and sophomores Sarah Brown and Stefi Belz will also likely be in the defensive rotation. Whereas most high school teams play a zone defense, Jaffe plans to use a lot of man-to-man, which requires great physical conditioning and communication between players.

The coach isn't worried about the conditioning part, saying, "Nobody is going to be in better shape than we are." It is the latter, though, that Jaffe says will be a work in progress throughout the season.

"Playing that man-to-man puts a premium on communication," Jaffe said. "We have a lot of players that can play man, but they have to learn to communicate better."

Jaffe, who will be assisted by JV coach Beth Pierson, will be looking to guide the Skippers to their fifth straight trip to the state tournament. The next goal will be to win at least one tournament game, which Cohasset has not done in the program's history.

Cohasset has an extremely tough beginning to its schedule, with Nantucket, Scituate, Falmouth, Duxbury, Cape Cod Academy and defending Division 2 state champion Norwell as the team's first six opponents. One may think that with a young team still learning to play with one another, Jaffe would not look favorably upon such a difficult stretch to open the season.

But, while admitting that he's not sure what to expect in the first few weeks of the season, Jaffe sees a big positive in playing some powerhouses early.

"I like the fact that we see Norwell and Duxbury only once, and that we see them early in the year," he said. "I like the fact that, if teams are going to have to go through Norwell and Duxbury to win a state title, we are going to be a much different, much better team in June than we are in April."

work for someone his size.

Senior Zack Etkind and juniors Conor Holway, Ryan Kucinski and Bobby Meikleham will all see playing time in the back line. Etkind missed most of last season with a broken leg, but has recovered nicely and had a solid season at defensive end for the football team.

Etkind and Kucinski, whom Curran praised for his hard work during the winter, will both likely see some time at the long-stick middie position.

Libby had a magnificent run in the state tournament last year, and Curran says the senior goalie has continued his top form this preseason. Libby has allowed just three goals in four scrimmages against some quality competition in Franklin, Bourne, Medford and Portsmouth, RI. Sophomore Nathan Porter will serve as a capable backup.

Much like the girls team, the boys have a difficult beginning to the season, opening with Nantucket Sunday afternoon and then hosting arch-rival Scituate on Tuesday. Before April Vacation, the Skippers will have also played Falmouth, Barnstable and defending Division 1 state champion Duxbury.

On the sidelines, Curran will be joined this season by Ronan Buick, graduate of CHS and Providence College and a lacrosse star at both schools.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Carr announces candidacy

My name is Ted Carr and I am running for the Cohasset Board of Selectman.

While my wife Tanya and I moved here relatively recently, I am absolutely committed to Cohasset for two simple reasons – my son Clayton, who is almost three years old, and my daughter Carrington, who is eighteen months old. Clayton and Carrington will grow up in Cohasset, they will go to school here, and they will learn about the world from the people who live here. That's a tremendous gift from Cohasset to my family, a gift I want to repay with all I can do.

Tanya and I have lived in several different cities and traveled for work to many different countries. So, when it came time to settle down and choose a place to raise our family, we knew what we wanted — a town that would give our children a quality education, safety and security, and a strong sense of community. As we looked around, the decision became simple; Cohasset was where we would live.

Growing up in Boston, I knew Cohasset was a wonderful place, but I had no idea that this beautiful little town had so much depth. My family has been touched by Cohasset's sense of community and impressed by its quality of services. But most of all, we fell in love with how Cohasset cherishes its history while facing its future.

I am running for Selectman because I want to use my combination of extensive public service, management experience, and academic training to help Cohasset tackle the critical issues it faces today and to set the right course for our future. While I now own a small business in Cohasset, I previously spent fifteen years in public service, working in Washington D.C. for the White House, the Commerce Department, and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). After this extensive hands-on government career, I returned to school to earn a Masters degree in Public Administration at the Harvard Kennedy School of Government, where I studied leading theories on governance, urban policy, and sustainable development.

In many ways, my government background has trained me well for the job of Selectman. My experiences at HUD involved working with over 200 towns across the country on community development, many of them facing challenges similar to Cohasset. As Director of Operations, I fought for fair housing for senior citizens and lower-income families. My time at the Commerce Department taught me how to negotiate budgets, a crucial skill for any town, and to identify sustainable economic development opportunities. I also became familiar with government procurement processes, now critical to Cohasset as we have lost $1.3 million in annual state funding over the past four years.

Lessons learned from my business life also will guide my decisions. Having worked for Harvard after finishing my Masters degree, I understand the ongoing need to fund and maintain good schools. And as the owner of a small company, I know the importance of keeping taxes low and government efficiency high, so that local businesses can create jobs, drive economic growth, and pay good salaries to their employees.

With me, what you see is what you get. I've learned that government works best when it is open and welcomes participation. The Kennedy School trained me to analyze issues using a variety of tools, and to maintain a fair process when making policy decisions. My positions will be based on facts and I always will tell you the facts that guide my decisions. In this spirit, as part of my campaign for Selectman, I have discussed some of the key policy issues facing Cohasset in the newspapers, on television, and on my website. If you would like to know more about my views and the facts underlying them, please visit:

www.CarrforCohasset.com.

The town of Cohasset offers my family a wonderful place to learn, a lovely environment in which to grow, and a friendly community to know. In turn, I offer you a tremendous amount of government experience, public policy training, and fresh ideas. I think my skills, education, and leadership can be put to work for the benefit of our town now. I hope to offer a new face and a fresh perspective to the Board – a perspective that reflects the reasons why my family and so many others have moved to Cohasset over the past few years. I believe that these are the same reasons why so many families have stayed.

Now more than ever, Cohasset needs leaders with fresh perspective to address the complex challenges we face. When you vote on April 8th, please choose the person with the qualifications and knowledge to serve our town most effectively. I offer the leadership, experience, and training necessary to help our community face the future.

Classroom teaching a top priority

At a recent meeting with supporters, Lee Jenkins further discussed her action plan of "Progress Through Priorities".

As the disclosures of the Benchmark Study indicate we are spending more per pupil and have more staff per hundred students, yet parents are very concerned about test results, the lack of electives and the continuing security issues at the schools.

During the candidate's debate, Lee suggested a unique approach to solve some of our inherent problems by making more effective use of our professionals. By adopting a private school/collegial model to have all of our professional staff teach one course per year we can increase the number of electives while also increasing the amount of time our professionals come in contact with the students. This will keep them in touch with what is actually going on in the most important aspect of our district – the classroom, which is Lee's top priority.

Carr hosts pancake breakfast, debate

To rally support and attendance at the Town Meeting, Ted and Tanya Carr will be hosting a free pancake breakfast at their home at 88 South Main St., on Saturday, April 1 from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m.

All are welcome. Come meet Ted Carr and rally with your neighbors to the Town Meeting.

If you missed the Selectmen Debate, video clips of answers to each question are available on Carr's website: www.carrforcohasset.com.

Compare the candidates and see where they stand on your issues.

Coffee for Carr

Former Selectman Ronnie McMorris and her husband David will be hosting a coffee on Sunday, April 2 at 89 Doane St., fr 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Coffee events are an opportunity to learn more about Carr. They are not fundraisers; Carr is not accepting donations.

CHS grad's career hits the big time

Hometown experience helped set the stage

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

1999 CHS grad, Ron Nicynski

Ron Nicynski is part of the new generation of Broadway-bound theatre producers.

But the Cohasset native also brings a sense of old school, traditional charm and humility to his chosen career path. Granted, traditional might not be the first word that comes to mind in describing the latest of Nicynski's career landmarks. He's currently a producer of the North American tour of Eve Ensler's Broadway show "The Good Body," which makes its Boston debut at Emerson College's Cutler Majestic Theatre last week (March 21-26).

"The Good Body" is Ensler's follow-up — a sequel of sorts — to her acclaimed, breakthrough one-woman show "The Vagina Monologues," the actress/writer's frankly honest, often provocative, collection of narratives revolving around a part of the female anatomy, which, in the words of publicity and press releases, did nothing less than ignite a movement that has exploded into a global phenomenon.

In her latest creation, Ensler turns the same unique eye to the rest of the female form. "The Good Body" is "an inside look at the outside," aiming to explore the cultures of beauty, food and desire from the views of women from all cultures, and how they feel compelled to change the way they look in order to fit in. Described as uproarious and insightful — similarly to Monologues — the show puts its particular physical focus on the belly, and Ensler's own personal journey coming to terms with her "less-than-flat, post-40's stomach."

Nicynski, however, simply prizes the opportunity to be involved in such a big-time theatre production, which he also considers to be fun, entertaining and innovative

"It's very exciting for me to be part of something professionally that I've studied for all my life growing up in Cohasset, and that I wanted to make a career ambition," Nicynski said. "You dream about working at this level of the business when you're studying theatre arts back home, in school or at college. It's the main goal that really drives you.

"I can understand how 'The Good Body' as a play is very empowering for women, much like 'The Vagina Monologues' is, giving women strength and confidence in how they feel about their bodies and self-images," he said. "But for me, as a man, I find it to be very entertaining, funny and engaging. At this early stage in my professional career, I'm very proud to work with someone like Eve Ensler, who is such a strong, intelligent, dedicated and established performer."

Nicynski is doing well at this early stage in his career, as a production team member of the well-noted Harriet Newman Leve Productions in New York since spring, 2004. With Leve Productions from his office just outside Times Square, Nicynski has worked on the New York productions of "STOMP," "Shockheaded Peter," and the award winning IMAX film "Pulse: A STOMP Odyssey." He has also produced a presentation of "Wild Time" starring Kat and the Kings in Las Vegas, as well as a special New York presentation of the South African play "At Her Feet," by Nadia Davids.

A 1999 Cohasset High School graduate, Nicynski, 25, grew up in the theatre, most notably working at the South Shore Regional Theatre and his hometown Cohasset Plays By the Sea company. With CPBS, which he co-founded with Cohasset resident Sharon Weber, Nicynski worked in virtually every aspect of onstage production, including acting, stage crew, set design and the position of director/executive producer.

Also at CPBS, he worked alongside family members who were also quite active in drama and production, such as his mother Dee Dee Nicynski, his sister, Krista, 20, who's currently studying fashion and design at the University of Arizona, and his brother, Joseph, 23, a musician and photographer, who still lives in Cohasset.

Nicynski also fondly remembers other locals — and friends of Dee Dee's — who played active roles in the productions as well, such as Cohasset residents Sarah Roche, Liz Bates and Janet Campbell, a professional dancer who worked on choreography for musical shows at Plays By the Sea

"That was what really gave me my most important theatre experience before college," said Nicynski about his work at CPBS.

Nicynski continued theatre arts study at Boston College, where he played King Herod in a production of "Jesus Christ Superstar" and King Claudius in "Hamlet" at the college's Robsham Theatre Arts Center. He also served as Outreach Committee Chairman for Boston College's Theatre Arts Council, and Financial Director for The Dramatics Society in Boston.

After B.C., Nicynski moved to New York City in 2003 and began his professional career. He currently lives on New York's upper east side with his girlfriend, Mia Havel, whom Nicynski said is a distant relative of former Czechoslovakian president — as well as poet and playwright — Vaclav Havel.

"My particular taste as a producer is in working behind popular, entertaining and hopefully financially successful commercial productions," he said. "That's really my main focus, which differentiates me from other producers in the theatre business who, for instance, like to mix theatre with politics and issues, or even others who like to introduce the works of young, aspiring playwrights."

"At this point for me, it's working with Eve (Ensler) and being part of the follow-up to 'The Vagina Monologues' that's exciting and rewarding," Nicynski added.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Airmen fly into town

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

The Tuskegee Airmen flew into school on Tuesday to deliver a stellar presentation to the eagerly awaiting students of the high school. I was not able to see the presentation but I have been told that it was both interesting and educational. The kids in Mr. Buckley's Outdoor Education class have begun cycling around town on their bicycles this week and journey both on the road and off to various destinations. ELA MCAS testing began on Tuesday for sophomores and middle schoolers and will continue through Thursday. It's been a pretty dry week aside from the presenters that have been gracing our presence. Not only did the Tuskegee Airmen visit, but also the PSO sponsored a presentation by a person from MIT named Mr. Plasma for the middle school. He lectured and did various experiments with the students relating to the fourth element of matter. In addition to that, the band students witnessed a riveting beat box performance from Mr. Dargey, a gentleman who Ms. Hoskin is mentoring. Now for the extensive, yet in my opinion, rather mundane glut of news that I have for you this week.

Paper needs ads

Attention all high school senior parents, the award-winning Spinnaker newspaper is in dire need of advertisements and would be extremely grateful if you would buy a space to send a message to your graduating senior. The parents have received letters from Mrs. Berman about this fundraiser.

NHS meets

All new members of the National Honor Society met on Wednesday during lunch in Mr. Newkirk's room to discuss obligations and requirements for the elite organization.

Yearbooks will be on sale all this week during lunch for $60 each; they will be $65 in the spring, so purchase yours now. Seniors receive their Yearbooks for free.

Band to compete

The high school Performance Band will be competing in a few different competitions/performances this week, including:

• A state festival on Friday against schools from all over the state at Lexington high school.

• An all-school instrumental day on Thursday, March 30. Students from grades four through 12 will be performing and participating in workshops all day.

Jazzing it up

The C.P. Harvey Scholarship Fund presents a Gala Jazz Concert featuring The Greg Hopkins Quintet and The Cohasset Jazz Ensemble. This event will take place on April 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the Gallery of Cohasset Middle High School. Admission is $8 for students and $15 for adults.

SAT madness

A reminder that you must have registered for the May 6 SATs by April 3or else you will have to pay a late fee by the April 12 deadline. Also, you must have registered by May 5 for June 10 ACT test session.

Smell the fresh air

The middle school has made a return to recess by instating a "fresh air time" after lunch for all students. Thanks to the supervision by volunteering parents, the kids will be able to frolic in the backfield behind the cafeteria for a period of time after lunch.

Band event

The Massachusetts Instrumental Choral Conductors Association is this Thursday and the Cohasset band has been invited to participate in this very prestigious event.

Skip over to get DVD

A reminder also that the Mr. Skipper DVD is still available for a small sum of $25; if you are interested, please contact Mrs. Shea at 781-383-2384.

The senior video is beginning to be developed so give any pictures you wish to contribute from past years or this year, to Eleanor Barrett or bring them to the high school main office where there will be an envelope labeled.

Youth leaders

The following METCO students have been chosen to attend the METCO Directors Youth Leadership Conference on April 7. They are: Mercedes Barnes-Jackson, Whitney Graham, Charles Tibbs, Regina Hunter, Takeria Settles, Penisha Daniel, and Johanna Fortunato.

That about sums it up for this week; there is a whole lot going on up here, but things are still running smoothly. I hope you enjoyed reading the news and I will be back to report the happenings of the school next week.

Chicks make long-awaited arrival

Many of Suzi Corkhum's fourth grade students flocked to school on their day off as word spread about the hatching of the classroom chicks.

Corkhum, who each year introduces children to the miracle of life through chick hatching, noticed the eggs her students had been caring for throughout the past month began to crack during the recent Professional Day. Through room mother telephone tree calls, parents were notified and many children rushed to school to see the chicks hatch.

Corkhum's program is a prelude to her embryology unit studies. One of the chicks this year represents a second generation hatchling, as it is the offspring of a chick Corkhum's class hatched last year.

Deer Hill PSO purchased the incubator necessary for the program.

Students in Suzi Corkhum's fourth-grade class can't contain their excitement about the chicks hatching.

A group of students with their teacher, Suzi Corkhum, celebrate the arrival of the new chicks.

DAR honors good citizens

The Col. Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met March 12 at the Lighteeper's Residence in Cohasset to honor local recipients of the DAR Good Citizens Award. Sponsored through the local chapter, the winners recognized were Brendon Barrett of Cohasset High School, Elizabeth Ann Flanagan of Weymouth High School, Meagan Jennings of Hingham High School, Shannon McCarthy of Hull High School and Crissa Morton of Rockland High School.

The DAR Good Citizen Award is given annually to members of the senior class of accredited high schools. Three students are selected by the faculty, based on the qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. The members of the senior class then vote for the recipient of the award. This program is also recognized by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Brendon Barrett of Cohasset High School is the son of Elinore and Thomas Barrett. He is senior class president, executive editor of the school newspaper, involved in chorus, band and drama. He plays baseball and hockey. Barrett's school awards include most likely to Become President and Homecoming King. Outside school, he participates in the Appalachia Service Project, Boy's State, volunteers at Cousin's Annual Gold Tournament and Blood Drive, the Magical Moon Foundation and church activities. He also works at Atlantic Restaurant and the Olde Salt House. He hopes to attend college in Boston and study law.

Meaghan Jennings of Hingham High School is the daughter of Martin and Kathy Jennings. She is executive treasurer of the Student Council, president of the National Honor Society and involved with the Anti-Defamation League. She participates in track and field and has competed in state meets. She also helps at the Drama Festival. Jennings works at Atlantic Restaurant and the Cohasset Harbor Inn. She has been on trips in Massachusetts and New Mexico to help build and paint houses. Next year, she will attend college, and not only "hopes to become a true mathematician and businesswoman, but hopes to show the capabilities of all women."

Elizabeth Flanagan of Weymouth High School is the daughter of William and Joanne Flanagan. She is class secretary and a member of the Student Senate, and plays soccer, basketball and track. Flanagan was the Weymouth High School representative to the Boston Leadership Conference. Her senior class awards include Best All Around and Best Smile. Outside school, she is involved with the Youth Group at Old South Union Church, plays and coaches in the Weymouth Soccer Club and is employed by the YMCA summer day camp. She will attend a four-year college in the fall. She "hopes to continue to help people and reach out to those in need by using the resources she is fortunate to have."

The recipient from Hull High School is Shannon McCarthy, daughter of Paul and Deborah McCarthy. She is class president and captain of the Forensics Cub. She is a member of the National Honor Society, school newspaper staff, Yearbook Committee and SADD. McCarthy plays soccer, softball and basketball, and is captain of the team. She was first place winner of the VFW Voice of Democracy Speech contest in 2005. Out of school activities include soccer and softball and youth activities with St. Anne Church Youth Group. She has worked as a lifeguard on Nantasket Beach. McCarthy also has never missed a day of school since kindergarten. She hopes to graduate from a four-year college and major in political science.

Each student was presented a certificate and wallet card stating they are local Good Citizen recipients. Their parents helped pin on the Good Citizen pins and were congratulated. A small gift and a flag were also given to each Good Citizen. Rob Butman from state Sen. Robert Hedlund's office presented citations on behalf of Hedlund and state Sen. Morrissey. Citations were also received from Rep. Garret Bradley and Rep. Robert Nylan.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Cohasset youth awarded scholarships to BC High

William J. Kemeza, president of Boston College High School, has announced that Thomas Buckley, Andrew Cantillon, Keegan Flynn, David Hernon, John Kearney and Maxwell Shipp of Cohasset have been named recipients of Boston College High School scholarships.

Buckley, Flynn, Hernon, Kearney and Shipp are students at Cohasset Middle School, Cantillon is a student at Derby Academy.

Cantillon and Hernon were named Arrupe Scholars, Flynn and Kearney Ignatian Scholars, and Buckley and Shipp Freshmen Scholars.

Each year, Boston College High School awards more than $1.7 million in scholarship and financial aid to qualified students from all four class years.

The Ignatian Scholarships, named for St. Ignatius of Loyola, the Arrupe Scholarships, named for Father Arrupe, Father General of the Society of Jesus, and the Freshmen Scholarships were awarded to students from a diverse and competitive applicant pool. The six young men were selected based on their work on the entrance examination, recommendations from teachers and academic performance at their present schools. They will join the BC High Class of 2010.

"We have carefully selected the most qualified young men from a highly competitive applicant pool to become part of BC High's over 140-year tradition of academic excellence, character development and service to others.

"At BC High, they will be challenged in a nurturing and supportive environment and will graduate as leaders marked by competence, conscience and compassion, leaders who will engage our church and our world," said Kemeza.

Registrations being taken for Computer Camp

South Shore Computer Camp will be held the week of July 10 through July 14 at Hingham High School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The camp is co-educational for boys and girls ages 7 to 14. Campers will rotate between interactive technology classes in the computer labs and outside sports activities such as tennis and basketball. Campers receive individualized and small group instruction based on age, skill level, and interests.

Hingham High School guidance counselor Mark Awdycki, and business and technology teacher Steven George, will co-direct the camp. Awdycki, who has held previous leadership positions at specialty camps and in various summer programs, has a background in professional sports, having worked in media and public relations for the Boston Bruins and Boston Red Sox. Prior to teaching, George worked in technology and software development for 10 years.

Classes will be differentiated based on ability, aptitude and interests so campers can learn new skills or reinforce previously learned skills. IN BRIEF

Dog discipline vote postponed

The Board of Selectmen postponed taking a vote on the fate of nine border collies who have attacked and/or bitten four Cohasset residents. The dogs, owned by John and Mia Dean of Meadow Lane, were required to undergo a behavioral analysis to ensure they are safe to be sold to other families, and that report has not yet been submitted.

Dr. Amy Marder of the Animal Rescue League has completed a behavioral evaluation for each of the nine dogs, and will provide a copy of her report to the town next week. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he will look at the report when it is submitted and likely amend the draft order he issued for the dogs, based upon Marder's assessment. The Board of Selectmen will then take Griffin's amended recommendation into consideration and formally vote to impose an order on the dogs at its Monday, April10, meeting.

Currently, all nine dogs are not allowed to leave their owners' property, even if on a leash. They are also not allowed out of the house in their own yard unless restrained. If found in violation, Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy may seize the dogs. The final order for the dogs is expected to include a provision that the owners must construct a kennel on their property, and bring the number of dogs owned down to four.

Street light outages

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said there are still many street lights out around town, and residents may report outages directly to National Grid (formerly Massachusetts Electric). By visiting the company's Web site at www.nationalgrid.com and clicking on Your Account, under the Other Online Services heading, a link can be found to report street lighting outages. Residents fill in the address closest to the pole and the pole number and National Grid will check the light out.

BIG APPLE CIRCUS PUTS HOLLYWOOD UNDER BIG TOP

South Shore students to attend Circus of the Senses

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

There won't be any elephants or lions under the Big Top when the Big Apple Circus opens at Boston's City Hall Plaza this weekend, but there will be plenty of show business glamour in "Grandma Goes to Hollywood," according to one of the stars of the 28th edition of New York's original one-ring circus.

"It's a very rich show. We'll be paying tribute to all kinds of specific movies and film genres," explained Barry "Grandma The Clown" Lubin by telephone recently. "Grandma will be Princess Leia from "Star Wars," a flying Mary Poppins," Dorothy from "The Wizard of Oz" and will join her portrayer in a little gender-bending to play the John Travolta roles in take-offs on both "Saturday Night Fever" and "Grease."

Lubin, a 1974 graduate from the Ringling Bros.and Barnum & Bailey Clown College and who has played "Grandma" on and off since 1982 for Big Apple, is doing more than just clowning around this season. He conceived the show.

"This year, for the first time, the entire show based on my concept. I spoke with Paul Binder, our artistic director, years ago about this Hollywood theme and this time around he gave me the green light. My challenge has been to mine from this year's theme to create the material I will perform myself as Grandma."

Grandma may have her name in the title, but she will be sharing the Big Apple bill with world-renowned acrobats, jugglers, trapeze flyers, aerialists, horse and dogs who perform in their own numbers including "Reins in Spain," "Footloose," and "Your Little Dog, Too." Keeping such interesting company helps Grandma stay spry, gray hair aside.

"I actually believe that Grandma is younger now than when I first played her 31 years ago. She was introverted back then and now she's rambunctious and very lively," says Lubin, who is Director of Clowning for the Big Apple Circus and a recent inductee into the International Clown Hall of Fame.

From Baraboo, Wisconsin, lovably bubbly clowns Greg and Karen DeSanto engage in loony buffoonery in Grandma Goes to Hollywood, the 28th season show of the Big Apple Circus.

On Thursday, April 6 at 11 AM, for the seventh time in the Boston area, hundreds of children with sensory impairments will gather beneath the Big Apple Circus's Big Top tent at City Hall Plaza to experience the magic and joy of the circus at "Circus of the Senses." Guests for this special performance will include students from Randolph High School, the Randolph campus of The Learning Center for Deaf Children, North River Collaborative in Rockland, the South Shore Education Collaboratives in Norwell and Hingham, and the Cardinal Cushing Center in Braintree.

"Circus of the Senses is at the core of the Big Apple Circus's mission to reconnect people with positive emotions. Circus of the Senses makes the wondrous sights and sounds of the ring accessible to a broader audience," according to Big Apple Circus founder and artistic director Paul Binder and co-founder and creative director Michael Christensen.

This free performance is accomplished by providing headsets to children with vision impairments to hear a lively, running description of the action in the ring narrated by Binder and Christensen. Spotlighted American Sign Language interpreters narrate the show to the hearing-impaired. Following the performance, a group of sight-impaired children will be invited into the Circus ring for a "touch session." They will be able to feel the sawdust, touch the fabric of the elegant costumes and meet some of the performers - both the two-legged and the four-legged ones.

The Big Apple Circus's production of "Grandma Goes to Hollywood" will be performed at City Hall Plaza, Government Center, Boston, from April 1 through May 7. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.bigapplecircus.org.

Movie review

This 'Ice' isn't as slick as first

"Ice Age: The Meltdown (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

For the most part, "Ice Age: The Meltdown" is self-fulfillingly soggy. Yet another sequel in search of a reason to exist outside of making a quick buck, the film, a CGI follow up to the 2002 hit, features Ray Romano and Queen Latifah as a pair of a wooly mammoths engaging in prehistoric courtship rituals.

Where is Patricia Heaton when we need her?

The plot reunites Manny, the sweet-natured mammoth, Sid (John Leguizamo) the lisping Don Knotts-like sloth, and Diego (Dennis Leary) the seemingly fearsome, saber-toothed tiger. It involves — LOL — a "real" case of global warming, a disastrous Hurricane Katrina-like flood, an Israelite-style exodus by all living things to higher ground and a search for other mammoths by Manny, who sadly suspects he may be the last of his kind.

As in the original, Manny, Sid and Diego comprise a lovably offbeat "herd" on a series of misadventures. In this film, directed by Carlos Saldanha ("Robots") and written by Peter Gaulke and Gerry Swallow ("Black Knight") and Nickelodeon veteran Jim Hecht, the herd adopts Ellie (Latifah), a mammoth who lamely believes she is a possum, and her zany possum "brothers" Crash (Seann William Scott) and Eddie (Josh Peck).

Romano recycles his "Everybody Loves Raymond" kind-hearted-lug persona with a trunk, four legs, furry coat and curvilinear tusks. He's an amiable, if unexciting screen presence. Leguizamo seems most at home in his CGI pelt and gets the most laughs. Leary brings a funny, anxious streak to the fierce Diego.

Also as in the original, the most amusing antics involve Scrat, a squeaking, speechless squirrel-rat, who only appeared in the previous film's opening teaser. In its expanded role, Scrat is still on a perpetual quest to get its paws on an elusive acorn, and Scrat's suicidal desperation and refusal to give up suggest it shares DNA with a certain Wile E. Coyote.

In amusing scenes derivative of last year's "Madagascar," Sid is kidnapped by tiny sloths who mimic his behavior and enshrine him as their "Fire God." Talking vultures suddenly break into an aerial, Busby Berkeley-esque production number to the tune of "Food Glorious Food" from "Oliver!"

But "Meltdown" appears to take place in a wilderness of plasticene pixels. Just months after moviegoers enjoyed the dazzling, stop-motion animation of "Wallace and Gromit: The Curse of the Were-Rabbit" and "Tim Burton's Corpse Bride," Oscar nominees that made the shortcomings of CGI all too apparent, it's a drag to go back to the "new" technology.

"Ice Age: The Meltdown" is also often unnecessarily crude, mean-spirited and scary. And if that fast-talking armadillo sounds vaguely familiar, it's because it's Jay Leno depriving a real actor of a paycheck. Animals may rule the boxoffice in such films as "Madagascar," "March of the Penguins" and "8 Below." But the animals of "Meltdown" are an inferior breed.

Rated G. "Ice Age: The Meltdown" has scenes that may frighten very young children.

DESTINATIONS

Paradise found in Aruba

By JOE DWINELL

ARUBA -- Paradise is not lost. You can find it snorkeling among a million minnows, resting on a beach of powder-white sand and dining out under the stars.

It's all on this breezy island.

And while it's clear that this Caribbean escape remains clouded by last year's mysterious disappearance of Alabama high school graduate Natalee Holloway, it's also clear on a visit here that that cloud should be swept away.

The people of Aruba, both the native islanders and the Dutch, are gracious, the food amazing, the sea breathtaking and the accommodations first class.

"The Aruban people have taken a bad rap on this case and they don't deserve it," said Ellen Slagh, a Michigan mother working on her tan along with her teenage daughter and a friend outside the Holiday Inn where Holloway stayed.

The girls, dressed in bikinis and enjoying spring break from college, said they were out all night without any worries.

"I feel completely safe," said Nicki Slagh, 18.

"It could happen anywhere," said her friend Emily Ensing, 18, alluding to the Holloway case.

Brothers and sisters, mothers and daughters, newlyweds and retirees all echo the same sentiment. Aruba is as bright as the beaming sun.

The only complaint came from a pack of Providence College men who said the women are too cautious in the wake of the Holloway case.

At Carlos'n Charlie's, the bar where Natalee Holloway was last seen leaving with three men May 30, the drinks are still a foot tall, but the opinions are the same. All lament her disappearance, but the entire island shouldn't be made to suffer, bar patrons said.

The drinking age on the island is 18. And at the bar, music thumped and the drinks flowed through the night. But the whole island is not like that; you had to go looking for those hot spots.

The big lesson from my visit: One sensational story shouldn't dim your view of this island. I walked the beaches for miles and visited the bars late at night and felt safer than I ever have in Boston.

More than 1 million tourists visit Aruba each year, by cruise ship and by air, with a majority from the U.S. (and a good number from Boston). American money is accepted everywhere and all the islanders speak English with ease. You are made to feel welcome.

Located off the coast of Venezuela and about 5 hours away by jet from Boston (from about $400 per person round trip), Aruba is also far south of the traditional path of hurricanes (meaning you can visit year-round). The island remains a constant 82 degrees daytime, on average, with hardly any rain.

There are two golf courses on the island, an amazing 18-hole course and a nine-hole club. Aruba is in the midst of a $230 million investment in tourism and new condos and hotels are being built on the beach.

My wife and I stayed at the Bucuti Beach Resort (www.bucuti.com) in a penthouse suite complete with living room and kitchen, overlooking Eagle Beach. We arrived late, so when we awoke we immediately walked out onto the balcony to behold a view straight out of a dream.

The white sand and palm trees below led to the bluest ocean you've ever seen. The balcony included a day bed and chairs so you can soak in the sun in seclusion. The rooms are designed with an impressive British West Indies motif, with a dark walnut finish from the bed to the doors. A four-night stay for a couple in the winter costs $2,109. The rooms below, which I poked my head into, are less expensive (a low of $1,399 for four nights) yet equally opulent. All packages include daily cold breakfast, a bottle of champagne, a gift basket and a candlelight dinner for two on the beach.

This boutique hotel is flawless from the floor tiles to the spotless beach. No wonder Susan Biemans, who owns the Bucuti resort with her husband, said they have the highest average occupancy on the island.

Yes, the Holloway story came up with Biemans lamenting the loss of "perspective." She said the island is determined to "get justice," but noted you'd be missing out of the best life has to offer at a reasonable price by bypassing Aruba, or her hotel. I had to agree.

One of Aruba's pretty beaches

Aruba snorkeler

Aruba desert

My wife and I walked for miles on the beach and then refreshed with water from the tap. Aruba's water comes from the island's desalinization plant and is ranked the purest in the world, according to the World Health Organization. No bottled water needed for this Caribbean dream.

You could rest on the beach for your entire vacation, but that would be a big mistake. For $39.50 I headed out into the ocean on a catamaran to snorkel -- in view of homes owned by Dolly Parton and Chuck Norris.

The Pelican Adventures trip (www.pelican-aruba.com) includes an open bar, snacks and snorkeling equipment. I jumped right in with more than a dozen fellow tourists and found myself diving under into a stream of a million translucent minnows. They didn't seem to mind a sunburned visitor in baggy blue trunks.

Fish of brilliant blues and yellow stripes joined in as I cut through the warm water. I almost didn't want to come up for air. This trip is worth every penny.

But the best was yet to come.

We jumped back on the catamaran and headed out deeper to the wreck of the German World War II ship the "Antilla." This sunken ghost of war is a hulking 400-foot long amazement. And as one of the deckhands said to me, "This is where the momma and papa fish come."

Was he ever right. As you glide over the hull resting just below the surface, you see large fish slipping in and out of the wreck. I felt like grabbing a grouper for dinner.

You need to be able to swim, at least if you want to tour all sides of this steel beast; the currents can be strong.

I worked up a big appetite and on Aruba, that's a good thing. The restaurants, more than 200 of them, are as delicious as the ocean views.

My favorite was Pinchos Grill and Bar on Surfside Marina. The restaurant, built atop a pier, reaches out into the shallow water and is completely open. The owners told me they only had nine bad-weather days in the past year. This restaurant is also where the rose ceremony in one of "The Bachelor" episodes was held.

It is a romantic setting, with lights gently swaying in the ever-present trade winds. But the food was even better. All the entrees are grilled out in the open at the corner of the bar.

All meals are served with grilled pumpkin bread and a Pinchos Salsa Salad, a healthy and delicious mix of black beans, red kidney beans, pineapple, green pepper, mushrooms, red onions in a balsamic vinegar with a dash of salt and lime juice. The entrees are very affordable at no more than $21.95 (for mango margarita shrimp.) I ordered a grilled skewer of all Pinchos has to offer, from beef to chicken and sausage and shrimp.

The allure of Pinchos, and so many more restaurants on Aruba, is the food is great and the setting even more relaxing. Dining at dusk with a gentle breeze cooling you down makes you want to linger forever.

We dined at other great restaurants, from Rumba, where were sat at a table on the beach and I sampled a Cuban cigar (legal in Aruba but don't try to bring any back through U.S. customs), to the Promenade on the far end of the island where the locals go. We never had a bad meal.

Other island activities include: casinos (I'm thrifty, so they're not my cup of tea); shopping in downtown Oranjestad (I even bought a shirt); renting a Jeep ($90 a day) for touring the island's desert landscape. The local aloe industry is another plus because you'll need protection from the sun.

If you admire pristine beaches, smiling faces, beautiful days and easy nights, Aruba is for you.

I couldn't find a flaw on Aruba, except for the doubt lingering from the unsolved Holloway case.

"We'll bounce back by working hard," vowed Pinchos owner Anabela Peterson de Sousa.

Vote day

Two races in Town Election

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

One fact voters should note — this weekend's election does not include the override.

The polls will be open tomorrow (Saturday, April 8) from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. at Town Hall. Saturday's votes will be tallied solely for candidates seeking elected office. Voters will have to wait until Saturday, May 6 to weigh in on the override.

According to the Town Clerk's office, there are currently 5,099 registered voters in town. Town Clerk Marion Douglas predicted 45 percent of the town's voters would make their opinions known at the ballot box Saturday.

With the town's "Accu-Vote" optical scanning system, it does not take long for the numbers to Town Meeting had a very impressive turnout Saturday — that is, until a vote was taken on the budget. More than 600 residents were in attendance at the start of the meeting, but that number dropped to about 100 when those who came to support the override cast their votes, and then made their way toward the nearest exit.

During the morning session some voters stood rocking their babies, some had children reading books in the chairs next to them, others took advantage of the babysitting service offered. The majority of parents who packed Town Meeting came with the same purpose: to ensure the proper funding for the schools, so that every child in Cohasset could receive a quality education.

When the resounding voice vote approving the budget was finally taken after 2-1/2 hours of discussion, there was suddenly a line at the door.

However, the mass exit of voters followed a contentious morning where those on both sides of

Rare whale to help research

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A very rare beaked whale caused a stir on Sandy Beach when it came ashore Monday evening. The animal could not be saved and was transported to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute for further study late Tuesday morning.

New England Aquarium Biologist and Cohasset resident Sheila Sinclaire, along with fellow biologist Sarah Bean, spent most of the night with the whale and were still busy taking measurements and collecting data early Tuesday. They also took the time to help educate those in the small crowd which had gathered about the whale and where it might have come from.

"The Town of Cohasset has been amazing, between its highway department and its animal control officer."

— Tony LaCasse, Aquarium spokesman

Parents with small children as well as high school teacher Jack Buckley and his outdoor education class were at the beach early Tuesday. High school student Ben Libby assisted the biologists with field measurements. Many curious residents also stopped by to take a look as members of the Department of Public Works began moving the whale off the beach.

The whale was first wrapped in a blanket and rolled onto a large sling with the help of a front-end loader. It was then picked up by attaching the straps of the sling onto a large hook on the front of the machine. The machine carried

Pick up papers and the trash

Cohasset residents will be breaking out their work gloves Saturday (April 8), for the first annual Town-Wide Trash Pickup, in honor of Earth Day, which is later in the month.

At 2:30 p.m., volunteers will meet near Town Hall on the Common, and will be split up into groups to clean selected portions of the town. Areas include Black Rock Beach, the Beechwood Ball Field, Government Island, Jerusalem Road, and Main Street.

Windy Hill Road resident Bill Burnett is the driving force behind the effort. He said as a jogger, "It is so frustrating to see trash on the beach and on the side of the roads," and he decided to take action. Burnett placed a call to Town Manager Bill Griffin asking where he should begin, and was put in touch with Tara Tradd at the Board of Health. The department immediately got on board.

In addition, Burnett got in touch with local Girl Scout Troop leader Alison Callahan who has rallied her girls to help in the effort. Burnett said there are between 30 and 40 Girl Scouts who have signed up to help clean Saturday, as well as roughly 20 high school students. Burnett said he has gathered roughly 75 people on his own, and he is sure together, they can all help make Cohasset look much more clean.

Burnett said the more volunteers the better and residents of all ages are welcome to help out. He said families with children will be assigned to the more pub-

Selectmen change meeting schedule

Selectman Gary Vanderweil had suggested moving Selectmen's meetings to Mondays, as they used to be, and the board has agreed to one for now. The board's next meeting will be Monday, April 10 at 7 p.m. The board is going to wait until the new member comes on board after the April 8 election before it changes meetings to Mondays permanently. But, due to the fact that the meeting, if held on Tuesday, would have been on Opening Day for the Red Sox, the board agreed to switch to Monday. The board is expected to vote on the permanent change during that meeting.

Trouble could be brewing for Cook Estate project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There may be no end in sight to the Cook Estate saga. While developers from Weathervane Construction Corporation were slated to enter into a Land Disposition Agreement with the town Friday, March 31, the paperwork was not signed.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who has been working on negotiations with the developers, said the town has been granted a two-week extension from the trustees of the Cook Property. While Dormitzer could not provide much detail due to the fact that the town is in negotiations, he said legitimate risks associated with the development of the property have been raised, and "We are using this period to retire one of the major risks in doing this job."

The Cook Estate, located on Sohier Street, is a roughly 19-acre parcel of land, that was owned by the late Jane Bancroft Cook. The town has been working with the heirs of her estate since 2003 to build senior housing on the site. The project was put out to bid, then wastewater issues forced a reduction in scope of the project. A second Request for Proposals was sent out for the smaller project, and subsequent developers pulled out due to tight permitting deadlines. Weathervane Construction Corporation is the latest, and hopefully the last, developer to submit a bid for the project.

The Board of Selectmen accepted the Weymouth-based company's $4.9 million proposal to build Cape-style condominiums for those 55 and older at the end of February. The town set a minimum bid for this round of $4.9 million, $4.5 of which will cover the purchase price of the site from the Cook heirs. The balance will cover the town's costs.

Weathervane is currently constructing a 150-home adult-active community, dubbed the Village at Weathervane, one-half mile from Columbian Square on 170 acres in South Weymouth. In addition, it is developing an eight-lot subdivision in Hingham on Stevens Way, located off of Fresh River Avenue. Weathervane at Chestnut Gardens in Hingham received Planning Board approval under the flexible residential development (FRD) bylaw in February. The Cohasset project would be called "Weathervane at Deer Hill."

VOTE! On APRIL 8 JOIN US IN ELECTING ROGER HILL to the BOARD OF SELECTMAN

I would greatly appreciate your support and vote for the one open seat on the Board of Selectman April 8.

The Cohasset we all love is increasingly polarized around issues of taxes, growth, the environment, and preservation of our Town character. Yet I also remember times past when it seemed the pressing questions of the day would overwhelm all of us. We overcame those challenges to enjoy the community we have today, and I know that we can continue to improve our town and our schools, to ensure that Cohasset remains the shining star of the South Shore.

We survived past battles over issues like school construction and sewer policy, I believe because of our open form of government and mutual respect for all citizens. As Selectman, my most important job will be to make sure that every citizen, every department, and every neighborhood has a place at the table, and a role in the decision making guiding Cohasset.

The Hill Family: Roger, Joanne and Quentin

Now is a great time to explore new ideas, and implementing these within Town Hall requires an understanding of town operations.

I bring to the Board of Selectman both an open mind and the experience of many years of involvement with the Town.

I am running for Selectman to ensure my son and his generation have the opportunities I enjoyed growing up in Cohasset.

Whether you've been here a year or a lifetime, you know that Cohasset is a unique and special place.

As Selectman I will bring experience and dedication to ensure the town we all love is here for us, and our children for years to come.

My priorities in working with my colleagues on the Board of Selectmen are:

- Work with the School Committee to determine how we implement the new Strategic Plan for the Schools over its 5-year planning cycle. The responsibility of Selectmen and the Town Manager is to determine what can be funded, and to plan where some level of overrides will be necessary to sustain improvement in our schools.
- Support the efforts of the Planning Board and Economic Development Committee to prudently expand taxable commercial development opportunities so we can find some level of tax relief for those of us who are homeowners, while maintaining quality school and town services.
- Work to implement the vision of Cohasset as seen in the Master Plan,a community that preserves our local character while providing for affordable housing, security for our seniors, and the best services possible.
- Prioritize any new capital spending to ratchet down the heavy debt load we as taxpayers now bear.

www.rogerqhill.com

Over the last three years on the Advisory Committee, the Town's central fiscal oversight and planning body, I have gained a unique perspective working with each department head to help build our school and town budgets from the bottom up. I have participated in the evaluation of every proposed policy and zoning change introduced during this time, and I have gained the detailed understanding of our schools and town services needed by each Selectman, given the immense fiscal challenges we now face.

New housing consultant hired

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Affordable housing is one of the hottest topics on the town's radar screen. To that end, the town has hired a housing consultant, who can take the lead in forming a plan to help fill Cohasset's needs into the future.

Judy Barrett of Community Opportunities Group, Inc., came before the Board of Selectmen March 28 to get acquainted and become familiar with the vision selectmen see for the town, in terms of affordable housing. Barrett will serve on the Cohasset Housing Partnership and help finalize the town's draft Affordable Housing Plan.

Barrett has a long history of working on affordable housing developments. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he has known her for 20-plus years, and the two worked together when Griffin was the Town Manager in Plymouth. Barrett said currently, she is working in a number of different towns, and half of her practice deals with affordable housing.

Barrett said the community must look at meeting affordable housing guidelines as more than just meeting 40B requirements. She said there is a great need for housing which falls into the mid-income range. "This is true in a lot of affluent communities," she said, as those who have homes which have high assessments make it difficult to qualify for many affordable units.

Barrett also said because there is limited land in town, creative solutions must be found. She said many other communities have chosen to redevelop property. "Some large older homes create opportunities for conversion where you've already got development," she said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said while conversion sounds like a good solution in theory, adding that many residents to a neighborhood can change its character. "It's a catch-22," he said.

Barrett agreed, but added when it comes to creating affordable housing, "It's all about trade-offs."

Now that Barrett is on board, the town can appoint a Housing Partnership, which will be made up of residents and will be responsible for providing perspectives on creating affordable housing. The partnership will be guided by the rules and regulations of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership, which can provide financial assistance, training sessions and resource materials.

Barrett will also be working with Town Planner Liz Harrington. Harrington said there is definitely a lack of public education about affordable housing, and she looks forward to being able to start that dialogue. "Affordable housing needs to have a bright light shone on it," Harrington said. "I'm really looking forward to working with Judy and creating a community vision of what Cohasset wants for affordable housing."

Cohasset had previously appointed Bob Engler to serve as its housing consultant. However, due to Engler's working with Leggat McCall Properties, which is building the Cedarmere senior housing development, Town Counsel advised there could be a conflict of interest. A new Request for Proposals was sent out, and Barrett's company responded.

The town is still looking for candidates interested in serving on the housing partnership. Those who would like to serve should contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or send a letter of interest to the board at Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

be tallied and usually a crowd gathers inside the auditorium by 6:15p.m. to see who won and who lost. This will be the first election for which new Town Moderator Dan Evans will be on hand to read the results.

Residents can tune into Comcast Channel 10 starting at 6 p.m. Saturday for live coverage. Pat Martin, co-host of Our Town, will provide the "play by play coverage" as the results come in. She will also be talking to the candidates and their supporters.

There will be four names on the ballot for the two three-year openings on the School Committee, but only three candidates are running. Barbara Buckley withdrew from the race after the ballots had been sent off to be printed, and will therefore be shown as a candidate, but is not seeking a term in office. Incumbent Rick Flynn of Summer Street will try to keep his seat, while Steven Fusco, 4 Surry Drive, and Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, will also fight for spots on the board.

There is also a two-way race for one three-year seat on the Board of Selectmen. Incumbent Michael Sullivan is not running for re-election, and Edwin G. "Ted" Carr of 88 S. Main St., and Roger Q. Hill of 19A Highland Avenue are competing to fill his seat.

Many seats in this year's election will be uncontested. Incumbent Peter Pratt is the only candidate for the open five-year seat on the Planning Board. Sewer Commissioner John Beck is running uncontested to retain his seat, as is Lisa LoJacono for the Recreation Commission. Peggy Chapman of the Board of Health, Water Commissioner John McNabb, and Assessor Michael C. Patrolia are all running uncontested as well.

There are three candidates for the three open seats on the Board of Library Trustees, and incumbents Patience Towle and Agnes McCann are seeking re-election with Elizabeth Baker campaigning for the third seat.

Susan Sardina, 271 S. Main St., is the only candidates for the one open five-year seat on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

lic areas, such as the ballpark or Government Island to ensure children are not near the street. Adults will be responsible for any trash pickup on the sides of the roads.

Volunteers are asked to bring their own work gloves, but Burnett said the town has been wonderfully cooperative and has provided all the bags for trash collection. The town will also pick up all the bags and bring them to the Recycle Transfer Facility at the end of the day.

While the rain date for the event has been set for April 29, at the time the Mariner went to press, the forecast looked OK. "I think we dodged a bullet," said Burnett. However, he said if the weather does not cooperate, the trash pick-up will be rescheduled.

The more volunteers who participate in the Town-Wide Trash Pickup the better, and anyone who would like to participate can show up Saturday at 2:30 p.m. on the Common. For more information, please call Alison Callahan at (781) 383-1081 or Bill Burnett at (781) 383-3499.

Override vote causes mass confusion

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Voters at the April 1 Town Meeting adopted the budget by a majority. However, some were, and still are confused as to why there was only one vote taken when there are three budget scenarios, and about what happens next.

Town Manager Bill Griffin explained before a vote was taken, that there would be one motion made on the budget. The motion included all three budget options — a budget which did not require an override, a budget which required a $725,000 override, and a budget which required a $1.495 million override. With one all-inclusive motion covering the three scenarios, only one vote was necessary.

Any voter could have made a motion to amend the budget motion and separate it into three parts — one motion for each budget. If that had happened, residents would have voted on each dollar amount separately.

Just after the vote, the Sullivan Gymnasium was full of confusion. Between the throng of parents which had gathered at the back of the room, forming a line to exit, and the residents who didn't understand the vote which had just taken place, the scene was borderline chaotic.

Town Manager Bill Griffin explains the levels of funding which would be allocated to various departments with a budget that does not require an override, during discussion on Article 3 at Saturday's Annual Town Meeting.

Bill White, 162 Sohier St., came to the podium to ask for a clarification on what the meeting had voted on. His voice was barely audible over the noise of the exiting crowd, which paused at the back of the room when the idea was floated to take a re-vote. White, along with many other residents, thought they would be given the chance to vote three times, not once. White made a motion to reconsider the vote, which temporarily put the issue back on the table, but the large crowd standing at the back of the room let out a resounding "No" and the motion was defeated.

The budget carried, but that does not mean the town will definitely pass an override this year. Essentially, the vote which took place last week only pushes the override process to phase two. Overrides must be voted on twice before they pass — once at Town Meeting and once at a Special Election. Cohasset will hold its Special Election May 6 and residents will vote on the override then. Voters will not vote on the override during this Saturday's Town Election.

Override votes are not the same as election votes. An override automatically passes if it receives more yes votes than no votes, which means essentially, a figure is competing with itself for votes. It is possible for both override figures to pass, but only one can take effect. In the end, if the larger override figure receives more yes votes than no votes, meaning it passes by a majority, it automatically takes effect, regardless of what happens with the lower override figure. When a larger override figure receives a majority of yes votes, it always prevails. Receiving more no votes than yes votes is the only way an override can fail.

Override questions answered

• The budget was adopted by Town Meeting when a majority of voters said "yes" to approving one motion which included all three budget scenarios. Residents would have voted three times only if a voter had made a motion to amend the motion and split the question into three separate parts.

• Passing the budget at Town Meeting does not mean the town will ultimately pass an override. It means voters have been given the opportunity to vote on the override at the Special Election, to be held May 6. Overrides must be voted on at both Town Meeting and at the ballot box.

• The Saturday, April 8 election will not ask voters to cast any votes for or against the override. Only votes for elected office will be cast. The override will be voted on Saturday, May 6.

•When residents vote on the override May 6, they will either vote yes or no for the $725,000 figure, or yes or no for the $1.495 million figure. Voters may also wish to not cast a vote on one figure or another. Both override figures could fail, both override figures could pass, or only one figure could pass. To pass, a figure only needs a majority of yes votes. If both figures receive a majority of yes votes, the larger figure automatically prevails.

I have a seventh grade daughter and a first grade son in our schools, and have served as chairman of the school technology committee. As a result, I have first hand knowledge of both the strengths and weaknesses of the Cohasset school system. I believe my leadership experience combined with my ability to work in a positive cooperative way can make our schools the best they can be. We must fund our schools so that our students have the necessary resources, yet we must continually be fiscally responsible and leverage technology to reduce future costs.

It is with dedication and commitment that I ask for one of your votes tomorrow. Thank you for your consideration and support.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

VOTE SATURDAY!

Hello Cohasset, how are you all doing? I hope that tomorrow's election is fresh in your mind, no matter what your vote or opinion is. I know that it is a bit heated around town and just encourage everyone to keep remembering about how important everyone's opinion is whether or not it is the same as yours. Come Sunday morning, we all need to go on and live together in town regardless of how the vote turns out. So get out and vote, share your opinions if you like and make sure to keep an open mind.

I also had a request from a very concerned parent who wants to remind us all the importance of safety when dropping off or picking up your child from the schools. She observed a near-miss on Monday at the Middle/High School and asked that I put this in the column.

TENNIS ANYONE?

Good weather is fast approaching, time to get in shape for the 17th Annual Tennis Tournament to benefit Children's Hospital. This event is happening on July 22nd and 23rd. As you may or may not be aware, each year the group targets a specific area within Children's Hospital to fund raise for.

In the past seven years the event has given between $15,000-23,000 to some of the neediest areas thanks to your generosity. They have included cardiology, autism, oncology, neonatal brain injury, kidney research and this year proceeds will be donated to the pediatric AIDS program. Many players ask why Children's Hospital? In short, the tradition began here in Cohasset in the 1950's with the inception of the tournament. Founder, Jesse Cox and her neighbors organized the tournament for Children's. This group not only strives to continue the tradition, all the committee members have had personal experience with Children's Hospital with their families.

We are all fortunate to have this world renowned hospital in our backyard! On to the fun while fundraising!!! Please note that they will not be mailing out registration forms. They will email the registration to those who gave their addresses last year. Forms will also be available at the Cohasset Tennis Club, Scituate Racquet and Fitness, Weymouth Club, Cohasset Golf Club and South Shore Community Center. (due to the cost of postage/printing.) There are 20 beautiful courts that are graciously made available to the tournament, this year you or your company can be recognized as a patron of this longstanding event by sponsoring a court! There are two levels of sponsorship: 1. Individual/Family Sponsorship for $200. 2. Corporate Sponsorship.

TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT!

The first-ever Cohasset Family Feud takes place tonight (Friday, April 7) at 7p.m. in the Cohasset High auditorium. The event is sponsored by the Post Prom Committee. All tickets will be sold at the door and cost $5. Game show host Rich Ofsthun will emcee the show. An extraordinary array of teams are competing for prizes and bragging rights to a first place finish. Some of the teams include members from ASP, a group of seniors, the Froio Family, Martin Family, Whelan Cousins and the Ofsthun Clan to name just a few. So come on down and join in on the fun.

PIANO STUDENT

NEW CENTENARIAN

Priscilla Daniels, long-time resident and teacher of piano in Cohasset wishes her dad a Happy 100th Birthday

Howard J. Caswell of Swampscott, born in Middleboro n 1906, was 100 years old on March 22, 2006. He graduated from Middleboro High School in 1924.

He attended the General Electric School of Engineering in Lynn, graduating in 1927.

Mr. Caswell worked as a designer in the Motor Department (and other departments) of G.E., and later worked in the Jet Engine Department designing engines during World War II before retiring after 45 years at G.E.

He has a daughter, Priscilla D. Daniels and a son, Howard J. Caswell, Jr., of Franklin, N.H., six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

A favorite hobby has been his collection of Lionel Electric Trains and American Flyer Electric Trains, which he repairs for himself and other people and displays them in his basement.

Mr. Caswell has a passion for music; has played violin, clarinet, saxophone, piano and ukulele; and still plays the organ in his home for family and friends. He played in local dance bands for 35 years (1930-1965). Occasionally, his teen-age daughter sang with the bands.

His mind is sharp: He enjoys listening to music tapes, watches baseball games and other sports events on TV, manages his own home with his 95 year old wife, Thelma, still drives his car, does all the shopping and banking, household repairs, prepares his income taxes every year, and reads everyday.

On Saturday, March 25, Mr. Caswell celebrated his 100th birthday with his whole family at Anthony's Hawthorne By the Sea (Pier 44) in Swapscott.

A grandson Scott Daniels of Hull, gave an informative talk about historical events that occurred during his grandfather's lifetime. Kim Blakeslee of Norwell described each page while presenting her grandfather with a beautiful scrapbook of events and family pictures; her husband Jim, added more stories and a few jokes. Great-grandson Myles Blakeslee, modeled a Red Sox jacket number 100 - a gift from all the great-grandchildren.

There were good wishes more gifts and an enormous chocolate birthday cake.

Everyone agreed, "There's not much Grampy can't do. He's amazing."

Happy 100th, Howard J. Caswell!

Rare beaked whale comes ashore on SandyBeach

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Kenny Thayer of the Cohasset DPW directs his co-worker Leo Ekbon, in front loader, through the erosion fence on Sandy Beach and out into the parking lot, while NE Aquarium biologist and Cohasset resident Sheila Sinclaire observes. The Highway Department division of the DPW had a flatbed truck waiting, ready to transport the whale down to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute for a necropsy.

Max Lieberman, communications assistant from the New England Aquarium, squats down to photograph a beaked whale which was lifted off Sandy Beach by a front loader Tuesday. The whale beached itself Monday evening and biologists from the Aquarium made the decision to euthanize the animal that night. The whale was transported to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute Tuesday where a necropsy (autopsy for an animal) was scheduled.

Kenny Thayer of the Highway Department personally drove the whale down to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute where biologists were scheduled to begin an autopsy upon its arrival

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said he was called about the distressed whale around 6 p.m. Monday. The whale came in with the tide, and remained on shore when the tide went out.

The whale, a male, was roughly 13-1/2 feet long and weighed approximately 1,500 pounds. Murphy said when he arrived, "I heard a horrendous thumping," even before he saw the whale. He said the animal was in his "death throes" and was slamming his fin hard and steadily on the sand.

Soon after, members of the New England Aquarium's Marine Rescue Division arrived. Due to the whale's condition, they made the tough decision to euthanize the animal. To ensure the whale did not float back out with the tide, DPW employees were called in to help bring it up onto higher ground.

"Beaked whales are very social and travel in pods, or large familial groups. They cannot forage for food themselves, and there is usually a reason when one falls away from the pack"

— Tony LaCasse
Aquarium spokesman

"They've been great," Murphy said of the DPW workers, who worked late into the night and returned again in the morning for the whale's final transport. Biologists said it was extremely helpful the town was able to find a way to move the animal in one piece.

Aquarium spokesman Tony LaCasse also praised the DPW. He said typically, when a town finds a beached animal on its shores, it does not realize it has an obligation to remove the animal. "The Town of Cohasset has been amazing, between its highway department and its animal control officer," he said, adding "They are well coordinated and know what to do." LaCasse said typically it does not take long for satellite trucks from news stations to arrive when word gets out about a beached animal, but with Cohasset's quick response, the whale was almost on the road before many news media organizations were able to arrive.

Although sad, the event was also exciting for the scientists, LaCasse said due to the fact that beaked whales are deep sea creatures, they are very difficult for humans to research. He said they typically live at least 50 to 100 miles from shore in the mid-Atlantic Ocean and feed on deep sea fish and squid. In normal circumstances, they are not found in shallow water, which makes beached whales virtually the only tool for study.

LaCasse said beaked whales are very social and travel in pods, or large familial groups. They cannot forage for food themselves, and there is usually a reason when one falls away from the pack. If the whale had not been euthanized, it would likely have died after a day or two, he said. "We sometimes don't even try to rehabilitate an animal unless there is at least one other," as those who live in pods tend to die from loneliness when separated.

From a scientific perspective, LaCasse said the whale is very valuable. When deep sea whales wash up on shore, they have usually been deceased for at least one week. "This is so fresh," he said, that pathology reports will likely come back with some very telling information about the creature. "Every single bit of information is vitally important," said Bean.

Sinclaire said biologists at WHOI would conduct a necropsy (an autopsy for animals) to help determine the cause of death. Likely causes are a bacterial or viral infection, or potentially parasites. She said biologists would likely remove the whale's head and perform a CT scan to study the brain. The teeth would also be studied to help determine which species of beaked whale it is.

Fishing lecture at Historical Society

Susan Playfair, author of "Vanishing Species, Saving the Fish, Sacrificing the Fisherman" (University Press of New England), will give a talk at the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street, on Wednesday, April 19, at 7:30 p.m.

Vanishing Species chronicles the fate of ground-fishing in New England waters since the Sustainable Fisheries Act (SFA) of 1996. At risk are not only the fresh fish (cod, haddock, flounder and 11 other species) we take for granted, but the fishermen and their communities.

Playfair will draw on her extensive interviews with fishermen, fish dealers, politicians, restaurant managers, and environmentalists, contrasting the struggles to support sustainable fishing today with Cohasset's and other coastal towns' rich fishing heritage.

For more information, please contact the Cohasset Historical Society at (781) 383-1434.

Transit Oriented District OK'ed near new train station

Other zoning articles sail through

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It was a tale of two Town Meetings.

The morning session with its packed crowd of 641 registered voters was full of drama and emotion as attendees passed the budget and two supplemental budgets setting the stage for a historic override vote.

But the crowd for the afternoon session that got under way after the lunch break at about 2 p.m. had dwindled to a paltry 102, with even less hanging in there until last article of the day was presented.

However, with that being said – the afternoon session dealt with several weighty issues that could have a profound effect on Cohasset.

At the northern gateway to town, Cohasset could soon see a Transit Oriented Development, dubbed "TOD," which allows a high-density, mixed-used project on about 12 buildable acres around the Greenbush train station.

The zoning article, which easily won the necessary two-thirds vote to pass, sets the groundwork for a pedestrian- and commuter-friendly "center" that is in line with the state "Smart Growth" initiatives that discourages sprawl. The TOD also has the potential added benefit of having a positive effect on the town's tax base. Any development of the site through the TOD would go through the site plan review process that includes obtaining a special permit from the Planning Board.

The Economic Development Committee, whose principal goal is to create new commercial tax revenue, proposed the zoning change.

"The town will be well served by this development," EDC chairman Peter Brown told voters Saturday. He explained the timing of the zoning change is critical so any development could coincide with the MBTA construction of the train station itself.

Brown estimated when the TOD is fully developed it could bring in an additional $80,000 in annual tax revenue.

Some speakers expressed concern about the effect of the TOD on Cohasset Village, but Brown said one of the recommendations the EDC made to selectmen was to take a look at the business and residential environment in the village and to do everything they could to enhance that. He added the retailers in the downtown area have a different demographic focus than those along Route 3A.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt explained the development would be mixed-use, including a residential component of an estimated 16 one- and two-bedroom units, 10 percent of which would be affordable by state standards. The developer would also be required to provide a fiscal impact study, he said in response to the possibility of the units housing schoolchildren.

Jim Hamilton of King Street expressed concern about increased development of the area because of the poor site line along 3A as it curves to the right near Hingham Lumber.

But Planning Board member Mike Westcott said the MBTA would be widening 3A in the station area and has also committed to a traffic light at the station.

Off-street parking

Another "3A" zoning change that easily won the two-thirds majority will decrease the amount of parking required for commercial sites along the state highway. The EDC also proposed this article with an eye to generating more commercial tax revenue by encouraging more development.

Planning Board member Westcott asked voters when was the last time they'd seen the parking lot at Stop & Shop full. He explained Cohasset's parking requirement of 10 spaces per 1,000 square feet of building is twice that of any other town in the state. The zoning change would reduce that by half.

Westcott also pointed out that 3A is rated an "F" by the state in terms of traffic and that the Planning Board would be working on that issue with efforts that include properly synchronizing the stop lights along the highway.

He said the parking change could provide upwards of $200,000 in additional tax revenue "without meaningful change to the town's character."

Pratt also pointed out that whatever development is proposed along 3A would still have to come before the Planning Board for site plan review.

The Sullivan Gymnasium had a distinctly empty feel after the budget article passed. About 100 voters (down from 641) returned after lunch. [This photo was taken before the lunch break and shortly after Article 3 won approval.]

"The town will be well served by this development."
— Peter Brown, Economic Development Committee

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore warned, however, the zoning change was not as good as it appeared. He explained the board has in the past used the parking requirement as leverage to get the developer to provide more green space. He also said the bylaw would not be creating any more green space but would instead be opening the door to more development. "You'll be getting more buildings and less parking," he said.

But Tom Callahan of Hillside Drive won applause when he responded by saying building space is taxable and the parking lot is not.

Brown of the EDC said the reduction in parking and accompanying development shouldn't lead to "unintended consequences" but rather, it was incumbent on the town to take advantage of the potential to create more revenue.

Chuck Hurd of Jerusalem Road Drive asked for voters to give the article unanimous consent, noting the town needed to add to its tax base.

The afternoon session also tackled:

- Requiring multi-family developments of five or more units or apartment complexes to provide affordable units as part of the overall project. This bylaw would help the town to comply with 40B, the state affordable housing law, which requires municipalities to have at least 10 percent of its housing stock deemed affordable by state standards. Proponents said once the town meets the 10 percent benchmark, the inclusionary bylaw would keep the town from sliding back under the 10 percent.

Planning Board member Bob Sturdy argued the bylaw would not answer the real housing issue in Cohasset, which is moderately priced housing – the kind that is provided through cluster zoning developments like Pond Street and Wheelwright Park. He said by requiring developers to provide affordable units, the price of the remaining units is driven up. "You don't get something for nothing," he said. "This pushes the market rate upward and increases the gap (between the high end and moderate priced housing). But Tom Callahan of Hillside Drive described the article as a "no-brainer" pointing out that other towns have adopted inclusionary bylaws. "It's foolish to step back under compliance," he said about the 10 percent requirement under 40B rules.

- Reduced the amount of interest from 8 percent to 4 percent on deferred property taxes for senior citizens who meet income requirements. Sam Wakeman of the Advisory Committee said, "anything that can be done to help senior citizens afford to live in this town is a positive move." Town Meeting also voted to allow Assessors to increase real estate tax exemptions to qualifying homeowners. Merle Brown of the Advisory Committee said, "It is important to help those in town who are struggling to pay their taxes."
- Voted to pay $5,671.12 to reimburse the owner of Olympic Citgo in the village for half the expenses he incurred for legal, engineering and appraisal services associated with negotiations with the town over the part of James Lane he owned that runs between the Red Lion Inn and the gas station. Two years ago Town Meeting approved allocating $64,200 to pay for a strip of land that belonged to the Citgo station and was paved over as part of the travel way. Selectman Michael Sullivan said the Citgo owner claimed the town had made a commitment early on to incorporate expenses into the payment. He said selectmen felt it was appropriate to split that cost. The matter passed by the needed majority vote of 64-32. Jim Hamilton of King Street noted the "verbal" agreement over the expenses was one of the legacies left by the former Town Manager (Mark Haddad).

• Voted to "sunset" the Senior Multi-Family Residential Overlay District (SMROD) by removing it from the zoning bylaw with one exemption, the town-sponsored Cook Estate.

• Approved two Water Commission articles that will allow the Water Commission to continue to acquire land to protect the watershed and to allow the selectmen to grant additional easement width to National Grid for power lines that cross land acquired in the Brass Kettle Brook conservation area.

• OK'ed allowing the Board of Health to enter into an intermunicipal, mutual aid agreement with other towns for a period of 25 years or less.

• Approved a solicitation bylaw requiring commercial door-to-door solicitors to register with the police department, which would conduct a background check on the individual(s).

"Cohasset Woman Loses 14.9 lbs. of Body-fat In Record Time Without Dieting, Drugs or Surgery!"

Cohasset resident Patricia Sheerin reports record loss of body-fat without dieting (in fact she's eating more now), drugs or surgery. This writer was so intrigued by Patricia's story that a further investigation became necessary.

Patricia Sheerin
After
Amazing Transformation

Cohasset residents are clamoring to know how she did it. Patricia reports the "secret" is the accountability, coaching and comprehensive system provided by her Fitness Together personal trainer. "At age 46, I have never felt better," says Sheerin. "The focused, personalized program designed specifically for me by my FT trainer has really been the answer to achieving my weight loss, fitness and appearance goals."

Following this personalized program, Patricia reports not only losing 14.9 lbs of fat in 9 weeks (reducing her body-fat by 10.5%), but also increasing her strength without adding any bulky muscle – in fact she's leaner and tighter than ever before, dropping two full dress sizes. Her energy and stamina have doubled and she is getting more attention and "looks" than she has in years – dramatically boosting her self image and self confidence.

When pressed for specific details on Patricia's "secret," she revealed there is an official guide available with powerful tips and strategies for men and women interested in achieving the level of success she has - just in time for the summer and bathing suit season.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Take a bow, 100

Those who stayed at Saturday's Town Meeting to the end are not happy with the throngs of voters, mostly parents, who decided they had better things to do and left once the budget article passed.

However, with that being said, there were a handful of young parents who did stay through to the TOD article that was taken up in the afternoon session and should help increase commercial tax revenue in town.

Mass exits after voting school issues is nothing new. As long as we have been covering Cohasset that has always been the case and it is unlikely to change. We will not make excuses for those who choose to leave after their issue is tackled but we are fairly sure it had a lot to do with the fine weather, youth sports and other family commitments.

But the fact remains the "real" Town Meeting crowd numbered around 100 – and they are the same 100 with a few exceptions who attend every Town Meeting and vote on every issue.

These are the real heroes; these are the people that think even the most mundane zoning article deserves their attention.

Open Town Meeting is Cohasset's legislative body. Other, mostly larger towns, have opted for representative Town Meeting meaning that townspeople elect a representative to speak for them at Town Meeting. Braintree had that form of government and this week has gone a step further, deciding on a mayor and city council, doing away with Town Meeting and the Board of Selectmen.

We think Cohasset is a long way from taking that step. Cohasset is a fraction of the size of Braintree and Weymouth, which changed to the mayoral form of government a few years back.

But, nevertheless, Open Town Meeting is fragile and could disappear even in Cohasset if fewer and fewer diehards show up every year and stick it out until all the articles are voted.

We want to applaud the 100 governmental groupies who stayed through thick and thin on Saturday. We think they made good decisions including passing the innovative Transit Oriented District zoning article which could transform the northern "gateway" to Cohasset and help increase commercial tax revenue.

But when Town Meeting rolls around again, could you bring a neighbor or a friend? Maybe a young person who just reached voting age could be convinced to tag along?

In the meantime, the 100 – and we know who you are – should pat themselves on the back. Throughout history, it has always been the dedicated few who have made all the difference and we count you among them. Cohasset owes you a debt of gratitude.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bring articles up in random order

TO THE EDITOR:

Seeing as Cohasset has been the set for movies (Witches of Eastwick, & Housesitter), as well as the backdrop for various advertisements, someone attending Town Meeting last Saturday may well have thought they were witnessing a re-make of Exodus. As soon as Article 3 passed, there was a mass evacuation of people. It was a fairly shameful exhibit, in my opinion. Packing Town Meeting has become an art form it seems. We hear from people who are pro-override about how important it is to preserve the "character" of Cohasset, yet it seems that it's not important enough to give up a day to attend to Town business.

Articles 4, 8, 11, & 12 - 20 were all articles that will impact the quality of life here in Cohasset, yet there was barely a quorum in attendance for them.

I would like to see the articles in Town Meeting to not be pre-assigned, but brought up in a random order. I believe there was a meeting where there was a lottery to determine which article was to be discussed. We should explore that system for future Town Meetings. If you are truly interested in an article you would have to attend the meeting, or at least watch it on the local cable channel. I know people will still come in for the articles that interest them, but maybe it may cause some people to block off the day and attend.

Every year you see pretty much the same crowd come to, and stay for the entire meeting.

Preserving the character of Cohasset is something we all are interested in. It's not asking a lot to give up a day to do your part.

Town Meeting babysitting service praised

TO THE EDITOR:

We, along with many parents in Cohasset, wish to thank the volunteers who provided care for our children during Town Meeting on April 1. Students and staff came together under the organization of teacher David Ames at the High School. Carriage House Nursery School Director Georgiana Gladdys generously opened their doors to its regular families. Thanks, also, to the countless babysitters who gave their time to allow parents to attend Town Meeting.

With our preschooler at Carriage House and our eight-year-old at the High School last Saturday, we state with confidence that both organizations did an outstanding job providing a fun and safe environment at no cost for our children. We encourage more families to consider using these services, and also hope that other local childcare providers will consider opening their doors to the children of Cohasset during future Town Meetings.

While no childcare plans are necessary on April 8 or on May 6, your VOTE is critical. Completing the ballot takes only minutes and parents can "take turns" at Town Hall. It is your right and your responsibility to gather the information needed and to voice your opinions. Please VOTE on April 8 (elections) and VOTE AGAIN on May 6 (budget override) to voice your support for Cohasset.

NOTE: The registration deadline to vote on May 6 is Friday, April 14. Forms are available at Town Hall.

Appalled by term

TO THE EDITOR:

I applaud the choice by the five male members of the Cohasset Harbor Committee of Lorren Gibbons to be responsible for all boating activities on Cohasset Harbor.

I am appalled that the female reporter and female editor allowed the term Harbor "Master" to be used several times in the article announcing Lorren's appointment. Shame on them!

'Disappointed' in response from School Committee

TO THE EDITOR:

Two weeks ago, the Cohasset Mariner published a commentary from me about the disappointing scores our students are achieving on the MCAS tests. The results have been particularly weak in our Science department and fourth grade. The Mathematics scores were also below our peer groups. Last year our students showed poor results relative to benchmark towns in five of the ten tests. Our students are not being well prepared for the challenges of the 21st century.

Last week, the School Committee responded to my commentary with a lengthy laundry list of spending proposals. I was disappointed that the response did not directly address the deficiencies I had noted. Such spending proposals as health educators, custodians and an athletic trainer as well as contractual obligations, while possibly worthwhile for the school system, do not address serious academic shortcomings. Book replacement may be necessary from an esthetic standpoint (I believe that students should not have to work with dilapidated books). However, since almost all the information in the old books will also be in the new books, the replacement of old books will not contribute much to improved the academic results. Exceptions, of course, are the new books related to necessary curriculum reform and new books for new subjects.

In their response, the committee repeatedly emphasized that they listened to the teachers in drawing up the new budget. However, the committee only discussed the greater spending requested by the teachers.

In the video presented at Town Meeting by the administration, we heard one of the school principals state that the mission of the schools is to teach to the tests since the tests measure what the students should know. However, neither the committee nor the administration discussed what the teachers are doing in the classroom to improve test results. Throwing more money at the problem without reforming the process will not lead to progress. Cohasset voters have learned that lesson many times in the past. We surely hope that the teachers and the administrators are energetically working to help our students improve the test results. It would be helpful if the teachers and administrators would communicate their action steps to the public.

I hope that any of our teachers would give a poor grade to a paper that failed to address the issues raised while dodging the discussion with smoke and mirrors. Such is the response from the School Committee to my commentary. This episode indicates that it is time for some new thinking on the committee.

Pond/Spring corner to change with train

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

This past week has been a week with a lot of behind the scenes work, but very little activity visible from a distance. So, we'll give you a brief description of the stuff you can't see. Sohier Street crossing continues to progress. The new culvert is in place and currently is carrying the flow of James Brook under Sohier Street and the railroad tracks. Several utility poles need to be relocated to conform to the new design for this area. Since some of these pole relocations involve Town property, bylaws require that a "Pole Hearing" be held. This should take place at this week's Selectmen's Meeting. Some grading has been done to accommodate a new sidewalk that will be constructed alongside of the Pratt Library on the South side of Sohier Street. You may notice that the fence beside the Paul Pratt Memorial Library has been moved to accommodate this new sidewalk. The schedule for the completion of Sohier Street crossing remains early May.

Pleasant Street crossing is still waiting for the asphalt to be delivered so construction can continue. We understand that some of the asphalt plants are now open, but the poor weather forecast for the middle of this week caused them to close temporarily. Once the asphalt is laid the crossing construction should move smoothly toward completion.

The oft promised start of blasting for reconfiguration of the Spring Street/Pond Street intersection is still promised to start "tomorrow." The equipment you saw previously in this area belonged to the Water Department. Now, you should be seeing different equipment which belongs to Cashman Balfour Beatty as their subcontractors begin work on reconfiguring this intersection. The initial work, we are told, should not require closing either Pond Street or Cushing Road, since the early construction will be off of the road surfaces.

New Pond/Spring Intersection

We've been asked a number of times about what the Pond/Spring street intersection will look like after the train construction is complete. This area changes so dramatically, it is very tough to describe it over the phone. Above is our feeble attempt to give a picture of what it will look like. To understand the new configuration, first locate the large rock, called Sunset Rock, in the above diagram. For the sake of brevity, Sunset Rock is called "ROCK." Spring Street, coming from the Village will meet Pond Street. There will be a STOP sign here for Spring Street traffic. Pond Street will turn to the right side of Sunset Rock as it goes downhill, crosses the railroad tracks and blends into Spring Street going toward South Main Street.

Today, you proceed down Pond Street toward the Village to the left of Sunset Rock. Tomorrow, you will go to the right of the rock. This configuration eliminates Sunset Rock obscuring motorist's vision at the crossing. It also eliminates a crossing with three gates which would be required with the present road configuration.

This coming week the Town's contractor, Northern Construction returns to town to resume the Village Revitalization work. The first order of business will be to complete the replacement of the underground storm drainage network. This will involve construction in front of French Memories, on North Main Street, in front of the South Shore Community Center at the Southern edge of the Common and at the corner of Ripley Road and Depot Court.

The ledge removal at the base of St. Stephen's will also be completed. We have been asked by several residents if the rock face that was left behind when work was suspended in December will be what we will see when the ledge removal is completed. The question was prompted by the fact that there were visible vertical drill marks in the face of the new surface. This appearance is only temporary. When the ledge removal is completed the contractor must leave the ledge with a natural appearing face.

After the underground work and ledge removal are complete the contractor will begin work replacing the streets, curb and sidewalk. We'll let you know more about this later.

One last thought... Please don't forget to patronize our merchants in the Village during Revitalization. It may be a bit more difficult to park and get to them, but they value your business. Your patronage will help them survive this difficult construction period.

'Surprises sprouting from beneath the leaves'

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

When I was a boy growing up in the 50s I learned from my father what to do with the grounds around our house. We had some ornamental shrubs near the foundation, then an expanse of lawn. There were some fruit trees at the far edge of the lawn: peach, apple, quince, and plum. Off in one corner was my father's vegetable garden. As soon as I was old enough, one of my chores was to mow the lawn, the endlessly boring lawn. What drudgery!

It was an unusual house, designed by an architect named Chester Long. The ground floor was a combination gas station and general store. The upstairs was essentially a three-bedroom suburban home. Chester designed a window box along the entire second story façade. Every springtime my father would drive our Chevy station wagon to a nursery and fill it with flats of annuals: petunias, pansies, marigolds and geraniums. Then he'd stand on a ladder up at the window box, and his helper would toss up the clay-potted flowers. Dad would catch the pot, transplant the flower to the window box, then drop the pot to be caught below. The chance of missing a catch and smashing a pot added a masculine edge to the process.

Dad also had a 100-foot long bed of tulips bordering one side of the driveway. Every spring hundreds of colorful tulips appeared. My father loved planting things, getting his hands in rich dark soil, enjoying the beauty of flowers and the matchless taste of homegrown tomatoes. These are things I learned from him. It sounds all good. But 50 years later I've come to see how one concept underlies what I was taught: total control over Nature.

In 1990 my former wife and I bought a property on the South Shore. I began to replicate what I had learned from my father. I bought a lawn mower and mowed the lawn once a week. I sowed grass seed in the thin spots. I bought tulips and daffodils and laid out planting beds. In the springtime we burned the twigs and branches downed by winter winds. We visited nurseries and brought home ivies and grape muscari. In the autumn I raked the leaves, the seemingly endless leaves, off the lawn.

Then we began building an addition. Backhoes and bobcats tore up the lawn. I planned more construction the following summer, so it was pointless to repair the lawn or rake the leaves. But after some weeks I thought maybe some grass would survive if I removed the leaves. As I raked I noticed the soil under the dry, crunchy leaves was black and moist, even wet in some spots. Abundant earthworms wriggled away from the sudden sunlight. I began having second thoughts about whether I was improving matters or stopping a healthy process of soil enrichment. What was I doing?

My construction project encountered some delays. Year's worth. And every autumn I found myself raking fewer leaves and allowing Nature to care for more of the grounds. The amount of remaining lawn became so small that I switched from a noisy gasoline engine mower to an almost-silent old-fashioned push model.

Each spring and summer new surprises sprouted from beneath the leaves. Violets and blue ground ivy appeared, carpeting the ground, needing no mowing. Purple henbit emerged; yellow celandine blossomed a few weeks later with lovely delicate petals. Pink dame's violet and lavender smartweed popped up in front of my studio. Wild geranium, my favorite, rose from my unraked leaves. My well-tended lawn had offered only the same boring grass year after year. My untended grounds brought me beauty and surprise.

I heard about the National Wildlife Federation's backyard habitat program, and stopped burning twigs and branches, creating a brush pile instead. Now the air we breathe is a tiny bit cleaner, and I have wrens, some burrowing creatures, moles or voles or shrews, in residence. This morning a flock of robins visited, feasting on earthworms beneath last autumn's leaves. I can hardly wait to see what wildflowers will be this summer's gift.

My yard is out of control. At least out of my control. I'm so much happier now. My lawn mower no longer adds to global warming. My brush burning no longer adds smoke to the smog. I never know what plants and wildlife will visit me. When I was in control, I was doing more harm than good. Now I'm thinking what I've learned on this half-acre lot is an important metaphor for how humanity might stop harming this beautiful planet Earth.

Impeach Scalia

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

"I can't understand it."

"What can't you understand, my love?"

"I can't understand why that man is still on the Supreme Court."

"Which man?"

"Antonin Scalia, that man."

"Scalia, eh. He's the one that went hunting with Dick Cheney and came back alive, isn't he? I'll admit he's 70 years old but he looks in fine shape to me. Why should he retire?"

"I don't mean retire. I mean he should be impeached."

"Impeached! What did he do, have sex with an intern in his office?"

"No, that was Bill Clinton's impeachable offense."

"Well, what did Scalia do to be impeached?"

"He made an obscene gesture in church."

"What did he do?"

"He put his fingers underneath his chin and flicked them."

"What does it mean?"

"I don't know. He says it was Sicilian."

"Who says it was an obscenity, then?"

"Joseph Gannascoli does."

"Impeached! What did he do, have sex with an intern in his office?"

"Joseph who?"

"Gannascoli. You know, he's the one that Meadow's boy friend interrupted having sex with the other man in the car on The Sopranos. He said, "It's an obscenity. It's something you would do after paying your bookie, to your bookie, but not something you would do in church."

"That's pretty thin evidence to impeach a Supreme Court justice on, don't you think?"

"He swore in church, too."

"Oh, what did he say?"

"I don't know. That was in Italian, too. But it was a swear word."

"Which one of the Sopranos told you that?"

"The photographer who snapped the picture of him making the gesture said so."

"There's a picture, eh. What does it show?"

"It shows Scalia smiling with his hand under his chin. I saw it in the Herald. The photographer got fired."

"That's outrageous. Did he work for the Herald for a long time?"

"Actually he was working for the Pilot, the Catholic newspaper."

"That's still awful. Does he have a wife and kids? What will he do now?"

"Oh, he has another job. He's a journalism professor at BU. He was a freelance photographer on assignment for the Pilot. They fired him for giving the picture to the Herald."

"How do you fire a freelancer? Maybe they're just not going to hire him anymore."

"Whatever. But I gotta go now."

"Where are you going?"

"I gotta see what CNN and Fox and MSNBC have to say about it."

More on Lyme Disease

Last week, we talked about protecting yourself from ticks, which carry illnesses such as Lyme disease. The article indicated that the disease came from a tick; true, but only indirectly. Knowing how ticks transmit this dangerous disease is an important step in learning to avoid it. Lyme disease was named in 1977 when arthritis was observed in a cluster of children in and around Lyme, Conn. Other clinical symptoms and environmental conditions suggested that this was an infectious disease probably transmitted by a bug (the report called it an arthropod). Further investigation revealed that Lyme disease is caused by bacteria. These bacteria are transmitted to humans by the bite of infected Deer Ticks.(the bug in question) and cause more than 16,000 infections in the United States each year.

Lyme disease, if left undiagnosed and untreated, is likely to have very harmful long term health effects such as meningitis, facial palsy, heart trouble, swelling and pain in large joints and chronic arthritis. Some forms of lyme disease are treatment resistant.

The picture shows a black legged or Deer Tick, the culprit in transmission of Lyme disease, at four stages in its development: (from left to right) adult female, adult male, nymph, and larva on a centimeter scale.

The recent explosive repopulation of whitetail deer has been linked to the spread of Lyme disease in New England. Deer serve as the maintenance hosts for deer ticks which produce larva (the tick at the right) that grow into nymphs and drop off the deer to find smaller hosts such as mice, voles, chipmunks, squirrels, etc.

Deer ticks are much smaller than common dog and cattle ticks. In their larval and nymphal stages, they are no bigger than a pinhead. Ticks feed by inserting their mouths into the skin of a host and slowly take in blood. They are most likely to transmit infection after feeding for two or more days. It is therefore important to conduct a thorough inspection of clothes and body after visiting sites likely to be inhabited by small wild animals, rodents, etc. Remove the tick and disinfect the site of any tick bite as soon as possible.

Budget sparks fiery debate on Town Meeting floor

the override issue made their viewpoints known. Town officials, members of the school department, and roughly 10 residents made a case for the funding amount they believe will best serve the town. The school department also presented a video which included interviews with school building principals and other staff members outlining how funding affects the schools. The video ended with a montage of close-up shots of the faces of Cohasset students from kindergarten through high school.

Standing squarely facing the microphone Paul Antico, 124 Atlantic Ave., an override proponent, attacked the town side of the budget. As a self-described "finance guy," he objected to passing the municipal budget as one budget. If he had had his druthers, only the school budget would pass because, in his view, the town is grossly mismanaging its funds.

Antico told the crowd the school budget makes up 40 percent of the overall town budget, and considering the increases on the town's side, it should be given more. However, later Selectman Michael Sullivan corrected Antico's statement explaining schools actually make up 60 percent of the town's budget. The cost of school building and field maintenance, health insurance, life insurance, property insurance, workers comp., Medicare taxes, unemployment, pensions, debt service and retired teachers health insurance are all on the town side of the ledger.

Antico also said due to the increases in the town's budget, he does not see the schools as being the problem when it comes to spending and then suggested the town's inability to stick to a budget coupled with the debt the town carries, has caused the need for repeated overrides. He said it is that kind of fiscal irresponsibility which has led to the town having roughly 20 overrides over the past 18 years.

"We didn't pass an override last year not because we didn't have the money, it was because we were sending a message," to the town, he said. A $400,000 override was proposed at last year's Annual Town Meeting, of which 100 percent would have been spent on the schools. The override passed at Town Meeting but was subsequently voted down at the ballot box.

"It is completely disingenuous for people to be dissecting the school budget."

— Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St.

However, Town Manager Bill Griffin said when examining the budget, Antico had been looking at the money requested by each department, not the number which was recommended for inclusion in the budget. Examples of increased spending Antico used were not correct, Griffin said.

Griffin also pointed out the reason the town has debt is because Town Meeting has voted its approval for many projects it wants to see completed. Debt exclusion overrides must be approved by a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting. "To characterize the amount of debt service as mismanagement is very unfair," said Griffin.

Sullivan said it is important for residents to participate in the overall budget process as it is taking place, rather than make accusations at the last minute on the floor of Town Meeting. "Were you even at any of the meetings?" asked Sullivan. Moderator Evans then asked Sullivan to address only the crowd and not Antico directly.

Former School Committee member Chartis Tebbetts, 9 Jerusalem Road Drive, also spoke in support of the schools. She said there is a serious revenue problem in town, and residents should lobby the state to restore funding which has been drastically cut. "We are trying to build a better community," she said, but without the revenue, the schools have been forced to charge fees and cannot properly fund its programs.

Override opposition

While Antico and other pro-override voters support the school budget, Roy Fitzsimmons, 116 Doane St., said every year, voters return to Town Meeting to find the schools are asking for more and more money. "When will we see responsibility and accountability?" he asked.

Fitzsimmons said Cohasset students have not done well on their MCAS tests, especially in math and science, and essentially blamed it on the teaching staff at the schools. He noted the School Committee had just settled a contract with the teacher's union and said teacher salaries should not increase. "If the MCAS scores are low, why are they giving them (teachers) a raise?" he said, which caused a stir in the audience, especially in the non-voting section of bleachers where many teachers sat.

Infuriated, Tebbetts, who had been waiting her turn to speak at the microphone, could not wait any longer and interrupted Fitzsimmons. However, Evans reminded Tebbetts that Fitzsimmons has the right to speak, and she would have to wait her turn.

Fitzsimmons also questioned the whereabouts of $205,000 in grant money, given to the school department from the state. In October, the school department announced it had been awarded a state Foundation Reserve Award, dubbed "pothole program" funds. Cohasset applied for the grant and was one of four communities to receive funding. The awards are given based on significant reductions in state aid. "What has that been spent on and can it be considered for reducing the budget this year?" asked Fitzsimmons.

He then made a motion to reduce the school budget by $655,000 as well as whatever the figure would be for the cost of living salary increases for teachers. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh explained there was roughly $238,000 set aside for a cost of living increase and Fitzsimmons then made a motion to reduce the school department's $13 million bottom line budget by $893,000, to the amount of $11,821,714.

Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., said Fitzsimmons' motion was uncalled for. "It is completely disingenuous for people to be dissecting the school budget," when it was gone over thoroughly prior to Town Meeting, she said.

Richard Perkinson, 274 King St., agreed, and said in his opinion, it was highly inappropriate for hundreds of thousands of dollars to be put on the chopping block minutes before taking a vote. "We are voting for the privilege to take a vote. Let the town decide what we should be doing," he said, as voters would only be allowing the overrides to make it to a Special Election for a second vote if they pass the budget at Town Meeting.

However, Lynn Eisenhauer, 19 Hobart Lane, said Walsh had not answered one of the questions posed by Fitzsimmons. "I would like to hear the truth. Where did the money go?" she asked, referring to the grant money the schools received in October.

Walsh replied the grant money has not yet been spent. "Our goal is to return without any unpaid bills," to the fall Special Town Meeting, she said. Walsh added the school department has been looking at the possibility of purchasing an emergency generator for the Osgood School. "We're looking at projects which are safety issues," she said.

A vote was taken on Fitzsimmon's amendment, and a loud and strong "no" vote indicated defeat by the majority. The main motion carried by a majority vote. Voters will head to the ballot box May 6 to take a second vote on the override figures. (See related story).

Voters OK spending preservation funds

All seven funding recommendations brought forward by the Community Preservation Committee in Article 4, were passed at Town Meeting Saturday with relatively little discussion. The article was one of 24 taken up Saturday, April 1 at the Annual Town Meeting.

• Recommendation A, which allocated $58,900 each to the historical resources sub-account, the open space sub-account, and the community housing sub-account, required a majority vote, and it passed unanimously.

• A recommendation to allocate $10,000 for making improvements to the Harborview Apartments, located at 60 Elm Street, required a majority vote, and it was adopted by a majority. There was some discussion, however, due to the fact that the state is supposed to be responsible for the apartments, and the town has continuously picked up the tab for projects.

Andrew Quigley, 38 Jerusalem Road, questioned whether the town should be putting its money toward a project that should be maintained by the state, when there are many other affordable housing initiatives it could be pursuing.

Advisory Committee member Tucker Glavin pointed out the state has not walked away from the apartments, and splits the maintenance costs 60/40, with the town shouldering the smaller portion. "The state is still very much involved and at the end of the day, these are residents of Cohasset we're taking care of," he said.

• Recommendation C allocated $8,000 to restore the entrance doors to the antique portion of Town Hall. It required a majority vote, and it passed unanimously.

• Recommendation D allocated $60,000 to help cover the expenses associated with building a new veterans monument at Veterans Park in the harbor. It required a majority vote, and it passed unanimously.

• Recommendation E allocated $300,000 to make improvements to the Beechwood Ballpark. It required a majority vote, and it passed unanimously.

• Recommendation F allocated $120,000 to the Board of Water Commissioners, to allow it to purchase land and continue its mission of protecting the town's water supply. It required a two-thirds vote, and it passed unanimously.

• Recommendation G allocated $80,000 to refurbish the Historical Society's Wilson House and Maritime Museum. It required a 2/3 vote, and it passed unanimously.

Michelle Karalekas points out to her husband, Jim, the changes that would be made to the Beechwood Ballpark with Town Meeting's approval to allocate Community Preservation funds. The couple has two boys, ages 3 and 5, and were excited to hear of the improvements, as the ballpark is in their neighborhood.

Garage bill will be paid

Town Meeting unanimously approved Article 5 which allocated $450 to Robbins Garage. Selectman Gary Vanderweil explained the bill had been received at the police department and was really for the fire department (or vice versa) and by the time the bill ended up in the right department, it was a new fiscal year. Town Meeting must approve payment of all bills from prior fiscal years, which is why the bill came before the town.

Teachers' new contract spelled out

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After nearly 18 months, negotiations are over. The Cohasset Teachers Association and School Committee have agreed on a contract for the 2005-2006 school year, as well as a three-year contract for 2006-2009.

The CTA unanimously voted to approve the contract at a meeting held Wednesday, March 29. In turn, the School Committee voted to accept it at a meeting scheduled specifically for the vote, Thursday, March 30. Town Manager Bill Griffin, as a representative of general government, also voted on the contract with the School Committee. A number of years ago, the Legislature adopted a law allowing a representative of general government to serve on the negotiating team and vote on school contracts.

"We are very proud of the contract," said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh, adding she feels it meets the needs of both the staff and students. Teachers would take a zero percent increase for this school year, but would see 3 percent increases in September of 2006, 2007, and 2008, as well as a 1 percent increase in Feb. 1, 2009.

Teachers have been working without a contract since Aug. 31, 2005. The new one-year contract will apply to this school year. It has a restructured salary schedule which will raise minimums and maximums to be more competitive with comparative school districts and to make step and column increases more equitable for all, officials said.

A new double master's degree/doctorate column has also been added which is 3 percent higher than the current highest column.

There will be a tuition reimbursement district-wide cap of $45,000 including fees and expenses. Teachers must also notify the administration by April 15 of anticipated column changes for next fiscal year for budgeting purposes. Paperwork that demonstrates adequate completion of a course must be submitted by June 1 for a Sept. 1 column change and by Nov. 1 for a Jan. 31 column change.

The contract says the district will not conduct CORI checks for individual employees more than once every three years without cause. One copy of the report will be kept in the superintendent's office in a locked file cabinet separate from personnel file. An employee will be notified when a CORI report has been requested and will receive a copy of the report upon request.

The Gay Straight Alliance advisor, high school jazz ensemble advisor, pep band advisor, National Honor Society advisor, and specialist team leader positions will all receive stipends.

The salaries of Department of Education certified nurses will increase from $29,173 to $32,173. The school department has also agreed to allow input from the Teachers' Association when developing the school calendar.

Department heads shall now be responsible for grades six through 12 as a result of the new middle school/high school configuration.

Teachers and nurses will also be reimbursed for the purchase of individual items for educational or for other purposes with prior approval from the administration.

An equal number of representatives from each grade level will work with the director of curriculum and professional development to make recommendations for the 2007-2008 school year for scheduling and content of professional development days for teachers and nurses.

Beginning in September 2006, all teachers will receive a 3 percent cost of living increase. The tuition reimbursement district-wide cap will be increased to $50,000 including fees and expenses. Nurses' salaries will be increased from $32,173 to $35,173.

The start and end times of the school day will be revised. Teachers and students will begin their day at the middle-high school at 7:30 a.m. and end at 2 p.m. At Deer Hill, teachers will begin their day at 8:20 a.m. and will end at 2:40 p.m. Student instructional time will start at 8:30 a.m. and end at 2:30 p.m. At Osgood, teachers will begin their day at 9 a.m. and end at 3:20. Student instructional time will begin at 9:10 a.m. and end at 3:10 p.m.

For the duration of the 2006 agreement, elementary school teachers will not be required to instruct students for more than 6 hours as a result of adding 20 minutes to their day. During the additional 20 minutes, all teachers may be responsible for receiving students upon arrival, which may include homeroom responsibilities as assigned, and for assisting with their safe dismissal.

Teachers will also be guaranteed 40 consecutive minutes of preparation time each day, versus the average of 45 minutes of preparation time per day during each week. Classroom teachers will receive a guaranteed 60 consecutive minutes every week for common planning time with grade level. Specialists will receive a guaranteed 60 minutes, which may or may not be consecutive.

One half-day will be added for teachers to use for common planning, working toward professional development points, curriculum design, and study groups of two or more, subject to approval of principal and curriculum coordinator.

In September 2007, teachers will receive another 3 percent raise. The salaries for certified nurses will increase from $35,173 to $38,173. There will be an increase from one half-day to one full day for teachers to use for common planning, working toward PDPs, etc. The tuition reimbursement cap will be increased to $52,500.

In September 2008, teachers will again receive a 3 percent raise. The district-wide tuition reimbursement cap will be raised to $55,000. Certified nurses will be placed at step one of the salary schedule (first five steps of teachers' salary schedule for bachelor's and master's columns) based upon degree status. The district will continue to provide one full day for teachers to use for common planning and study groups.

Effective Feb. 1, 2009, all salary schedules will receive a 1 percent increase.

The teachers' contract is a public document.. For more information on the contract or to receive a copy, please contact the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111.

ELECTION GUIDE

School Committee Vote for Two

Rick Flynn

NAME: Rick Flynn

AGE: 47

ADDRESS: 30 Summer Street

FAMILY: wife, Andrea; 3 sons, Andrew, 19; Patrick, 17; Keegan, 14.

YEARS IN TOWN: 18

EDUCATION: Boston College High School, 1976; Fairfield University, B.S. Finance, 1980.

OCCUPATION: Senior V.P., Fixed Income Sales, Lehman Brothers, Inc.

CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Cohasset School Committee 1999-2006 (Chairman 2002-2004); Cohasset Advisory Committee (1993-1999); Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (Adult Advisor 2002-2006); Cohasset Education Foundation 1993-1998 (Founding Director & Vice President); Youth Baseball & Soccer Coach.

QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: The ability to do the right thing without worrying about what other people will think of them.

WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? That I can't sit still. My neighbors and my children think I should relax more.

WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? The biggest concern I've heard from voters is their worry that without proper leadership and funding the schools will stagnate and fall behind. Part of this concern is the sense that there is too much polarization recently in town politics, not dissimilar from the state & national scene. As neighbors in a small town people want to feel like their leaders are working together to solve problems that are shared by many.

BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING SCHOOL COMMITTEE: The biggest challenge facing School Committee members is trying to deliver an above average educational product in the face of ever increasing federal and state mandates, increasing student enrollments, higher fixed costs and expanding curriculum requirements. This takes place in the midst of a town that is roughly 93 percent dependent on non-commercial property taxes for it's income with significant reductions in state aid over the past four years. At times this seems like a daunting task especially in light of many other pressing needs for the limited tax resources.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: Given the challenge that I just outlined, it's hard to believe anyone would want to serve on the School Committee. However, of all the services that people expect and demand from a municipality, quality education certainly ranks very high. We can't turn our backs on public education and I believe, with my six years of experience, I can have a positive impact in the role. We have a highly qualified administration leading terrific teachers and parents who are not afraid to get involved. With these assets alone we are way ahead of many places. We need to keep moving forward.

Leonora "Lee" Jenkins

NAME: Leonora "Lee" Jenkins

AGE: 57

ADDRESS: 198 Jerusalem Road

FAMILY: Husband, Leland and two daughters, Jessica (28) and Rebecca (26) both graduates of CHS.

YEARS IN TOWN: 28.

EDUCATION: BA in Psychology, Rosemont College, Rosemont, Pa.

OCCUPATION: Local small business owner.

CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: 25+ years of community service: Program Committee and Board of Directors of the Community Center, Brownie leader, Library Reader, Cultural Exchange Committee, Council on Aging. Sunday school Teacher and Christian Education Committee of the Second Congregational Church. Co-Founder of the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers. METCO Host Mother, Host Mother for over 20 foreign students and teachers, Youth Symphony Coordinator. Active volunteer in the schools from 1982 - 1997 especially involved in programs in math, computer, art and music. School Policy Book Revision Committee '97-98. Currently Member of Community Garden Club and Rusty Skippers Band.

QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Being straightforward and having the ability to listen well and fairly evaluate what is heard.

WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? My friends find that when I am not discussing school issues that I laugh quite a bit especially about my creative recycling.

WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? The decline in academic performance and classroom spending at the same time that district-wide school spending increases. Voters are concerned that there seems to be no connection between what is being spent and the results that are promised or produced. From what voters have said, it is obvious that we must return to a 'culture of learning' which provides a safe and secure environment in which our children can thrive.

BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING SCHOOL COMMITTEE: The School Committee must separate the spending that is proven to enhance key academic proficiency as measured by MCAS, SATs, Achievements, and fully fund that spending by reorganizing other areas of the budget. This is what my program "Progress through Priorities" is all about. Four important tools have been given to the School Committee: the School Budget Investigation Report, the Technology and the Curriculum Renewal Reports plus the Benchmark Study. School Committee members must be able to understand the conclusions and recommendations of these in depth reports and implement solutions that truly work for both the students and the taxpayers.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I'm seeking this office because I believe that our schools can achieve excellence by applying my action plan of "Progress through Priorities." These include focusing resources on the classroom; providing a strong academic foundation vital to our students lifelong success; returning Cohasset to one of the top schools in the state; taming the growth of non-classroom positions; creating annual budgets with Prop 2-1/2 in mind while keeping close oversight on the current situation as recommended by the School Budget Investigation Committee.

Steven Fusco

NAME: Steven Fusco

AGE: 45

ADDRESS: 4 Surry Drive

FAMILY: Wife Robin, Son Alex 7, Daughter Jessica 13.

YEARS IN TOWN: 6.

EDUCATION: Business Administration Degree, Northeastern University.

OCCUPATION: Vice President of Technology Operations for Fidelity Strategic investments.

CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Chairman, Technology Committee, Facilitator, Master Plan.

QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Perseverance – We wouldn't have some of our most prized accomplishments or privileges without it. Intelligence and a sense of humor are also high on my list.

WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? My complete inability to catch fish.

WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? MCAS scores and the override were high on many peoples list. Parents want to see the MCAS scores trend up significantly for both 4th and 8th grades. Cohasset residents also want to make sure they are getting value for their tax/override dollars. Most people I have spoken with don't mind funding and supporting the schools, or any other part of the town infrastructure, as long as they really need it.

BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING SCHOOL COMMITTEE: The biggest challenge will certainly be dictated by the results of the override vote. If the override is voted down the focus will be creating a top quality educational offering in a safe secure environment without the requested funding. If the override passes we will have to focus on implementing the recommendations of the strategic planning teams. A lot of hard work from both teachers and parents went into creating detailed plans in many disciplines to help our schools move forward. I would recommend we create similar parent/teacher teams to strategically plan our finances going forward.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I have two children in the Cohasset schools and like most parents I want my children to have an opportunity to attend a great school system. In my opinion, we have all the raw materials to become a model school. We have a great community, well educated and engaged parents, high standards, and some really great teachers.

Cohasset has given much to my family and I want to give back. I want to offer my experience and expertise to help Cohasset Schools reach their full potential. There is no better way to prepare your children for the future than a great education.

Selectman Vote for One

Edwin "Ted" Carr

NAME: Edwin "Ted" Carr

AGE: 38

ADDRESS: 88 South Main Street

FAMILY: Wife Tanya, Son Clayton (almost 3), Daughter Carrington (18 mos.)

YEARS IN TOWN: 2 -1/2 years

EDUCATION: Masters in Public Administration 2002, Harvard University, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Cambridge, Massachusetts; Certificate Degree, International Relations/Spanish 1990-1991, University of Salamanca, Salamanca, Spain; Bachelor of Arts, Political Science/Spanish 1986-1990, Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa

OCCUPATION: Partner and Founder of Logistix Boston, LLC, an event and logistics strategy consulting company

CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Consultant to the US Public Health Service, Fall 2005, Baton Rouge, La. Logistics Director for Louisiana for purposes of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita relie; Executive Office of the President 1992-2001, Washington, D.C., White House Lead Advance; U.S. Department Of Housing & Urban Development, Washington, D.C.,Director of Operations 1999-2001, Director of External Affairs / Special Assistant to the Secretary 1997-1999; U. S. Department Of Commerce, Washington, D.C., Special Assistant to the Secretary 1994-1997, Congressional Liaison Specialist, International Trade Administration 1993-1994; Presidential Inaugural Committee 1991-1992, Washington, D.C., Director of Talent Division; Elected Delegate to The Lynn County, State Of Iowa, Democratic National Convention, Atlanta, GA, 1988.

QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: I admire the traits of creative thinking and the ability to work together as a team.

WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? I usually laugh about my open door policy that has people over at my house at all hours for all reasons — I love to entertain.

WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Although there are a variety of specific issues that I have heard, it all boils down to preserving our historic town and maintaining our sense of community. Whether the issue is senior housing, economic development, town growth, harbor pollution, or overrides, the underlying concern is about keeping the Cohasset that we love and protecting those in our community who love Cohasset.

BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING SELECTMEN: Our Selectmen are responsible for building consensus out of differing opinions in order to create an appropriate course of action for our town. Cohasset now faces divisive issues that can pit neighbor against neighbor if the process is not managed properly. That said, most people in Cohasset have similar goals: maintain the community services that make Cohasset such a wonderful place to live, without bearing the burden of excessive taxation and mismanaged development. I believe the biggest challenge facing selectmen is to provide the leadership to bring our community together to achieve our common goals.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I am running for Selectman because Cohasset now faces challenges that my combination of public service, management experience, and academic training can address. With more than 15 years in public service, eight of which were in the Federal Government, I know about affordable housing, sustainable economic development, government procurement, and budgets. I am familiar with the challenges facing small businesses, the importance of funding education, and the necessity of keeping taxes low. I offer a perspective that reflects the reasons why so many families have moved to Cohasset over the past few years — the same reasons why so many families have stayed.

Roger Q. Hill

NAME: Roger Q. Hill

AGE: 46

ADDRESS: 19A Highland Ave.

FAMILY: Wife Joanne, son Quentin.

AGE: 46

EDUCATION: K-8 Cohasset, 9-12 Chapel Hill-Chauncey Hall, Wentworth Institutive of Technology.

OCCUPATION: Carpenter 20 years; Commercial building manager 8 years.

CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Cohasset Advisory board; Senior shuttle driver; Friends of Cohasset Harbor; Cohasset Yacht Club House Committee; South Shore Art Center volunteer of the year.

QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Honesty. I feel the only way to make good decisions is to have the truth, without it we will go nowhere.

WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: That nobody recognized me during the selectman candidates' interview and debate on "Our Town" because I was wearing a suit and tie.

WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? How expensive it is to live in Cohasset. Many of the residents have been here for a long time and can't afford it. It's not just the elderly either; the middle class is getting squeezed out just as much. There are very few town employees that actually live here any more, fire, police, D.P.W., most have moved away because the salaries haven't kept up with the taxes.

BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING SELECTMEN: The challenges are many, from state aid cut backs, to Cohasset Harbor and Little Harbor's environmental issues, to the negative impact of developments like Avalon on such a small town and its school system. All of these issues need to be closely monitored and addressed. The environmental issues should be dealt with before the state steps in and deals with it for us at or expense. I would also like to see the Little Harbor sewer district to move forward.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: Cohasset holds a special place in my heart, and I would like my son to have the same wonderful experience growing up that I had. A small town were everyone knew everyone else, and watched out for each other. Also to maintain the highest level of services we deserve as a town, schools, fire and police. With all the financial cut back from the state these issues need to be handled properly. I have the proven dedication and commitment to see us through the tough times.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Carr cites his background, education, experience

"My name is Ted Carr and I am running for the Cohasset Board of Selectman.

"While my wife Tanya and I moved here relatively recently, I am absolutely committed to Cohasset for two simple reasons – my son Clayton, who is almost three years old, and my daughter Carrington, who is eighteen months old. Clayton and Carrington will grow up in Cohasset, they will go to school here, and they will learn about the world from the people who live here. That's a tremendous gift from Cohasset to my family, a gift I want to repay with all I can do.

Ted Carr is running for selectman.

"Tanya and I have lived in several different cities and traveled for work to many different countries. So, when it came time to settle down and choose a place to raise our family, we knew what we wanted — a town that would give our children a quality education, safety and security, and a strong sense of community. Growing up in Boston, I was familiar with Cohasset – often enjoying it with friends who lived here. And as we looked around, the decision became simple; Cohasset was where we would live.

" I am running for Selectman because I want to use my combination of extensive public service, management experience, and academic training to help Cohasset tackle the critical issues it faces today. While I now own a small business in Cohasset, I previously spent fifteen years in public service, working in Washington D.C. for the White House, the Commerce Department, and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). After this extensive hands-on government career, I returned to school to earn a Masters degree in Public Administration at the Harvard Kennedy School of Government, where I studied leading theories on governance, urban policy, and sustainable development.

"My government background has trained me well for the job of Selectman. My experiences at HUD involved working with over 200 towns across the country on community development, many of them facing challenges similar to Cohasset. As Director of Operations, I fought for fair housing for senior citizens and lower-income families. My time at the Commerce Department taught me how to negotiate budgets, a crucial skill for any town, and to identify sustainable economic development opportunities. I also became familiar with government procurement processes, now critical to Cohasset as we have lost $1.3 million in annual state funding over the past four years.

"As a parent, I understand the ongoing need to fund and maintain good schools. And as the owner of a small company, I know the importance of keeping taxes low and government efficiency high, so that local businesses can create jobs, drive economic growth, and pay good salaries to their employees.

"I've learned that government works best when it is open and welcomes participation. The Kennedy School trained me to analyze issues using a variety of tools, and to maintain a fair process when making policy decisions. My positions will be based on facts and I always will tell you the facts that guide my decisions. In this spirit, as part of my campaign for Selectman, I have discussed some of the key policy issues facing Cohasset in the media. If you would like to know more about my views and the facts underlying them, please visit: www.carrforcohasset.com.

"The town of Cohasset offers my family a wonderful place to learn, a lovely environment in which to grow, and a friendly community to know. In turn, I offer you a tremendous amount of government experience, public policy training, and fresh ideas. I think my skills, education, and leadership can be put to work for the benefit of our town now. I hope to offer a new face and a fresh perspective to the Board to address the complex challenges we face.

" When you vote on April 8th, please choose the person with the qualifications and knowledge to serve our town most effectively. I offer the leadership, experience, and training necessary to help our community face the future."

Jenkins asks for support

"This Saturday, April 8, Cohasset voters will elect new leadership on the Cohasset School Committee. I hope you will consider giving me one of your two votes this year.

"I wanted to take this time to thank you for your many courtesies to me over the past weeks. I have enjoyed talking with you about how we can work together to make quality education affordable for all. Your reception of my action plan 'Progress through Priorities' gives me confidence that we are all working toward the same goals.

"If you elect me to the school committee, I promise that your confidence in my ability to do the job will be well placed.

McNabb seeks reelection to Water Commission

John McNabb has announced he is running for a fourth three-year term to the Water Commission. McNabb was chairman of the Commission 1999 through 2005. He was first elected in 1997, and was re-elected unopposed in 2000 and 2003.

"We have made major improvements to the water system since I was first elected in 1997," said McNabb, "including installation of rain gardens to passively clean storm water before it enters Lily Pond, completion and implementation of the Surface Water Supply Protection Plan, the new Scituate Hill Water Storage Tank, the rehabilitation of over 12 miles of water mains, major improvements to the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, the reactivation of the Ellms Meadow well field and a fire hydrant replacement program.

"These projects have resulted in measurable improvements in fire protection and tap water quality for Cohasset residents," said McNabb. "I am running for re-election because I want to continue this aggressive water system improvements program and because there is still much work to be done."

Before being elected to the Water Commission, McNabb served on the Board of Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library (1984 through 1987) and on the Town Government Structure Committee (1983 through 1987). More recently, he served as a member of the Recycling Committee (1996 through 2005), and as one of the town's representatives to the South Shore Recycling Cooperative (1997 through 2005), which he co-founded.

As vice president of SAFE from 1991 through 2001, McNabb helped lead the opposition to the proposed expansion of the private Cohasset Heights landfill, which was closed in 1998, to reduce its impact on the Lily Pond watershed.

McNabb is employed as drector of research and policy for the New England office of Clean Water Action, a national environmental nonprofit organization. He has recently started a new business, South Shore PC Services (www.southshorepcservices.com), which provides PC repair and services to business and homeowners on the South Shore.

A tale of two halves

Lady Laxers dominate in second half to defeat Scituate, 14-10

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The story on the scoreboard at halftime of Tuesday's Scituate-Cohasset girls lacrosse game didn't the whole story.

The Sailors were ahead, 6-4, but had been dominating most of the game up to that point, holding a solid advantage in time of possession and creating more scoring chances, with Kathleen Garland (three goals at the half), Kerrin Kasianowicz (two scores) and Addie Kerner (one goal) taking the most advantage of them.

But it was Cohasset that took it to the home team in the second half. Thanks to the dominance of Lindsey Durkin and Gabriella Flibotte, the Skippers outscored the Sailors by a 10-4 margin in the second half and walked off the field with a 14-10 win.

Durkin scored five of her game-high seven goals in that second half, with Flibotte getting three of her four scores in the last 25 minutes. Senior Lisa Spirito and freshman Lindsay Hill scored one goal apiece to round out Cohasset's second half explosion.

Early on, this looked like Scituate's game. After Durkin scored the game's first goal in the early minutes, Scituate shut out the visitors for about a 15-minute stretch while scoring three goals of its own. Garland, Kasianowicz and Dana Cullen (two assists for the game) were all getting to the net with ease.

The Skippers stayed in the game thanks to some fine saves from goalie JoAnna Hamilton, two coming in the span of about 30 seconds on point-blank opportunities for Kasianowicz and Brigid Cotter.

Over the last 6:30 of the half, three different players scored for each side, accounting for the 6-4 halftime score.

Cohasset's first possession of the second half set the tone for the rest of the game. After Emily

Skippers nip Sailors to improve to 2-0

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

A close, hotly contested game that comes right down to the wire.

In the Scituate-Cohasset boys lacrosse rivalry, would you expect anything else?

After splitting two such contests last season, the teams only meet once this year. That game was played Tuesday in Cohasset, with the Skippers earning a hard-fought 7-5 win.

While Cohasset already had a game under its belts - having soundly beaten Nantucket by a 9-1 score on Sunday - this was the season opener for Scituate. Sailors head coach Rick Bagby seemed fairly encouraged by what he saw, but came away with clear areas for improvement as the season gets underway.

"We played well, but we were a little impatient at times, and we gave up a couple goals while we were a man up," Bagby said. "Obviously, we would've liked to have won, but we showed promise. We didn't have any scrimmages, so we were a little green."

Among the stars of the day were the two goalies, Scituate sophomore Jake Gray and Cohasset senior Ben Libby. Libby stopped 18 Scituate shots, while Gray made 12 saves.

With Gray likely to be the Sailors' stopper for the next years, Bagby is hopeful that his performance on Tuesday was a harbinger of things to come.

"Him playing that well against probably the team to beat in Division 3 was great to see," said the Scituate coach.

For Cohasset, sophomore Mark Flibotte (four goals) and junior Mike Bunstein (four assists) led the offensive charge. Senior Aidan Buick notched two goals and an assist, including the game's final goal with one second left on the clock after Cohasset had fought off Scituate's valiant attempts to tie the game.

Skippers head coach Stew Curran was pleased with his team's attack, but will be looking to cut down on the penalties.

"Offensively, we were moving the ball real well," Curran said. "We're not bad, and if we stay out of the box we'll be even better."

For Scituate, junior Sam Brigham scored three goals, with Gary Crowley and Brendan Dickinson adding one apiece. Brigham, Crowley, and seniors Colby Hawkins and John White - the Sailors' four captains - all played a strong game in the midfield.

In addition to Libby, Cohasset also received excellent play from junior defenseman Jeff Brown. In one particular sequence, Brown stuffed a Scituate player on the attack, scooped up the loose ball, ran downfield and found Buick in front of the Scituate net for an easy finish.

Skippers 9, Nantucket 1

Cohasset was dominant in Sunday's season opener, as the gap between the two teams' was probably even larger than the score indicates.

The Skippers jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first period behind goals from Trevor Brady, Flibotte and Buick. Nantucket had few opportunities to score in the opening minutes, thanks in large part to the defense of Conor Holway and Ryan Kucinski.

Nantucket's Ethan Farrell scored his team's only goal with 2:36 left in the first period. From there, the Cohasset defense dominated the game. Dan Trendowicz, Jake Cuneo, Brown and Anthony DiPaolo all made big plays in the first half to keep the visiting Whalers at bay.

As the second period wore on, the Skippers' attack went to work. Buick missed a couple good chances - one set up beautifully by Chris Davis - but it was only a matter of time before Cohasset started scoring some goals.

And score they did, putting in three goals in 1:05 in the middle of the second period. Flibotte made it 4-1 at the 7:04 mark, assisted by Charlie Czerkawski on play set up by a nice pass from Trendowicz. Just 39 seconds later, Buick fed a cutting Peter Ernst for the Skippers' fifth goal of the game.

A mere 26 seconds after that, Davis got on the board, assisted by a Bunstein pass from the side of the net. Bunstein has been a huge part of the Skippers attack so far this season, earning eight assists on the team's 16 goals through two games.

The second half got off to a slow start offensively, but physical defense in front of the net by Brown and Cuneo continued to keep the Whalers off the board. Halfway through the third, Buick gave Cohasset a 7-1 lead on a shot from in front set up by Brady.

Flibotte and Buick both competed their hat tricks in the fourth, with Bunstein earning assists on both goals.

Cohasset travels to Falmouth today, and will face likely its biggest challenge of the season when defending Division 1 state champion Duxbury comes to town on Tuesday for a 4 p.m. game. The next day, the Skippers host Barnstable at 5:30.

Pitching in

Bryan, Hill lead CHS baseball in season opening win

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Good pitching wins baseball games.

It's pretty simple, really, and that formula for success was evident in the Cohasset High baseball team's 4-2 win over Sacred Heart in Monday's season opener.

Senior Chris Bryan got the start and, despite some occasional struggles with his control, went 6+ strong innings. He allowed just four hits, walked five and struck out seven.

Bryan's win didn't come without some help from sophomore Brian Hill, who came on in relief in the bottom of the seventh with runners on second and third and no one out. Hill struck out the first batter he faced, induced a grounder to the pitcher, and then hit a batter to load the bases.

With the winning run for Sacred Heart on base with two outs, Hill got another strikeout to earn the clutch save. The performance from both hurlers encouraged Skippers coach Al Gallotta.

"I though that, for the first game, [Bryan] pitched very well," he said. "And Brian Hill did an excellent job to get out of that jam and get the save."

Bryan also helped his cause at the plate, getting two of the Skippers' six hits batting out of the three-hole.

Cohasset's only RBI of the day came from junior catcher Fletcher Smalzel and sophomore third baseman Kyle Pinkus. Smalzel's single in the top of the second tied the game at 1-1, and a Pinkus double in the third gave Cohasset the lead. Sacred Heart tied it again in the third, but the Skippers got a couple more runs in the fourth thanks to three errors by the home team.

For Smalzel and Pinkus, both those hits were the first of their varsity baseball careers. The same can be said for sophomores Sam DeGiacomo and Pat Doonan, who each got base hits in their

Conor Holway

Conor Holway - Junior
Defenseman - Cohasset

Perhaps as intimidating a force as there was in the South Shore League this season, Holway was named a league All-Star, and with good reason…Skates extremely well for a player his size, and uses that speed at both ends of the ice…Can check with the best of them in the area, and is also an adept puck-carrier with a lethal shot from the blue line…Says his best games of the season came in Jan. 8 tie at Mashpee, and in Feb. 11 win over rival Norwell that clinched a state tournament berth for the Skippers…In that Mashpee game, scored one of the goals that brought Cohasset back from a 3-0 deficit for the tie…Scored two goals and added an assist in the Feb. 1 rematch with the Falcons …Also a defenseman on the CHS lacrosse team. Holway aspires to play hockey in college

TJ Collins – Senior (Capt.)
Defense – Abington/EB

A hard-nosed and well-rounded defenseman who plays much bigger than his 5-8, 160- pound frame suggests…Eighth year Green Wave head coach Tony Sulmonte called Collins "the best defenseman I've ever coached"… finished his four-year varsity career with remarkable plus/minus ratio of just under 100…this included a plus-34 this season, a mark made all the more remarkable by the fact the 11-8-2 Green Wave were just a plus-9… went a stretch of seven straight games this season without being on the ice for a goal against…easily led the Green Wave in minutes played, and seldom came off the ice in special team situations… two-time Green Wave captain and South Shore League all-star… had five goals and 12 assists this season… moved from defense to forward as a junior and finished among the team leaders in scoring with 10 goals and 10 assists…one of 42 Massachusetts high school hockey players to receive the Hobey Baker Character Award this winter…played the entire season through a painful hip injury, an injury which has shelved him for his entire senior baseball season at East Bridgewater… also a golf and baseball standout at EBHS… plays hockey year round, including a couple of summer stints with the Bay State Breakers Junior team…a three-time Patriot League golf all-star…National Honor Society Member and the Vice President of the SB

Weymouth's Andrew Noble crosses the finish line in first place.

Cohasset Road Race by the Sea

At Sunday's race, there were 977 registered runners and 836 finishers, both the highest totals since at least 1996, according to race director Brad Goodwin.

The weather was near perfect for the race, won by Weymouth's Andrew Noble in a time of 32:41. Joseph Carroll Jr. was the top Cohasset finisher, coming in eighth place with a time of 35:37. Josh Flanagan also ran a strong race, finishing 13th overall in 37:49.

Cohasset's top female finisher was Kelly Joslin, whose time of 44:09 was good enough for 77th place overall.

Cohasset's Sheelah Scott and Alyssa Hinman finished second and third, respectively, in the female 14-17 age group, and Barbara Buckley was third in the 40-49 group. Cohasset's John McCarthy finished third in the male 14-17 group.

Student Senate…talked to a couple of college hockey coaches, but chose Thomas University of Maine, which has no hockey program… plans to major in Accounting or Finance and play Club hockey…Abington/East Bridgewater Coach Tony Sulmonte: "TJ is the best defenseman I've ever coached. He had a great high school hockey career. He did everything we asked, and was a great leader on and off the ice."

David Kennedy -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Braintree

In his fourth year at the varsity level, Kennedy did just about everything for the Wamps…Finished as Braintree's second-leading scorer this season, behind fellow All-Scholastic Steve Lydon…A talented offensive player and strong skater…Played a few games at defense this season when the Wamps were shorthanded in that area…Scored a goal and played an overall great game in Feb. 13 game against Super-8 team Duxbury; Kennedy says that game was his best of the season…Notched four points (one goal, three assists) in Jan. 21 loss to Bay State Carey champion Weymouth…Scored two goals in Feb. 11 win over Wellesley…Will play Division 3 hockey at Johnson and Wales University in Providence, Rhode Island…Will major in JWU's renowned restaurant management program…Braintree coach David Fasano: "He's been a big contributor to our program over the last four years. When things were down for us for a while this year, he kept us up and kept the team focused."

Steve Lydon -
Forward - Braintree

Led the Wamps in scoring this season despite missing two games with mono, and playing through the after-effects of it for several games…Carried the Wamps offensively in the middle part of the season, highlighted by a hat trick in Jan. 18 win over Brookline…Also scored two goals Jan. 16 against Needham…A good skater with a strong sense for the game, Lydon was always in on the Braintree offense…A talented multi-sport athlete, Lydon played soccer this year and is a captain on the lacrosse team this spring…A Marinerland All-Scholastic Honorable Mention for lacrosse last spring…Is considering playing lacrosse or hockey at a local college…Says engineering and business are currently his top two choices as a course of study…Braintree coach David Fasano: "He and David [Kennedy] were a big part of our offense this year, and I think that will be the case for Steve again next season. I look for him to have a big year."

Bill Ainslie – Junior Center - Hanover

A fiery competitor who finished tied for third in the Patriot League scoring race (17 goals, 27 assists) on the strength of a great finish…season highlights included a hat trick in a 5-1 win at Martha's Vineyard…Patriot League all-star…also a Brockton Enterprise and Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic, along with linemate Mark Jackson… already named a co-captain for next season along with linemate Joe Ward…little brother of 2005 Mariner All-Scholastic Bob Ainslie (Class of 2005)… athletic family also includes HHS freshman Heather, a star gymnast…three time WATD Player of the Week…suffered a broken collarbone 10 minutes into the first round state tourney win over Plymouth South, and missed the remainder of the postseason…also plays lacrosse at HHS…plays in several off season Coaches leagues…hopes to play Junior hockey this summer for the Bay State Breakers…Hanover Coach Jim Sylvia: "It's tough not to wonder how much further we might have gone (in the state tourney) if Billy hadn't been hurt, not that the rest of the guys didn't step it up in his absence. Billy has all the skills you want and he's never satisfied. He's a very competitive kid. He just has a real love for the game."

Bill Jackson- Junior
Defense - Hanover

This makes the second straight selection for Bill to our all-scholastic team…was key in holding the Indians defensive core together after gifted junior Chris MacDonald was lost for four weeks to a broken wrist…a very talented two-way defenseman, equally adept at carrying end-to-end, moving the puck out of the zone or breaking up an odd man rush… has great ice presence and is seldom caught out of position… plays with a fluid style that at times appears almost effortless… seldom came off the ice in special team situations… twin brother Mark joins him as an all-scholastic…named to second straights Patriot League all-star team…finished with three goals and 14 assist… plans to play in his second straight Hockey Night in Boston Tourney this summer…also a standout golfer and lacrosse player at HHS… Hanover Coach Jim Sylvia: "I really think Bill didn't get as much credit he deserved for keeping things together for us this season. His numbers probably could have been better, but he had to drop back a lot of times rather than press things in the offensive end to help protect a new goalie. He played a big part in making our power play go and was key when we were shorthanded too."

Mark Jackson – Junior

His emergence mid-season as an offensive leader launched the Indians on a great closing run and into the Div. 2 state tourney…an extremely well-rounded offensive performer with great ice awareness…long reach and quick reflexes make him nearly impossible to contain one-on-one…finished second in the regular season Patriot League scoring race with 19 goals and 28 assists…Patriot League all-star…also a Brockton Enterprise and Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic, along with linemate Bill Ainslie… Jackson's line, which also included junior Joe Ward (11-19—30), accounted for 120 points this season and was clearly the catalysts in the team's strong second half… already named an assistant captain for next season…twin brother Bill earns his second Mariner All-Scholastic selection here…WATD Player of the Week…plans to play in his second straight Hockey Night in Boston Tourney this summer…also a standout golfer and lacrosse player at HHS…is eyeing bigger colleges such as Villanova and UNH, so college hockey may not be in his future…Hanover Coach Jim Sylvia: "There was a lot of pressure on Mark and his line to score, and they started a little slow. Eventually, they all stood up to that pressure, and really carried us in a lot of games offensively. Mark has great insight for the game. He sees the ice well and knows how to get himself open, and find his teammates."

Ty McDonald -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hingham

Was the go-to man on offense for the Harbormen and more than lived up to his title…McDonald had several multiple goal games this season, leading the Hingham (16-6-3) squad with 31 points on 20 goals, 11 assists…Played some of his best hockey in the biggest games of the season, scoring three goals in two wins over Duxbury this season (5-2, 5-3)…Also netted a hat trick in a big win over Marshfield, the Div. 1 state champs…Had a two-goal game in a 7-5 win over Archbishop Williams in the Cape Cod Classic Tourney in Falmouth and added another goal in a tough loss to Arlington Catholic (3-2)…A very fast and strong skater, McDonald's play on the frontline helped the Harbormen earn their fifth-straight bid to the Super 8 tourney…There, McDonald assisted on a game-tying goal against Catholic Memorial in the Harbormen's tough OT loss (2-1) to the eventual finalists…McDonald hopes to continue his hockey career at the next level.

Matt Marshall - Junior
Forward - Hingham

Was another one of Hingham's great scoring weapons this season as Marshall racked up 23 points on 11 goals, 12 assists, placing him second amongst his teammates…Scored many big goals this season, particularly towards the end of the season…Got the offense going in the Super 8 opener against Medford, breaking a scoreless tie in with a second period score in an eventual 3-2 loss…Assisted on a big goal in the second of two wins over Duxbury…Scored the game-winning goal in a 3-2 victory over Austin Prep in the Harbormen's Super 8 finale…Marshall's consistent play on the front line helped Hingham to a 16-6-3 record and fifth-straight appearance in the elite postseason tournament…Just a junior, he will be among the top returning players on the Harbormen squad next winter.

Mike Perkins -
Senior (Capt.)
Defenseman - Hingham

A terrific athlete, there isn't much this three-sport captain can't do…As the leading defenseman on the five-time Super 8 Harbormen team, Perkins had many roles, all of which he excelled at…Perkins was an essential part of a defense that recorded seven shutouts in 22 regular season games, including one against Div. 1 state champs Marshfield…Another big-game performer, Perkins and the Harbormen (16-6-3) defense more than held their own with some of the area's best, including Catholic Memorial, Duxbury, and BC High…Perkins led defensive efforts in a pair of wins over the Green Dragons (5-2, 5-3) and another over Austin Prep (2-1), while keeping the Harbormen in close losses to BC High (2-0), Catholic Memorial (3-1, 2-1 OT), and Medford (3-2)…Also contributed offensively, scoring a handful of goals and notching several assists…Perkins was a standout running back and linebacker on the HHS football team last fall and will play baseball for the Harbormen this spring…He plans to continue his football career in college.

Erin McNichols -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hingham

One of the stars on the up-and-coming Hingham girls hockey program, McNichols was the lone veteran on the squad this winter…In just its second year of existence, the two-year captain helped the program improve by leaps and bounds this season…Was the Harborwomen's leading scorer for the last two seasons, tallying 44 points on 23 goals, 21 assists this winter…Had six multiple-goal games, which helped guide Hingham to a 12-8-3 record and berth in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney after an inaugural season in which the Harborwomen won only two games…McNichols was among the top scorers in the South Eastern Mass. League, in which Hingham finished third with a 10-5-3 record…McNichols finished her two-year hockey career with 77 points (38 goals, 39 assists)…A Patriot League All-star in soccer last fall, McNichols was also a captain…She will play lacrosse at HHS this spring. Hingham coach Tom Findley: "Erin is a fantastic hockey player who led by example. Her dedication and hard work in season and in the off-season allowed her to become one of the major contributors to the program. She will always be considered one of the pioneers of HHS girls hockey."

Ryan Warsofsky -
Senior (Capt.)
Defenseman - Marshfield

There wasn't much this talented defenseman couldn't do on the ice and it showed…Was the Rams' second-leading scorer this season with 35 points on 22 goals, 13 assists…Racked up 115 points throughout his four-year career…A three-time Old Colony League All-star, Warsofsky's experience and skills helped Marshfield capture a Div. 1 state title this winter with a 2-1 win over St. John's Prep…A two-time All-Scholastic, Warsofsky's scoring ability was certainly appreciated, but he was most valuable to the Rams when opposing teams had power plays…Warsofsky was an intrical part of a defense that allowed just three goals in five postseason games and shut out two opponents…Marshfield entered the Div. 1 South as the No. 4 seed at 13-7 and won five-straight games to win the state title and finish at 18-7…Warsofsky plans to continue his hockey career in college next winter. Marshfield coach Dan Connolly: "Ryan was a great leader on and off the ice. I just can't say enough good things about him."

Conor Toomey -
Forward - Marshfield

He may just be a sophomore, but Toomey plays like he's a longtime veteran…The leading scorer on the Marshfield (18-7) squad this winter, Toomey racked up 36 points on 13 goals, 23 assists…Was the Rams' go-to man on offense and he never disappointed, particularly when it mattered most…Toomey scored the game-winning goal in Marshfield's 1-0 victory over Norwood to win the Div. 1 South title and then assisted on the game-winner in a 2-1 win over St. John's Prep in the Div. 1 State Championship…That goal was scored by his older brother and fellow All-Scholastic, Brendan…His consistently solid play helped the Rams earn the No. 4 seed in the Div. 1 South and was essential in the team winning five-straight games in their run to the state title…Just a sophomore, Toomey will return to the first line with his brother next season. Marshfield coach Dan Connolly: "Conor was our catalyst offensively and always came up with the big play. He's already well over 50 points for his career and we expect many more in the next two seasons."

Brendan Toomey - Junior
Forward - Marshfield

Talk about a clutch player, Toomey turned in some of his best performances when it mattered most…Contributed a ton of offense throughout the season, but really stood out in Marshfield's long postseason run, notching the assist on the game-winning goal in a 1-0 win over Norwood in the Div. 1 South Sectional final and scoring the game-winner in the Rams' 2-1 victory over St. John's Prep in the Div. 1 State Championship…The Old Colony League All-star was the third-leading scorer on the Marshfield team, racking up 27 points on 11 goals, 16 assists…This is despite missing four games due to an injury…His consistent play on the ice helped the Rams earn the No. 4 seed in the South with a 13-7 record…Marshfield finished at 18-7 after the tourney. Marshfield coach Dan Connolly: "Brendan is one of the fastest kids around and he has a tremendous work ethic."

Matt Unger - Junior
Goalie - Marshfield

The stats speak for themselves with Unger…A part-time goalie who split time with a senior throughout the regular season, Unger made a name for himself in the postseason…In five tournament games, Unger allowed only a trio of goals while shutting out a pair of opponents for a 0.60 goals against average…Notched 18 saves in a 1-0 shutout win over Norwood in the Div. 1 South final and turned away 27 shots in the Rams' 2-1 victory over St. John's Prep in the Div. 1 State Championship…The Old Colony League All-star finished the season with a 14-2 record and 1.75 goals against average…Unger's skills were immeasurable, his …The junior spent two years on the bench at Thayer Academy before returning to Marshfield High this season…With one year still left to play, Unger will return to the Rams' squad next winter. Marshfield coach Dan Connolly: "Matt was not phased at all in the tourney. He was always very calm and really got us going when we beat Barnstable (2-1 in the South quarterfinals). He's just very focused and always in control."

Cody Cavicchi - Sophomore
Forward- Norwell

Talented three-sport athlete makes his third appearance on a Marinerland All-Scholastic team; has made it the last two years in golf…Certainly knows how to score goals, but Cavicchi's best attributes may be his passing and overall instincts for the game…Led the Clippers in assists with 15, and finished second in goals (19) and points (34)…A South Shore League All-Star, one of six on the league champion Norwell squad…Says the two tournament games against Harwich-Provincetown and Bourne, along with 6-0 win over South Shore Voc. Tech on Dec. 23, were his best of the year…Notched a hat trick in that win over SSVT…Repeated that feat six days later in big road win over Mashpee…A tough competitor that received a lot of big hits from opponents, but kept going strong…Very durable as well, skating regular shifts on power plays and penalty kills…Also plays attack for the Norwell High lacrosse team, where he spent most of the year at varsity last year as a freshman…Is considering playing hockey or lacrosse in college

Dan Dempsey - Sophomore
Forward - Norwell

Opposing defenseman were often left in the dust by Dempsey and his myriad moves in the offensive zone…The South Shore League All-Star led the Clippers with 25 goals and 39 points, and finished second in assists (14)…Transferred from BC High, where he played freshman hockey last season…Says his best game of the season came Jan. 20 at home against Mansfield, when his two goals and two assists helped Norwell to a come-from-behind 5-3 victory…Notched hat tricks in season opener against Rockland and in Dec. 23 win over South Shore Voc. Tech…Had two goals and an assist in key Feb. 13 win over Rockland…Along with teammate and fellow All-Scholastic Cody Cavicchi, played on just about all power plays and penalty kills…Not afraid to mix it up with opponents, administering a fair amount of big hits…A Marinerland All-Scholastic Honorable Mention for golf in the fall…Also plays right field for the NHS baseball team…Wants to continue his hockey playing career in college

Lindsey Durkin (5) gets some props from teammate Lisa Spirito after she scored a goal to make it 11-8 in the second half of Tuesday's game. Durkin finished with a game-high seven goals.

FROM HALVES, PAGE 19

Coggins collected a loose ball to begin the possession, the Skippers held the ball for over a minute, going behind the net and waiting for a proper scoring opportunity to develop. That chance arose for Durkin, who wheeled around the side of the net and put it in to cut the deficit to one.

Just over two minutes later, Flibotte tied it, beautifully one-timing the ball into the net off a nice pass by Kara Wilcox from behind the net.

Sixteen seconds later, Kasianowicz regained the lead for the Sailors. In a play that began with a nice run down the field by Jenn Noonan, the Scituate sophomore took a pass from Kerner and got an accurate shot off despite three Cohasset defenders in her face.

After Flibotte and Hill scored to put Cohasset on top, the Skippers' defense began to take over. Hill, Marissa Evans and Colleen Richardson took turns knocking down Scituate passes and to start attacks the other way. That and four goals down the stretch from Durkin paved the way for Cohasset (2-0) victory.

Kasianowicz led Scituate (0-1-1) with five goals, followed by Garland's three and one apiece from Kerner and Melissa Faletra.

Skippers 10, Nantucket 5

Nantucket controlled the early action, scoring first as the Cohasset squad came out a bit nervous. Spirito evened things up, and Durkin answered a Nantucket goal with three of her own. Flibotte then fed Spirito on a fast break -- Flibotte also picked up an assist on one of Durkin's goals -- to put Cohasset in control.

Coming out of halftime with a 5-3 lead, Cohasset played patient ball-control offense. On the first possession of the second half, the team held the ball for nearly three minutes before Durkin broke her defender down and scored. Flibotte then scored on a feed from Cassie Rosano, converting a high pass by jumping up high to catch it and slam it home in one swoop.

Mia Lieb-Lappen answered a Nantucket goal with a score of her own, Durkin put the game out of reach with her fifth of the day and Lieb-Lappen closed the scoring and allowed the coach to go deep into the bench, en route to a 10-5 final.

On offense, Mary Previte had several outstanding scoring opportunities foiled by Nantucket's goalie; Michelle Madge also was robbed twice, or the game would have been more lopsided.

Hamilton made six saves -- all of them point-blank stops -- and gave up four goals to get the win. Aisling Guinee made two saves and gave up one goal in mop-up duty.

After a nervous start, the defense calmed down and choked Nantucket off. Hill and Sarah Brown teamed with Richardson to lead the charge. Tessa Leahy and Jessica Wheelwright were in the mix throughout the day.

JVs start strong, too

The Cohasset High School junior varsity girls lacrosse team opened its season with a 9-3 win over Scituate that showed how the team's emphasis on fitness is paying off.

Not only were the JV girls missing their coach, Beth Pierson, but the team was down several players due to illness, and entered the game with just 13 players, meaning it had just one substitute.

Katie Gaumer traded goals with Scituate in the first half, and had it not been for a score called back by a crease violation, the game would have been tied 3-all at the half. Instead, Gaumer's first two goals put Cohasset down 3-2 at the half.

From there, however, Cohasset was dominant, running Scituate into the ground. Gaumer tied the game, then gave Cohasset its first lead when she converted a direct-free position shot. Kayla Farren -- who was playing in the first game despite missing all but one day of practice this season due to illness -- then converted a feed from each of the Madge sisters, junior Michelle and freshman Kaley -- to expand the lead to 6-3. The Madges then helped each other, with Michelle banging home a great feed from Kaley to expand the lead.

Grace Steele split the Scituate defense to register her first goal of the year, and Farren completed a hat trick as time dwindled in the contest.

Guinee made six saves in the Cohasset net, shutting out Scituate in the second half behind yeoman's defensive work from Natalie Hunt, Amanda Hurd and Stefi Belz, each playing the entire game without a break due to the short bench.

The JV report was submitted by coach Chuck Jaffe.

Cohasset 7th graders reflect on great year

Including the playoffs and the preseason tournament, the 7th grade boys finished the season with a record of 21 wins and 4 losses. While each of the 7th grade boys possessed strong basketball skills, their success this year derived from the pooling of their individual talents into a smart, unselfish style of play that promoted team success over individual achievement. Every player contributed to the success of the team. The ten members of the 7th grade team, and the positions they played, are as follows:

Ben Campbell started the majority of games at small forward, and also saw time at point guard. One of the steadiest ball handlers on the team, Ben combined deadly outside shooting with the ability to drive to the basket. Ben helped start the team's winning ways, with a three-pointer at the buzzer to seal a come-from-behind win against Mashpee in the preseason Hoopfest Tournament. Ben hit the three-pointer in the championship game that tied the score after Abington momentarily took the lead, and also scored the team's last points of the season with a foul shot at the end of the championship game.

Jack Carrier played power forward and center and proved, time and again, his ability to box out and out-rebound opponents who, at times, towered over him. With his jump hook and soft touch mid-range jumper, Jack made opponents pay every time they left him any room to maneuver in the paint. Jack had a huge game in an early season win, at home, against a very tall and athletic Hanson squad. Toward the end of the season Jack played the entire game in the one-point, away game win over Silver Lake, pulling down an impressive 14 rebounds.

Alex Harper played small forward, but also saw time at the guard positions. Alex was dangerous outside shooter and played solid defense, particularly when called upon to seal off the top of the key in the triangle and two defense.

Robert Jones started every game at shooting guard, and also saw time at point guard. Robert often scored the first basket of the game off of the opening tip, was the leader of the team's fast break offense, and penetrated the lane. Robert supplied airtight defense when full-court or man-to-man pressure was applied and led the team in steals.

Michael Monaco played point guard and shooting guard. Mike displayed excellent judgment on the court, both in running the half-court offense and in his own, excellent shot selection. When Mike took a shot during a game, it was always a good one. Mike probably had the highest shooting percentage on the team, and was never out hustled. Mike was always the first person in the game to hit the floor whenever there was a loose ball waiting to be claimed.

Kelby "KJ" Pontes played the power forward and center positions, and was in the starting line-up for most games this season. KJ has extraordinary leaping ability, and was the type of offensive threat that kept opposing coaches up nights worrying. KJ was known for his graceful moves to the basket from the high post, and intimidated anyone who tried to take the ball down low. KJ never gave up when the other team ran a fast break, coming from behind to make many opponents who thought they had easy, uncontested lay-ups eat leather instead as he turned away their shot. KJ led the team in blocked shots and, about once a game, made a play that brought the crowd to its feet.

Sam Richardson primarily played at small forward, but also saw some time in the guard positions. Sam was an all-around offensive threat who could take the ball to the basket and also shoot from the outside. Sam has a signature, high off the backboard glass move that was virtually unstoppable. Sam's instant offense was on display in the championship game when he helped expand the Cohasset lead.

Gabe Seksay played the center position and was in the starting line-up for most games. Gabe was chairman of the boards, gobbling up rebounds on the offensive and defensive end, and often triggered a fast break with outlet passes down the court. Gabe frequently shut down the opponent's big man with his defense, and was also a low-post scoring threat, as indicated by the game-high 20 points he added to his 19 rebounds in the first round playoff win against Taunton.

Eric Wasel played the center and power forward positions. In addition to snagging rebounds whenever he was on the floor, Eric had a soft touch from anywhere near the basket and was a major offensive threat in the low post. Late in the season Eric helped seal a close win at home against Weymouth by going into the game at the high post and hitting a foul line jumper to put Cohasset into the lead for good.

Derek "Iceman" Youngman played point guard, starting most games at that position, and also sometimes filled the shooting guard role. Derek did an excellent job handling the ball against defensive pressure, and rotated the ball with quick passes when running half court offenses. Derek was a dangerous outside shooter that made defenses pay for leaving him open, and also penetrated the key with a variety of jump stop moves. Derek earned the nickname "Iceman" for his ability to shrug off pressure and hit foul shots with the game on his line, as he did in both the semi-final playoff win against Silver Lake and in the championship game against Abington.

Ed Seksay, Jay Monaco, and Joe Campbell coached the 7th grade team. One of the best games the 7th grade boys played all season was seen only by Coaches Seksay and Campbell, because it occurred during an hour-long team scrimmage held during the last practice before February school vacation. The team was split in two and, in honor of its league-leading offense, played a scrimmage that required 45 points to win. The lead was traded back and forth throughout the scrimmage, and the game itself went into overtime.

Gallotta said his team started out somewhat sloppy defensively, but played flawlessly over the last four innings. With that said, the coach believes there is plenty of room for improvement.

"They're young and they're going to learn by making mistakes," Gallotta said. The Skippers have six seniors on the roster this season: Bryan, first basemen Brian Straughn and Will Pinkus, center fielder Chris Ofsthun, shortstop Nick Zappolo and outfielder Brendan Barrett. Bryan, Straughn and Ofthsun are the team captains.

Zappolo and Ofsthun figure to be regulars at the top of the Skippers lineup card, but beyond that, there could be a fair amount of shuffling. Gallotta says there has been a lot of competition for spots during the preseason, and he plans to look at everyone on the roster early in the season before settling on a consistent lineup.

Bryan will play third when he's not pitching, and Kyle Pinkus will split those duties. The sophomore could also see some action behind the plate.

Doonan and junior Corbin Faber are in a battle to start at second, and Gallotta says whomever gets the hot bat or glove first will likely see more regular playing time. Smalzel could occasionally spell Zappolo at short, and Hill is also an option at third base.

Hill may also play some outfield, as one of Gallotta's goals is to make his players as versatile as possible. Barrett, junior John Harrington and sophomore Alex Goetz, who got the start in left against Sacred Heart, are both also in the outfield mix.

On the mound, Bryan and Hill figure to be the Skippers' top two options. DeGiacomo and fellow sophomore Dave Snowdale, who looked good in a preseason scrimmage, will also get some innings. Straughn and Harrington are also pitching possibilities.

Cohasset played Abington yesterday and host Avon this afternoon at 4. Next week, the boys travel to Carver on Monday and host Harwich the following day. Many are tabbing Harwich, last year's Division 3 South champions, as the favorites in the South Shore League this season.

Elections held for Student Advisory Council

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Congratulations to Mike Corry and Jean Thomae for being elected to these prestigious positions.

I am sitting here staring out the window expecting to see trees blossoming and birds singing, but to my dismay, snow and dark clouds are overtaking the sky reminding me that I still live in New England. It's sad really, Mother Nature pleased everybody when she decided to make the first few days of spring sunny and warm; but she has now made herself some enemies, for sure, by casting this cold weather and rain upon us. Enough about the weather, it will have changed by the time you read this anyway, let's see what we have on tap for school news this week.

Elections for next year's Student Advisory Council were held on Friday and Monday. Congratulations to Mike Corry and Jean Thomae for being elected to these prestigious positions. The Student Advisory Council is a student council like organization that is made up of student representatives from schools all over the greater Boston area. They meet once a month in Malden to discuss issues in their schools that range from violence to budget concerns.

This week has already been a wild one with Boys Varsity Baseball, Girls Tennis, and Boys and Girls Varsity Lacrosse all winning their first matches of the season; big ups. Now here we go for the news this week, which are both bountiful in amount and knowledge.

• A theater improvisational called the Urban Improv Group is coming to the middle school next Tuesday to address the issues of bullying and harassment via skits for every grade level.

• Mr. Buckley's Outdoor Education class assisted in cleaning up a beached whale that had somehow landed on Sandy Beach this past Tuesday.

• A reminder to all seniors: Scholarship forms are due back to Ms. Leahy in the Guidance Office by April 12th. She is also asking that seniors report any new acceptances to update the schools records.

• The Art Magazine will have met on Wednesday.

• The high school Softball Team is recruiting eighth grade girls to construct a Junior Varsity team.

• An informational meeting for cheerleaders interested in joining next years fall squad was held on Thursday.

• The C.P. Harvey Scholarship Fund presents a Gala Jazz Concert featuring The Greg Hopkins Quintet and The Cohasset Jazz Ensemble. This event will take place on April 5th at 7:30 p.m. in the Gallery of Cohasset Middle High School. Admission is $8 for students and $15 for adults.

• Congratulations to the sophomore class for completing the English portion of the MCAS.

• The Family Feud fundraiser will take place this Friday; good luck to all of the teams that will participate in this wonderful event.

• There will be a meeting for the senior class on Monday regarding events for the end of the year.

• The sixth-grade students presented "Countries" to their parents. They picked different countries from around Europe and made a mock travel log to educate their parents.

• There was a Basketball Boosters Pizza Party on Tuesday night.

• The Cohasset Diversity Committee will have met in the Library on Friday.

• The Cohasset High School has created a group called "The Lockets", where peers comfort and support each other through tough times. With the help of Mr. Levene supervising, this group will be held once a week on Wednesdays, starting April 5th, during lunch time in Mr. Foy's room. Currently, we are in the process of forming "The Lockets". By receiving this letter, we the faculty can observe and look out for students in the need of this group. If you know anyone in need of this group please contact Amanda Simpson (student leader) or Mr. Levene.

Soy terminado y adios amigos. That's a little Spanish for you in keeping with the spirit of the "Countries" presentation by the sixth grade students. It means "I am finished and goodbye friends."

From fear factor to fun

Expand your mind – and career – by learning a foreign language

Our mouths perform a miracle everyday: We speak. The process of forming a thought, combining it with facts stored in memory, then configuring it through a complex set of paradigms including grammar, syntax and vocabulary, is remarkable. And that's just what goes on in your brain.

From there the message must travel across the cerebral hemispheres of your brain, and signals are sent to activate a series of muscles. Your diaphragm, vocal cords, throat, tongue and lips all must coordinate at lightning speed to articulate that single thought into speech.

An additional aspect is cultural protocol. There is a difference in our voice, slang and body language depending on whether we are chatting casually with friends or formally in a business setting. If that business meeting happens abroad, then our communications must be filtered through another layer of cultural etiquette, with a new set of rules.

It is well documented that children learn languages easily, but that capacity lessens as we age. Adults attempt to learn a foreign language for many reasons including work, travel, adopting a baby from another country and romance. Some do it to improve their social skills. Learning a new language is also thought to create new neural pathways and improve memory and problem-solving skills, like aerobic exercises for the old noodle.

There are many options for adult language classes in the greater Boston area, from weekly classes to small private groups based on skill levels. Most teachers are either native speakers or have lived and studied in foreign countries. This helps to teach cultural nuances not written in a textbook.

Nancy Bayer, coordinator for the Framingham State College Center for Lifelong Learners, sets up off-campus programs throughout the year at senior centers and independent/assisted living communities. The winter 2006 Spanish class taught at the Sudbury Senior Center by Mark Perlmutter, adjunct faculty member of Framingham State College, has been a huge success. The room is filled to capacity with approximately 40 people in class, with a student population from young seniors of 60 to folks in their 80s.

The Sudbury Senior Center's board of directors decided last year that they needed a Spanish class "so their community could become more informed citizens of the world," explained Executive Director of Sudbury Senior Center Kris Kiesel.

She went on to describe Mark Perlmutter's method of teaching as being very interactive, with a few handouts but no text. Instead, by pairing a physical movement – like waving the hand while learning the word for hello – helps to link the physical movement with the alternative pathways in the brain.

"That way the language becomes an innate part of knowledge instead of just something memorized," explained Kiesel.

Kiesel reported that research shows new learning is integral to preventing diseases of aging, so if someone has always done crosswords puzzles, that becomes habitual, but doing the same activity in a new language is like mental calisthenics.

"Learning a new language is part of a well-rounded healthy lifestyle including physical activity, mental activity and healthy eating," said Kiesel.

For those wishing to learn more than just casual conversational Spanish, BASE (Boston Area Spanish Exchange) offers specialized classes, with a maximum of six students each, that meet one to four times a week. Lorena Calderon, a native Colombian and the director of BASE, says the first priority for determining class placement is to find students' compatibility, fluency and grammatical knowledge. From that point, the students' interests guide the curriculum.

"Most people are taking classes for work," explains Calderon. "In the past, we mostly had social workers who needed to talk with immigrants. Today we have students from health industries, multinational corporations, customer service, retail, public safety, marketing, attorneys and security." Calderon went on to explain that having another language helps open doors and makes people more employable.

Wellesley College Summer School offers courses in German, Russian and Spanish. Registration for the co-educational classes is underway, and there are two sessions: June 19-July 14 and July 17-Aug. 11.

Newton Community Education offers classes in French, Italian and Spanish, including advanced conversation, with new classes in Chinese, Arabic and Yiddish for the spring. Many of their instructors are native speakers from Colombia, Peru, Lebanon, Italy and China, or have spent time abroad.

Newton's adult program coordinator Kate Frazer explains that beyond grammar and pronunciation, their classes explore the cultural aspects of history and traditions. To accomplish this, some classes incorporate field trips, such as an Italian class visiting the North End.

Frazer says learning another language expands job opportunities in today's global community. Learning greetings and basic manners can be a huge asset, whether traveling for business or pleasure, as it enhances the experience. You come away with a richer understanding of the people you meet when you can communicate in their native tongue, and consequently both sides get more out of the experience.

"Learning about different cultures makes your mind expand," says Frazer. She adds that by learning a foreign language, you often gain an understanding of how your own language works as you become aware of structures and usage that you took for granted. To that end, Newton also offers a class in "Small Talk: Art of Social Conversation," for those students facing conversational challenges in English.

The Assabet Valley Center for Continuing Education in Marlborough offers classes in Italian, French, Spanish, Chinese, German, Portuguese and ESL for native speakers. Courses are geared for travel, business and fun. Bill Heinold teaches both German, which was his first language, and Chinese, which he learned in China.

Having been an adult learner, Heinold is aware that beyond the teen years language is more difficult to learn. He says the way to overcome any trepidation students may have is to acknowledge their fear in the very first class, often with humor. He tells his students, "There will be no thinking in this class, it will simply be reaction – that's what conversation is all about."

Heinold says learning a language is not about logical thinking or memorizing facts; that kind of thinking will actually interfere with the process. After relaxing their fears, Heinold teaches his students to tune in to their hearing and train their reactions. He accomplishes this through total immersion in the foreign language by posing a question, modeling the correct response and repeating it until his students learn how to answer it.

In the first meeting of his Chinese class, Heinold raises his hand in greeting while repeating "Ni Hao" until his students eventually repeat it back. They've just learned how to say "hello."

Wolfgang Klinger, 39, grew up in Bavaria and learned German, French, Latin and English in high school. As a software engineer for EMC, his motivation for learning Chinese was both personal – his wife is Chinese – and professional – he has Chinese business colleagues.

Klinger enjoyed learning Chinese from Heinold, who also teaches at various corporations including EMC and Raytheon, because "he turned the fear factor into the fun factor." Klinger says he had a certain comfort level with the familiar aspects of western languages, but that Chinese was a mystery. For example, Chinese has no tenses, just one tense with contextual markers like "today" or "yesterday" to establish time frames. Another problem for Western thinkers is that one word can have four meanings depending on the tone or context of how it is used in a sentence.

When Klinger attends business meetings in Hong Kong there is still a translator for contract negotiations. However, he has experienced a shift since he learned some basic Chinese. "Even if you just know numbers, and understand the context of conversation, you've a better feeling for what is going on, and are not lost at sea," he says. "By simply repeating a number, the Chinese executives realize that you understand something in their language, and instead of being an outsider, you become a team player."

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

A personalized college stay can be beneficial

By Catherine Beyer Hurst
SIMMONS COLLEGE

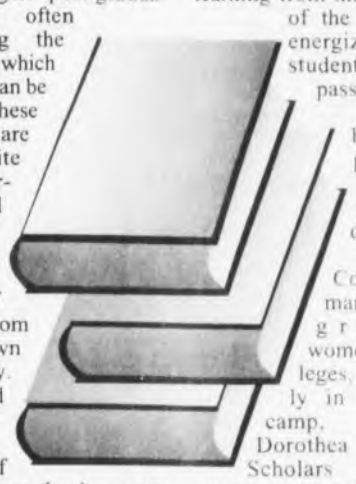
During the next five years, the largest increase in college students in the United States will come from adult full-time students under the age of 35, especially the 25- to 29-year-old group. These motivated twenty-somethings did not complete a bachelor's degree at a traditional age for a variety of reasons – perhaps because of family caregiving responsibilities, personal circumstances, parenthood, the cost of a higher education or even teenage immaturity.

The consequences for women who did not complete a degree can be particularly challenging. Women, who still make less than 80 cents for every dollar men earn, may struggle more at the lower rungs of employment. Many traditional high-paying jobs for those without a college education (such as those in the building trades or municipal services) are harder for them to obtain.

In their late 20s, these women recognize that the lack of a college degree is hurting their career prospects and often they become extremely dedicated and focused students.

It is probably not surprising, therefore, that data from the National Center for Education Statistics show the number of adult women in college will continue to grow faster than the number of men during the coming years.

My Simmons colleague Lesley Kinzel and I completed extensive research into the way that educational institutions present themselves in the adult market. We found that institutions marketing themselves to adult students fall into two categories. The first is a results-based orientation, focusing almost exclusively on the benefits of the attained degree post-graduation, and often emphasizing the speed with which the degree can be obtained. These institutions are usually quite large, offering a broad range of courses and the prestige of a degree from a well-known university. They tend to emphasize the benefits of the degree on the long-term career success of the student, and do not attempt to recreate any sense of the "college experience." They typically offer an evening/ weekend program that segregates the adult learner from the institution's traditional younger population.



The second category of institution marketing has more of a process-based orientation, offering individualized education culminating in an undergraduate degree as a life-enhancing experience in and of itself. These institutions believe that creating a supportive community of learners by integrating adult students into their traditional-age classes creates value for both audiences – giving traditional students the benefits of learning from the experience of the adults, and energizing adult students with the passion, energy (and often better computer skills) of traditional students.

Simmons College, like many undergraduate women's colleges, falls squarely in the second camp, and its Dorothea Lynde Dix Scholars program attracts women 24 and older who seek the value of an education that combines professional preparation and liberal arts. While the emphasis is definitely on the experience throughout the Dix Scholars program, the recent development of a combined BA/MBA program in the Simmons School of Management, the only business school in the world designed specifically for women, allows women who want to make up for lost time to combine the best of both worlds. They have the opportunity to enjoy the process-oriented learning experience of a small women's college, and yet can gain faster access to their ultimate professional credentials through the accelerated MBA program.

Career opportunities for women with degrees in management abound, with Department of Labor data showing that the fastest growing careers for students with a bachelor's degree and some work experience include information technology managers, marketing managers (public relations, advertising, promotion, and sales), medical/health service managers, management analysts, and financial managers.

Women currently fill [illegible] percent of management roles in U.S. organizations – [illegible] from only 4 percent 30 short years ago. Women who are thinking of returning to college should see the MBA as an attainable degree – even if they have stopped out part-time their education several years.

Cathe[illegible] Beyer Hurst is the director of the Simmons College undergraduate management degree[illegible] programs and an assistant professor of marketing in the Simmons School of Management. In addition to the undergraduate management programs, the SSOM offers the only MBA program in the country targeted exclusively for women, executive education programs for senior executives in large corporations.

Audience development

Entertainment and sports share parallel needs to fill up the seats

By Susan L. Smith
CLARK UNIVERSITY
BLUE PUMPKIN PRODUCTIONS

Suppose you're responsible for growing the number of people who attend a regional theater company. Perhaps you're the marketing and promotions director for a new minor league baseball team. Or, you're looking for a way to get the new symphony orchestra on the cultural map and want to plan a special fund-raising benefit as a kick-off.

Clark University's College of Professional and Continuing Education is offering a course this fall for those presently engaged in marketing and promoting entertainment and sports organizations and for those about to enter these fields.

The course, titled "Audience Development, Event Planning and Promotion," is part of Clark's graduate program in professional communications, but is open to anyone with a bachelor's degree. Periodic guest lecturers will provide new perspectives on various issues relating to audience development.

The term "audience development" is a complex and extensive umbrella covering many areas of communications, public relations, marketing and planning. Students in the course will learn some of the basics of identifying, growing and nurturing an audience base through continuous building of an in-house mailing list and personalizing communications. They'll learn how to structure a series package or subscription with special perks; to provide periodic newsletters; and to craft a group sales program.

The class will also cover how to communicate effectively with the media, both print and electronic, through rigorous maintenance of a press data base to keep contacts current and appropriate follow up. They'll learn how to make use of photos; understand the press release and the public service announcement; and pitch ideas for feature stories and on-air interviews.

Other topics include:

➤Devising proposals for corporate and media sponsorships (preparing the proposal packet; creating the benefits and recognition opportunities)

➤Planning productive fund-raising benefit events start-to-finish

➤Getting the most from collaborative promotional activities (working with area restaurants, hotels, businesses and nonprofit organizations)

➤Crafting and utilizing direct mail and understanding how to deliver your message to get the response you wish; tracking your responses; following up promptly

➤Getting creative with barter and in-kind transactions to stretch limited budgets (learning what each half of the trade partnership has to offer; maintaining careful records of all transactions)

➤Stepping out in public (public speaking, radio interviews)

➤Crisis communications (handling negative news; responding to audience complaints; acting instead of reacting).

Course participants will learn principles they can apply to the enormously satisfying goals of building and retaining audiences. They will also learn how to strengthen relations with the general public and business communities supporting their organizations.

As an introduction to this full semester course, under the banner of Blue Pumpkin Productions, a half-day workshop will be offered on Tuesday, Aug. 8 at Clark University. The workshop, from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., will focus on the series package or subscription campaign; working effectively with media; communicating with audiences; seeking corporate sponsorships; pursuing other promotional avenues; and special fund-raising benefit events.

For enrollment information on the Fall semester course at Clark University's College of Professional and Continuing Education, contact Director of Graduate Programs Max Hess at mhess@clarku.edu or 508-793-7212. For details on the audience development course and on the Aug. 8 workshop, contact Susan L. Smith, adjunct professor, COPACE and PR/Marketing Director, Blue Pumpkin Productions: bluepumpkinprod@ verizon.net or 508-757-1472.

Susan L. Smith co-founded the regional Equity theatre company, Worcester Foothills Theatre, and served as its associate producer/PR & marketing director from 1974-1999. She subsequently co-founded Blue Pumpkin Productions which offers workshops and consulting services to performing arts organizations, individual artists, and nonprofit organizations. 'Inside' tout

Inside Man (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Detective Frazier (Denzel Washington) has an off-hours meeting with the mysterious Madeline White (Jodie Foster).

If I see a better mainstream American film than Spike Lee's "Inside Man" in 2006, I will be very happy — and surprised.

The film, a thriller about hostage-taking bank robbers in New York City, is more than merely flawlessly cast and marvelously acted and directed. It is also a polyphonic, multiracial meditation on post-9/11 America and yet another Lee love song to the city of his dreams: New York, New York.

Can you believe the whole thing starts out to the percussive beat of music by legendary Bollywood composer A.R. Rahman?

Detective Keith Frazier (Denzel Washington with Kojak cue-ball head and added pounds), a sharp-dressing hostage negotiator, has his hands full. He's under suspicion after $140,000 goes missing during a bust. His freaky girlfriend (Cassandra Freeman) has got to have it (marriage, that is). Her brother, who lives with her, is a jobless drunk, and Frazier's superior (Peter Gerety) has assigned him to take over a standoff at the venerable Wall Street bank Manhattan Trust.

Inside are 50 hostages representing a feisty cross-section of New York City and a band of masked robbers armed with AK-47s and a .357 revolver. Their leader (a commanding Clive Owen) has threatened to start killing them by twos and tossing their bodies into the street if his demands are not met.

Arthur Case (Christopher Plummer), the wealthy, leonine banker who established Manhattan Trust shortly after World War II, has a dark secret. With the mayor's backing, the mysterious Madeline White (a lean, witty and, well, white Jodie Foster) has been given a place of authority in the negotiations. Along with his partner, Detective Bill Mitchell (Chiwetel Ejiofor, who makes George Clooney look homely), Frazier suspects the killers are stalling and that they have some other goal in mind.

If you can imagine a modern-day American heist movie engineered by Simon Wiesenthal, you have some idea of the film's ingenuity. The script by first-timer and Tufts graduate Russell Gewirtz is taut, exciting, intelligent and fast-paced.

Instead of the white-black duo most American films give us, we get two professional black men, negotiators who also "negotiate" the complexities of the New York City police department. A scene in which Frazier questions a racist but competent and courageous beat cop (Victor Colicchio) speaks volumes about ethnic politics in the American workplace.

When we think of the great hostage-taking films, we think of Sidney Lumet's "Dog Day Afternoon" (1975), John McTiernan's "Die Hard" (1988) and the lesser known, if no less great "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three" (1974) — and "Inside Man" ranks with them. And like Lumet's landmark film, which is in fact named by Frazier, "Inside Man" is about much more than a bank robbery.

All the hostages are dressed and masked to resemble the robbers, rendering them free of identity and race, if not gender. But when the cops unmask a blindfolded person sent outside with a package and find a bearded man in a turban, they immediately assume he's an Arab suicide bomber, although he turns out to be a Sikh named Vikram (Waris Ahluwalia). A white bank manager uses Kanye West's "Gold Digger" as his ringtone. Owen's thief is appalled by a racist and violent video game being played by the 8-year-old son (Amir Ali Said) of a hostage.

Down to the smallest role, the cast is first-rate, and the film may be worth seeing just to hear someone call Foster a very bad name and to hear her respond, "Thank you." When Washington is at the top of his game, as he is here, he doesn't speak his lines; he sings them. His greatest performances are a delightful form of behavioral opera and an aural delight.

Working with talented cinematographer Matthew Libatique ("Requiem for a Dream") and veteran producer Brian Grazer, Lee demonstrates a masterful grasp of the filmmaker's art. Viewers should be especially amused by the unspoken connections he makes between a police siege and shooting a film on the streets of Manhattan. Frankly, I have been waiting for years for Lee to stop taking stands and just make a great movie.

Here it is. Who's the "inside man" now?

Rated R. "Inside Man" contains violence and profanity.

Tour of Beauty

Journey to Vietnam for breathtaking landscape, enchanting culture

By FRAN GOLDEN

DANANG, Vietnam -- The old woman wearing a traditional conical straw hat came up to me on the street and smiled a toothless smile. "Where you from?" she asked.

I told her I was American.

"Totally awesome," she replied, her smile growing broader.

"Totally awesome," I agreed, but it was her country I was talking about.

Up to this point, my thoughts of Vietnam were based on news reports of the Vietnam War and movies such as "Apocalypse Now" and "Good Morning Vietnam." My 18-year-old son, Eli, who was with me on this trip, knew the movies too, and a little history. But, like the people we encountered here, we felt no need to dwell on the past.

And that's OK. What Vietnam offers today's traveler is not just war memories, but stunning scenery, a fascinating culture and a very warm welcome. It's one of the most intriguing places available to travelers.

Yet I have to admit I was nervous about coming here, to a Third World country I knew little about.

So rather than go the individual traveler route, we flew to Hong Kong and boarded the sleek, luxury cruiseship Silver Shadow, operated by Silversea Cruises. In addition to set itineraries, the Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based cruise line offers what it calls "Personalized Voyages," where you can construct your own itinerary. So with Vietnam our focus, we arranged a five-day cruise on the 380-passenger ship, from Hong Kong with port calls in Vietnam.

Hanoi

Driving by tour bus from our first port (Halong Bay) into Hanoi we passed rice paddies and shared the road with many motorbikes (the main means of transport here; few people own cars).

We thought the country roadways were crazy. We were unprepared for Hanoi.

In this city you are confronted with a hectic mix of unfamiliar sights and sounds and smells -- masses of motorbikes you have to dodge when you cross the street, the near constant sound of horns honking, women with conical hats carrying poles with baskets, people wearing spooky, white face masks to protect from the soot and germs, food vendors on the street selling things such as cooked pigeons with their heads still on, buildings literally covered with advertising.

As the capital of North Vietnam, the city was heavily bombed during the Vietnam War. Still there are reminders of the past in today's city including French colonial architecture and 1,000-year-old temples and pagodas. Amid the hustle and bustle, the city of more than 3 1/2 million boasts much greenery and many lakes -- the lake where U.S. Sen. John McCain was shot down during the war now has swan boats to rent (the prison in which he was a POW is now a Hilton hotel). There is no McDonald's. There is fine dining, really nice hotels and some high-end shopping options.

The Ho Chi Minh Mausoleum is austerely Soviet, modeled on Lenin's tomb in Moscow. "Uncle Ho," who began the communist revolution in 1949 and died in 1969 (six years before unified Communist Vietnam was established) is embalmed here and can be viewed under glass in his khaki suit.

Magical Halong Bay

Yet you get the idea that communism may be a loose term here. In the park near the memorial we spotted guards in austere uniforms smoking cigarettes and listening to iPods.

Halong Bay

Recognized by UNESCO, Halong Bay couldn't be any more different from Hanoi. We sat in a Vietnamese junk (boat) and cruised into the mist of the large, calm bay past giant, craggy limestone formations protruding from the sea. According to legend, the 3,000 islands were formed by a dragon who fell from the sky, sent by the gods to protect against Chinese invaders.

The islands are mostly uninhabited and many form odd shapes -- one looks like a man's face in profile, another like two cocks fighting. The views will make you forget you're on earth. It's awe-inspiring.

Our junk tour took us to a floating village, below steep cliffs, where Eli and I maneuvered a two-person kayak around floating homes. We were greeted by barking dogs and the occasional shout of "hello" from residents, and "dollar!" from boat vendors selling groceries (which we didn't need as delicious fresh seafood and Vietnamese beer was served on the junk). The dollar refrain was echoed by a couple of beggars on boats.

Our trip included a stop at Surprise Cave, a former Viet Cong hangout, a massive hole in a mountain (you reach it by climbing steep wooden steps from the boat pier) spectacularly filled with stalagmites and stalactites.

Danang

It was in Danang that U.S. troops first landed in 1965, and the city became a major U.S. base. Nearby China Beach provided sand and surf as a recreation center for the troops (and inspired the TV show of the same name). The city fell to the Viet Cong in 1975, signaling the South's defeat in the war.

Today Danang is a commercial center, the fourth-largest city in Vietnam, and does not offer much in the way of tourist attractions -- nor is it particularly picturesque.

So after a brief look-see, we headed about seven miles outside the city to the Marble Mountains. The five mountains are each named for the elements. Tho Son (earth) is the highest peak and visitors can climb 153 steps to the top for tremendous views of Danang, China Beach and the Pacific Ocean beyond, as well as temples and shrines, some located in caves, most recreations of those destroyed in the war -- the Viet Cong hid out here, too. Below the mountains, the town of Non Nuoc produces marble goods and there are numerous production studios and stalls selling everything from tiny folk figures and chess sets to giant statuary. The vendors can be aggressive. On his way to the tour bus, Eli was followed down the mountain by no fewer than a dozen teenage girls offering marble goods. He did not object.

Hoi An

It was this little resort town that really stole our hearts and had us vowing to return to Vietnam.

About 22 miles from Danang (we arrived by car and driver), Hoi An is a historic town recognized by UNESCO. The narrow streets are filled with well-preserved architecture (temples, houses, meeting halls) that reflect its role as a major port from the 16th to 18th centuries. Today the town boasts a wonderfully quaint atmosphere -- you can sit in a cafe, visit the crafts shops, relax on the beach, poke around the market, chat with friendly locals.

The town is also known for its expert tailor shops, and so we landed at Dung Tailor, which we scientifically picked among the dozens of similar shops as it was the first one we spotted.

We showed up early evening and advised the owner, Mrs. Duyen Dung, that we were leaving town early the next day. No problem. Our measurements were taken and Eli ordered up a custom-made three-piece suit in heavy silk ($65), while I ordered a jacket and skirt in linen ($40). Mrs. Dung told us to come back in four hours.

We used the time to dine at the finest restaurant in town, Brother's Cafe, where the set menu and drinks cost us only $45 (and we gorged on corn and crab soup, sweet and sour fish, eggplant, meat dumplings and more).

Wandering around town, we stopped at a bar for beers -- 75 cents a pint -- and at shops where we bought silk scarves, purses and neckties as souvenirs (at prices that were a steal).

When we arrived back at Mrs. Dung's tiny, fabric-filled shop it was 10 p.m., and Eli's jacket needed some minor adjusting, as did my suit. Not to worry. The tailor would work until the job was finished.

While Eli rough-housed with Mrs. Dung's 7-year-old son (much to the kid's delight), she and I sat and talked. We asked for details about each other's lives, using sign language when English failed us, and somewhere in our conversation the hugging started.

She asked me my age, and showed me her wrinkles. She was younger than me, but her face showed that her life was harder.

Our clothes arrived. It was 11 p.m. We hugged a final time. As I was walking to my cab, Mrs. Dung came running after me. "Please come again next year," she said, smiling.

'Big' override backers win

Carr, Flynn, Fusco win seats

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The candidates, who declared their support for the $1.495 million override, took the day Saturday winning two seats on the School Committee and one on the Board of Selectmen.

That result may bode well for the historic override vote in the special election May 6. If the $1.495 override passes, it would be the highest Prop. 2-1/2 general override by more than double, ever in Cohasset. The next highest override of $659,000 passed in 1988. Prop. 2-1/2 is the state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its annual tax levy without voter approval.

Some 48 percent or 2,455 of the town's 5,099 registered voters went to the polls Saturday. By way of comparison, last year's town election — that featured a two-way race for one seat on the School Committee and a three-way race for two seats on the Board of Selectmen — drew 44 percent.

Edwin "Ted" Carr, 38, of South Main Street, who has only lived in town 2-1/2 years and has not held elected or appointed office in Cohasset, edged out lifelong resident Roger Hill, 46, of Highland Avenue by 71 votes to fill a selectman's seat. Carr came out strongly for the larger override, while Hill supported the $725,000 override. Hill, who serves on the Advisory Committee, has run for selectmen twice before in 2002 and 2003.

Hill said Saturday's results showed the higher override is a "done deal."

"The $1.495 override will pass without a doubt," he said. "There are not enough old residents out there to vote it down — there are too many young families with children getting out and voting for the override as a single issue. They don't care about the harbor, downtown revitalization or senior housing."

"If the schools go down the drain, it's not good for anyone. I tried to focus on the 'big picture.'"
— Rick Flynn
School Committee

But Carr, who said he enjoyed using his campaign as an opportunity to introduce himself around town, said winning the override will be all about organization. "The candidate election results indicate the people for the override organized well," he said. "However, opposition could organize better in time for the override election. It will be important for those supporting the override to get out the vote on May 6 if they want to win."

Carr said he did not think Saturday's vote was solely on the override issue. "I believe the override is a symptom of larger trends that include reduced state funding, higher school enrollment (with higher course requirements and cost), heavy reliance on the residential tax base and our debt service requirements.

"I believe voters chose the people they thought could better

Deans say they intend to appeal

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If four out of nine border collies owned by Meadow Lane residents Mia and John Dean cannot be placed in suitable border collie rescue facilities, all four must be put to sleep.

That is one condition of an order handed down by the Board of Selectmen Monday, as a result of a behavioral analysis conducted on all nine dogs. While the Dean family has been given permission to keep five of its dogs, the order requires they all be neutered and restrained at all times, either on a leash, or in an enclosure built on the family's property. The family must also find homes for five roughly 3-month-old puppies which the board had not previously been told about.

The order is a combination of recommendations given by Dr. Amy Marder, Director of Behavioral Service for the Animal Rescue League of Boston, who conducted the behavioral evaluations, and Town Manager Bill Griffin, who serves as the town's dog hearing officer. The order comes as a result of a string of incidents involving the dogs threatening and/or biting four Cohasset residents.

Border collies are by nature sheep-herding dogs, and tend to try to "herd" people by circling in a pack and biting to try to get a person to go where they want them to go, much as they would with a sheep. The biting has not been confined to pack attacks, as there was one incident where a single dog bit a resident.

"I'm sorry, but I don't see we

Selectmen reorganize

The Board of Selectmen reorganized at its April 11 meeting. Ralph Dormitzer was voted in as chairman, replacing Fred Koed, and Rob Spofford was voted in as Vice Chairman, replacing Dormitzer. "Thanks for the vote, I really appreciate it," said Dormitzer, adding "I hope I can satisfy everyone as chairman of the board."

Selectmen change weekly meeting night

The Board of Selectmen will meet on Monday nights from now on. Selectman Gary Vanderweil had suggested the change more than one month ago, and the board agreed it was only fair to wait until the new member of the board was voted in after the April 8 Town Election. Newly elected Selectman Ted Carr agreed to the change and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he will draft a new meeting schedule with April 24 as the next meeting date.

Beached whale mystery being pieced together

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Scientists from Cape Ann to Cape Cod are intrigued with the whale which washed up on Cohasset's shores Monday, April 3.

Sinclaire said she has never heard of a Cuvier's beaked whale coming ashore in this part of the country before.

Sarah Bean, right, biologist with the N.E. Aquarium, strains under the weight of a beaked whale on Sandy Beach last week as she and Sheila Sinclaire, left, try to move the whale off its side so it could be placed in a special sling.

Over the past week, biologists at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, in conjunction with the New England Aquarium, have been studying the animal, and it has been determined the whale is a Cuvier's beaked whale.

According to the American Cetacean Society, Cuvier's beaked whales are also known as goosebeak whales, and are one of 20 named species of beaked whales. They are found in all the oceans of the world except the polar regions of both hemispheres. They prefer deep water of more than 3,300 feet and avoid shallow coastal areas.

"Beaked whales of other species have come ashore in Maine and other areas," said Sheila Sinclaire, a biologist with the New England Aquarium who is also a Cohasset resident. Sinclaire was one of the biologists who responded to the scene when the whale was discovered. However, she said she has never heard of a Cuvier's beaked whale coming ashore in this part of the country before. "It was an absolutely beautiful animal."

Sinclaire said the whale was a juvenile male, which was established due to the fact that he did not have any teeth. "They only get two teeth, and that's why they're called beaked whales," she said, and those teeth had not yet poked through on the animal found in Cohasset, which means he was rather young. Sinclaire said the animal was also not yet full grown as they are typically between 15 to 23 feet in length as adults. The whale found in Cohasset was roughly 13-1/2 feet long.

Preliminary tests done on the whale show it did have a bacterial infection, which may have been the reason it beached itself in Cohasset. "There was a bacterial infection in his lungs and there were reactive lymph nodes," said Sinclaire. "He also had parasites in his GI (gastrointestinal) tract, but that is not uncommon," she said, adding many animals live a healthy life with a number of parasites living inside. However, she said there were more parasites than would typically be seen, which could indicate when the animal got sick and its immune system was compromised, the parasites took advantage of the opportunity and began to multiply, making the whale even more sick.

Sinclaire said a necropsy, or animal autopsy, was completed on the animal and various pieces have been sent to labs which have particular specialties. She said it could take anywhere from two weeks to one month before all the results are back.

The whale beached itself on Sandy Beach at roughly 6 p.m. Monday, April 3. He came in with the tide, and remained on shore when the tide went out. At that point, he was still alive, but due to his condition, biologists from the New England Aquarium made the decision to euthanize the animal. Members of the Cohasset Department of Public Works helped move the whale to higher ground to keep it from being carried away when the tide came in again.

The following morning, the DPW came back once again and moved the whale by attaching a large sling to a front loader to carry the animal off the beach and onto a flatbed truck to be transported to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Falmouth for further study.

Even one week later, Sinclaire said she is still overwhelmed with the support and cooperation shown by the town of Cohasset, and even more so the DPW. She said when strandings take place, more often than not a town will expect it is someone else's problem to remove the animal, and Cohasset's reaction time was so quick, it made a big impression. She said due to the freshness of the whale upon its arrival, it will be invaluable for researchers.

Book closes on school building projects

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There is good news and there is bad news in regards to the town's school building projects. The bad news is, the reimbursement the town was scheduled to receive for the Osgood School project is decreasing. The good news is, the town can expect to see an additional $1.1 million in state reimbursement for the Deer Hill and middle-high school projects.

While receiving an additional $1.1 million might sound like the town's solution to passing an override, the funds must be used specifically to reduce the amount of debt added to the tax rate annually. Simply put, the money must go back to the taxpayers who voted to fund the projects, and cannot be added to the town's budget.

The final audits for all three school building projects were recently approved by the Massachusetts School Building Authority, which allowed the state to finalize a reimbursement schedule. Funding for the Osgood project is being paid back to the town over a 20-year period, while funding for the Deer Hill and middle-high school projects will be paid in two lump sums.

When the town embarked on the Osgood School building project, there was a different set of guidelines in place for school project reimbursement. The town was required to borrow 100 percent of the estimated project cost as well as estimated interest, with the understanding the state would reimburse the town for 60 percent of the money borrowed over 20 years.

Reimbursement for the state's portion of the Osgood School project is granted on an annual basis to coincide with the town's debt service payments. The town had been receiving $503,700 each year, but that amount will be decreased, as the cost of interest has turned out to be far less than originally projected. "We will therefore receive annual installment payments of $485,300 until the bonds are paid off in fiscal 2018," said Director of Finance Michael Buckley.

Over the 20 years the state will pay the town $9,349,496, which represents 60 percent of the approved construction costs of $10,475,584, and 60 percent of the eligible interest expense of $5,106,910.

By the time the town completed the Deer Hill and middle-high school projects, the state had a new set of guidelines in place where towns would receive funding for 60 percent of the project in full upon the project's completion. Cohasset is therefore only responsible for permanently borrowing and repaying 40 percent of the combined $42 million projects.

The town borrowed its share of the project costs in June 2004. Buckley said the town borrowed based on the state's estimate of what it would need to reimburse. The state projected the project would cost $25,314,000, for both construction and interest, which led the town to calculate its portion as $16,876,000. "Their estimate for their share was low," said Buckley, adding the state estimated a certain portion of the school building costs wouldn't be reimbursable. Towns are only given a certain amount of money per square foot, and due to the efforts of the School Building Committee, almost everything was reimbursable. Buckley said because the project was completed on budget, and on time, the town was spared paying additional interest on the borrowed funds as well.

After completion of the audits, the School Building Authority calculated Cohasset's reimbursement should be $26,447,181. Seventy-five percent of that sum was paid to the town last August in anticipation of the audit, and the rest will be paid this August. At that time, the town will retire the remaining notes payable in the sum of $5,657,187.

The town will be left with a surplus of $1,133,181, and Town Manager Bill Griffin said it will be set aside to be used to reduce the future impact of the projects on the town's taxpayers, as the town is still paying back its portion of the project. "This is good news in a lot of ways," he said. In light of the fact that the debt schedule for the Deer Hill and middle-high school projects is uneven over the years, he said the town might best use the money on an annual basis to "smooth" out the debt service payable annually.

To decide how best to address the situation, Griffin recommended forming a small group including Buckley and himself, Selectman Rob Spofford, who will wear two hats as a member of the board and former Chairman of the School Building Committee, Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee, and a member of the School Committee.

* Debt service projections for the Deer Hill and middle-high school projects have not yet been calculated as it is still unclear how additional state funds will be dispersed by the town to help even out payments for its 40 percent share of the cost.

Trash pickup rescheduled

Due to Saturday's inclement weather, the First Annual Town-Wide Trash Pickup, has been rescheduled to Saturday, April 29. Residents will meet in front of Town Hall at 2:30 p.m., and will then celebrate Earth Day, which is April 22, and the beauty of Cohasset by cleaning selected streets and sites including Black Rock Beach, the Beechwood Ballpark, Government Island, Jerusalem Road and Main Street. The town will provide garbage bags, but volunteers are asked to bring their own thick work gloves. The effort is supported by the Cohasset Board of Health, the Friends of Black Rock Beach, and the Cohasset Girl Scouts. School board gives Dr. Walsh top grades

Superintendent's leadership praised

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"The majority of the committee felt that Dr. Walsh was meeting or exceeding expectations in all key areas."
— Pam Wilson, School Committee

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh received high marks during her first annual School Committee evaluation.

School Committee members anonymously filled out a survey rating Walsh's performance over the last year, which was then submitted to evaluation sub-committee members Alfred Slanetz and Pam Wilson. Wilson read a prepared superintendent's evaluation summary at the committee's April 6 meeting.

"The responses from the survey were compiled and feedback from those surveys has been provided to Dr. Walsh. From that feedback, we will be looking to put into place, plans that help to leverage her strengths and capitalize on any area for development to better improve our schools," said Wilson.

The committee looked at Walsh's accomplishments in several key areas including: instructional leadership, organizational leadership, administration and management, promotion of equity and appreciation of diversity, and community and professional responsibilities.

"Overall, the feedback from the School Committee was extremely positive. The majority of the committee felt that Dr. Walsh was meeting or exceeding expectations in all key areas," said Wilson. She added under Walsh's leadership, the committee feels Cohasset schools are in a much better place this year than in prior years, due to the processes and infrastructure she has put in place.

The School Committee said Walsh has had several major accomplishments in the last year, including the development of a strong strategic plan for the district; effective collaboration with the new school business manager to create a concise, line item budget; and the introduction of a successful, full day kindergarten program and a revised curriculum in collaboration with the new curriculum coordinator. "We were very impressed that Dr. Walsh was able to implement these changes over the course of just two years," said Wilson.

The one area the School Committee felt "presents the greatest opportunity for the superintendent and the School Committee," in the coming year, is the ability to better communicate amongst each other, the schools, and the community. "We feel that putting a process in place to incorporate clear expectations and objective goals of the committee, with status checks throughout the year, will help the communication process," she said.

"It is the overwhelming consensus of the School Committee that Dr. Walsh's leadership has brought the Cohasset school system to a much stronger place with her tireless work and her effort to keep the district moving forward while laying a strong foundation for our school's future," said Wilson.

Rotary meeting update

There will be no Rotary Club meeting Monday, April 17. The club's next meeting will be held Monday, April 24 at the Red Lion Inn, during which Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Chairman Glenn Pratt will talk about the new monument to be built in Veteran's Park on Cohasset Harbor. The monument will be dedicated to those who served in the Korean, Vietnam, and Gulf Wars, as well as the War on Terror in Iraq and Afghanistan.

On Monday May 1, the Club will be back at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island. That night the featured speaker will be Rosemarie Sergi, Assistant Director of Step-one Early Intervention in Quincy — a program that helps children with developmental disabilities and their families.

Monday, May 8, the featured speakers will be Cynthia Sierra, the new Executive Director of the Dianne DeVanna Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect, and AnnMarie Sullivan, board member of the Center. The Dianne DeVanna Center was founded as a living memorial to a young 11-year-old resident of Braintree, who was abused and killed by her stepmother and her father in 1978.

The Rotary Club meets every Monday night at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island. Meetings are open to the public and anyone may attend. Please call Jean Roche at (781) 589-0461 if you plan on attending.

If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. Cohasset resident Patricia Sheerin reports record loss of body-fat without dieting (in fact she's eating more now), drugs or surgery. This writer was so intrigued by Patricia's story that a further investigation became necessary.

Cohasset residents are clamoring to know how she did it. Patricia reports the "secret" is the accountability, coaching and comprehensive system provided by her Fitness Together personal trainer. "At age 46, I have never felt better," says Sheerin. "The focused, personalized program designed specifically for me by my FT trainer has really been the answer to achieving my weight loss, fitness and appearance goals."

Her energy and stamina have doubled and she is getting more attention and "looks" than she has in years – dramatically boosting her self image and self confidence.

When pressed for specific details on Patricia's "secret," she revealed there is an official guide available with powerful tips and strategies for men and women interested in achieving the level of success she has - just in time for the summer and bathing suit season.

Another chapter added to volumes of town history

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset may be the only town in the country which can say it has a written account of its history from the Ice Age to the present day. The collection of history books forever preserving the town's past continues to grow, and the Committee on Town History is prepared to launch its latest literary historical account, "Savor of Salt," this fall.

"Savor of Salt" is a collection of 56 articles written about the town from the Ice Age to shortly after World War II. It is the companion volume to "Treasury of Cohasset History," published in February 2005.

The articles featured both in "Savor of Salt" and "Treasury of Cohasset History" were found by Jackie Dormitzer, author of "A Narrative History of Cohasset Volume III," while compiling research for her book. The town's third volume of history covers the time period from 1950 to 2000. Due to the fact that some of the information Dormitzer uncovered either pre-dated the time period she was covering in the book or didn't quite fit the subject matter within the chapters, she reserved many interesting and somewhat quirky town facts and stories for later compilations.

Dormitzer had no trouble filling one book with the information she had, and in February 2005 "A Treasury of Cohasset History," was published. "Savor of Salt" will include even more of Cohasset's little known historical facts, in roughly the same format.

While the books are similar, their intentions are different. "Treasury" serves as a concise history of the town, where the articles are divided into historical periods, each introduced by a historical narrative. In contrast, the articles in "Savor of Salt" are more loosely organized, in roughly chronological order, and are meant to stand alone. A brief introduction precedes each article and gives information about the author or the topic. Two or three articles may cover the same topic, such as Minot Light, Little Harbor, or the Common, but each provides additional detail or new information. Nearly all the articles are accompanied by photographs.

Jackie Dormitzer, Hal Coughlin and Jim Hamilton look over the "Savor of Salt" manuscript chapters during a planning session earlier this month.

"This is a community that continues to discover more and more history."
— Jim Hamilton, Committee on Town History

Committee member Hal Coughlin, who designed the cover for both the third volume of the town's history and "A Treasury of Cohasset History," has once again put his design skills to work for the cover of "Savor of Salt," and will create a cover with the same flavor.

Altogether, the Committee on Town History has published four histories under the imprint of the Town of Cohasset, which includes the reprinting of the two previous out-of-print histories, "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume I," by E. Victor Bigelow, and "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume II," by Burt Pratt.

In addition to the publication of histories, the committee was responsible for Nancy Garrison's illustrated timeline of Cohasset history — produced for the Cohasset school curriculum — an enlarged map of Cohasset, and the distribution of a rare keepsake wood engraving of Minot Light by Rudolph Ruzicka.

Committee on Town History Chairman Jim Hamilton said the entire committee is very proud of the its latest book and the town's interest in its history. "This is a community that continues to discover more and more history, gathering things as it goes along, and I don't see an ending," he said.

History books may be purchased at Buttonwood Books and at the Town Clerk's office. The committee also sells books at the Art Show in June and the Village Fair in December. The three narrative histories can be purchased individually or as a set in a slip case.

Pierson at helm of Mayflower Society

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset's own Wigmore Pierson has been elected governor.

No, Mitt Romney has not stepped down early and Pierson won't be occupying a corner office on Beacon Hill.

But nevertheless, Pierson's governorship is a lofty one indeed as he will now preside over the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, a lineage organization whose mission is to perpetuate the ideals of the Mayflower Compact and honor the memory of the Pilgrims.

At a special event last Saturday at the Dedham Polo & Country Club, Pierson asked fellow Mayflower descendants and their guests to raise their glasses for a toast.

"To the Pilgrims – a simple people, inspired by an ardent faith in God, a dauntless courage in danger, a boundless resourcefulness in the face of difficulties, and impregnable fortitude in adversity," Pierson said. "Thus they have in some measure become the spiritual ancestor of all Americans."

Pierson is the 43rd governor of the society, which was founded in 1894 by George Earnest Bowman and today has more than 3,200 active members.

The Atlantic Avenue resident explained the Society of Mayflower Descendants honors the legacy of the Pilgrims who landed in Plymouth 386 years ago. "We honor their courage and their search for religious, political and intellectual freedom and their legacy," he said.

Pierson, who is descended from William Brewster, one of the 102 passengers on the Mayflower, explained the Pilgrims opposed the Anglican church in England and came to the New World to find religious, intellectual and political freedom.

He said the Mayflower Compact is considered the precursor to American democracy because it stands for self-government by the people.

"We honor their courage and their search for religious, political and intellectual freedom and their legacy."
— Wigmore Pierson, society governor

"It's a great honor to be elected as governor of the Mass. Society, which is the largest of the Mayflower societies," said Pierson, explaining there is a Mayflower society in every state and three in Canada.

Pierson's duties include leading the Mass. Society, expanding its membership, and deepening its alliances with its sister organizations and with Plimoth Plantation and the Pilgrim Hall Museum in Plymouth, which is the oldest continuously operating museum in the United States.

Pierson said to be a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants; one has to be a direct descendant of one of the passengers on the Mayflower. The society can provide guidance to potential members looking to establish their lineage to a Mayflower passenger.

For more about the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, visit: www.massmayflower.org or call the Society office in Braintree at 781-535-6159.

THE IDEAL EASTER SAMPLER FOR EVERYDAY DRINKING

- 2004 Sydre Doux (Eric Bordelet) $9.99
  An ex-Parisian sommelier handcrafting artisanal ciders...300-plus-year-old orchards, ridiculously low alcohol. Like fresh-pressed apple juice with bubbles. To consume all summer long.
- 2005 Picpoul de Pinet (Domaine St-Peyre) $9.99 OR 2 for $16.00
  My own house white for as long as I can remember. Pungent, bracing, and utterly refreshing. Try it with anything that comes from the sea.
- 2004 Petit Bourgeois (Henri Bourgeois) $9.99
  As in almost every vintage, a stunning bargain. More flavor than a lot of Sauvignon Blanc that sells for twice as much. One sip and you'll think you're at a Parisian bistro - perhaps munching on country ham and freshly baked bread.
- 2004 Abymes (Labbé) $9.99
  From the Jacquère grape (I'm wagering you won't find this at Luke's); the Muscadet of the Alps; light, fresh, mineral-laden, with a slight tinge of saline. And if you're ever having fondue...
- 2004 Mâcon-Villages (Verget) $14.99
  One of the more humorous and interesting people I've met in this business is Jean-Marie Guffens, the self-appointed iconoclast of Burgundy. Bottled under screwcap; Chardonnay that's pure, fresh, and racy, with green-apple and pear flavors. A delicious choice with simple chicken dishes.
- 2004 Minervois "Jacques de la Jugie" $9.99 or 2 FOR $16.00
  A blend of 50% Syrah, 20% Carignan, 20% Grenache, and 10% Cinsault - from a top cooperative in southern France. Some blackberries, some toasty oak, a fair amount of complexity for the lowly price. A perennial best buy.
- 2003 Leverano Vigna del Sarceno (Conti Zecca) $9.99
  Black cherries, blueberry, and violet... an S and M wine - lusty and leathery. 70% Negroamaro, 30% Malvasia Nera; do this up with some barbecued ribs or meat-stuffed ravioli.
- 2004 Beaujolais-Villages "Château de Thulon" (Jean-Marc Burgaud) $9.99
  A top source of unusually good Gamay. Soft, charming, yet intense flavors of strawberries, cherries, and spice. DO NOT think "Nouveau". Wow.
- 2004 Dolcetto di Dogliani "Valdiba" (San Fereolo) $9.99
  If you haven't guessed the style of red wine I like by now...black-currants and spice with touches of almond on the finish. Yet again, amazing complexity and depth for the price; hard to believe it's an "entry-level" wine. I'm enjoying this as I write with a prosciutto, Monterey-jack, and fresh tomato sandwich.
- 2004 Bordeaux (Château de Brandey) $9.99 or 2 FOR $16.00
  With all the hype over Bordeaux futures, first-growths, and "Vintages of the Century" (which seem to occur every three years or so), it's easy to forget the simple pleasures of a straightforward, inexpensive, little Merlot like this. Use it to wash down a roast beef on rye.
- 2004 Côtes du Rhône "Les Chevrefeuilles" (Réméjeanne) $12.99
  Andrew Jefford in The New France: "This estate proves that for simple, artless, delicious, and supremely drinkable red wine, almost nowhere in the world can match the Côtes du Rhône at its best." Les Chevrefeuilles (the honeysuckle) is young-vine Grenache bolstered by some older plantings of Carignan and Counoise. A wine of finesse and friendliness.
- 2005 Moscato d'Asti "La Caliera" (Borgo Maragliano) $12.99
  Full and intense, musky and delicate; flowers, peaches, and citrus. The best description of Moscato d'Asti I ever read was "When you get to heaven, don't be surprised if this is what's being served by the glass." — Joe

Parker Avenue residents like bumpy ride along their road

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"This is a safety issue. We have to save these children."
— Susan Wilcox, 26 Parker Ave.

Parker Avenue residents have had enough of the cars speeding on their street. Taking matters into their own hands, they petitioned the Board of Selectmen for the installation of removable speed bumps for the summer months, and their request was granted.

As a means of access for boaters to launch their vessels into the harbor, Parker Avenue sees much activity during the summer. It is roughly 150 yards long, and residents of the street say it is not uncommon to see cars traveling in excess of 50 M.P.H. in the 15 M.P.H. zone. With many young children living and playing in the area, the dead-end street has become a hazard and residents say they are worried someone might get hurt.

"People are traveling 40-plus miles per hour and they don't realize it," said Susan Wilcox, 26 Parker Ave. She said the beginning of the road is all uphill and once you reach the crest, "You look at the water and that's all you see. This is a safety issue. We have to save these children."

Police Chief James Hussey said on a couple of occasions last summer, he sent an officer down to the area with a radar gun. "It is a very short street and because people want to drop their boat and take off, it sees a lot of volume and it gets hectic during the summer season," he said. Hussey said in his opinion, the problem being faced by the street's residents is one of volume, not speed. "I think the perception of the people who live there is that people are going faster than what they're really doing," he said. Hussey noted the average speed clocked by drivers traveling on the street was between 15 and 25 miles per hour.

However, Russ Bonetti, 20 Parker Ave., said "Most people will slow down when they see a cruiser."

At first, Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer was not convinced installing speed bumps would solve the problem. He said perhaps the town could look into installing a sign with a radar mechanism which lets motorists know how fast they are going as they drive by, rather than install speed bumps and potentially set a precedent in town. "I know Lamberts Lane would be next," he said, as that road handles a lot of traffic from the golf course, and he didn't see why Parker Avenue would be any different.

"Can we find a way to try to make people behave?" without speed bumps, asked Dormitzer.

"Given what's gone on in town over the last few years, getting people to behave will be a real trick too," said Bonetti.

Dave Coletta, 15 Parker Ave., said over the last 10 years, motorists have continuously been given visual and verbal warnings to keep speed down on the street. Residents even came before the Board of Selectmen last year pleading for the installation of speed bumps. "It has done nothing. We're just asking to try it out for 30 days, 60 days, or maybe just this summer."

Selectman Rob Spofford noted Lamberts Lane is different from Parker Avenue because the golf club has a management office with which traffic issues can be discussed. "With this (Parker Avenue), there is no control mechanism," he said.

Paul Trendowicz who owns the Cohasset Harbor Marina at the end of Parker Avenue, said he fully supports the installation of removable speed bumps. "We'll pick up the cost," he said. Hussey said he would recommend no more than two speed bumps be installed on the street.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said Parker Avenue is unique first of all due to the fact that its residents have signed a petition in support of the speed bumps. It is also unique due to its length, its being an access road to the harbor, and due to the fact that the homes are so close to the street. "There's only one street in town you can say that about," he said, and felt allowing speed bumps would not set a precedent.

Selectman Fred Koed reminded the board this was the second time residents had come before it looking for help. "We owe the neighborhood something," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said there will need to be ample signage as speed bumps can be dangerous and catapult an unsuspecting motorcyclist. Residents said they would encourage signs, as anything done to warn motorists to keep their speed down will greatly help their situation.

Dormitzer asked whether the speed bumps could be a risk for those bringing their boats down the road by trailer. Mark Wilcox, 26 Parker Ave., said anyone traveling at a reasonable rate of speed should have no problem if they have secured their trailer properly. "Speed bumps are just like any other bump in the road," he said.

The board agreed to allow the installation of removable speed bumps at some point in May and leave them in place until Sept. 30. At that time, they will be removed and stored by Trendowicz. At the end of the season, residents will be invited to participate in another public hearing with the board to determine their success.

Residents sought to form cable advisory committee

The town's contract with the Comcast cable company is almost up, which means discussion of contract renewal is currently on the table. Town Manager Bill Griffin said in many towns, there are active cable advisory committees which are charged with aiding in such matters. Cohasset used to have a cable advisory committee, but it has since become defunct. Griffin said it would be beneficial for the town to reinstate the committee, and said he will draft a charge to bring back to the Board of Selectmen for approval. Residents interested in serving on a cable advisory committee should contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or send a letter of interest to Town Hall at 41 Highland Avenue.

Civic pride needed

While riding on the Logan Express from Braintree along the Southeast Expressway to the airport two weeks ago, we saw along the shoulder of the highway mile upon mile of trash making the roadside a virtual dump. There were Styrofoam beverage cups, plastic water bottles, cigarette butts and cigarette wrappers, plastic grocery bags galore, broken glass bottles and so much more.

How embarrassing for us as residents of Massachusetts when visitors come from other states or countries and see how careless we are with trash. We have stopped caring about appearances.

The spectacle along the Southeast Expressway got us thinking and not about whether inmates from the House of Correction should be out there with garbage bags collecting all the litter, as some might say. But we started wondering about our apparent lack of civic pride here in the Bay State and what causes us to be such litterbugs.

Massachusetts is surely not the only state with the problem, but judging from what we have seen this spring along our state and municipal roadways — we're not the cleanest of the 50 states.

It's so bad along the highway that if you picked up guests at the airport, you might travel home in the middle lane so cars passing on the right and left would shield their view of the trash pit.

Some of our readers are old enough to recall the "Keep America Beautiful - Don't be a Litterbug!" campaign that started back in the mid-1950s.

According to the City of Tuscon, Ariz. website, "litterbug" was coined by Tuscon resident Annette H. Richards back in 1952 about littering and vandalism in national parks. Richards' magazine article was picked up by Reader's Digest and the word "litterbug" swept the country.

We think it is high time the "Don't be a Litterbug" slogan made a comeback. A quick perusal of "litterbug" sites on Google revealed how widespread the problem is. We even found a quiz for moms and dads titled "Are you the parent of a litterbug?"

Now that spring is here and any snow cover has disappeared, the litter that our disposable society apparently wants to toss with abandon is totally exposed.

But just what makes us toss our trash out our automobile windows? What's the mentality behind dropping trash next to a barrel rather than inside it?

At the state level, expanding the bottle bill to include deposits on all plastic bottles might help. Keeping a litterbag in our cars is a necessity. But the problem goes much deeper than refunds and trash bags.

An education program in Massachusetts and here in Cohasset is needed to make being a litterbug unattractive. We discovered through the Internet that Pennsylvania has brought the anti-litterbug campaign back to try and solve its roadside trash problems.

According to litterbug.org, which is the Pennsylvania website, litter is more than an eyesore. Every 12 minutes a fire starts in litter; litter causes thousands of auto and bicycle accidents a year, with damage to tires costing millions of dollars; rats thrive in litter and have fleas that carry disease; and each year thousands of animals strangle or choke from litter.

It's time we here in Massachusetts started fighting the litter problem too. We can start right away at home and in our own cars by making sure our families and friends dispose of litter properly.

On a related note, due to the rain on Saturday, the first annual Cohasset Town-wide Trash Pickup was postponed to 2:30 p.m., Saturday, April 29. Please mark for your calendar and try to join in. We all need to do our part to keep Cohasset and our state looking good.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Hill thanks supporters

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm writing this letter to thank the 1,148 residents of the great town of Cohasset that vote for me. A special thank to Joanne and Quentin, the Farrag family, The Palmer family, the O'Donnell's, Karen Quigley, the Gjestebys, Julie Guild, Nancy Garrison, Polly Logan, the 100 residents that took a lawn sign, and a whole host of others that made phone calls, stamped envelopes, and held signs on election day.

We live in a place second to none, and I'm proud to say "I live in Cohasset". No matter what you're political views, length of residency, age, or wealth, we're all in this together and last but not least, congratulations Ted.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Coverage, editorial were 'off the mark'

TO THE EDITOR:

I have several comments to make about the reporting about our Town Meeting April 1. There was a long front page feature, headlined "Budget sparks fiery debate on Town Meeting floor". Several people were quoted in the article, including me, but our comments (mine, certainly) were not put in the proper context. Our Moderator Dan Evans began the morning by asking the speakers to stay on topic and to be respectful and not personal. The very first speaker Mr. Fitzsimmons ignored the Moderator's guidelines, and immediately made disparaging remarks about school staff. I went to the microphone not interrupt Mr. Fitzsimmons, but to make a point of order to the Moderator to request the speaker to be respectful, and to follow the guidelines for decorum.

I would also take exception to the message of the editorial, "Take a bow, 100". When I checked at the Town Clerk's office, I found that of the 5099 registered voters in Cohasset, 641 checked in at Town Meeting sometime during the day April 1. I think instead of criticizing those who left after the budget article was voted on, the Mariner should have praised every one of those people who took the time to come to the Town Meeting and participate in one of the most important jobs that a citizen has in Cohasset — to consider and to approve of our budget.

Of course it would be great if everyone could have stayed for the whole meeting. The work is interesting, important, and actually entertaining! But I am alarmed that there are 4458 voters out of 5099 who are eligible who may come to the polls on May 6th to decide whether we need to override the provisions of Prop. 2-1/2, who have not heard an open, all sides heard from, debate on the merits of the override proposals. Don't these uneducated citizens present a greater hazard to democracy and responsible town government than those who came to Town Meeting and left early?

Aquarium thanks town for help with whale

TO THE EDITOR:

The staff at the New England Aquarium Rescue & Rehabilitation Department would like to say a heartfelt thank you for the overwhelming response and help the Town of Cohasset provided with the rare beaked whale stranding.

Many individuals from different departments helped in the effort surrounding this event. We would like to specifically thank Sgt. Shellee Peters for coordinating the initial DPW response the night of the stranding, and obtaining Barry Butman's help with securing the animal. Paul Murphy, ACO provided invaluable help the night of the stranding and the following day with mobilizing resources. Kenny Thayer and Leo Ekbon were essential in the operation to remove the animal from the beach and transport it to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute for a thorough post-mortem examination.

Because of the great help from all of these individuals, scientists were able to obtain fresh samples for numerous research studies that undoubtedly will lead to a greater understanding of this unique species. We would also like to thank the citizens of Cohasset for their interest and support with this stranding event. Their concern and respect for the animal were appreciated and helped insure a successful stranding response.

Vote 'no' on overrides

TO THE EDITOR:

The "school clique" overwhelming rejected compromise by insisting on $1.5M number as their override of choice. They will be carefully indoctrinated in how to vote and they will get out the vote. It is crucial that you vote.

Your only sensible option is to vote "no" on both override options.

Cohasset used to be one big family

I am afraid what it has become instead is a bastion of egocentric ultra-competitiveness; at the same time having lost the key elements of sophistication and grace.

As I made my beloved rounds this morning, which perhaps are entirely too provincial, I was hearing broad unrest concerning recent and not so recent goings-on around what I refer to as the campus, namely Cohasset. Not so long ago we sat glued to that ridiculously entertaining Channel 10 as our police force and Board of Selectmen were seated before a gavel-wielding egomaniac who threatened to leave if not given a substantial raise. My goodness, someone is going to have to share some of these tales with Ted Carr, I understand e-mail is the way to go.

On the way to town, I recalled that today was opening day at Fenway, and gave my old buddy, Tom Keating, a call down in Duxbury. We reminisced about how we used to ride into the park with Ken and Casey Coleman and sell popcorn and coke for the Harry M. Stevens Company; or climb up on the big sign on top of the parking garage in left field and view the games surrounded by a bunch of Charlestown kids, precariously in abundance. Savoring the pride Tom felt as the month prior we had watched his son John compete as a member of the Duxbury High hockey team as they dropped a squeaker to B.C. High at the Garden. I pulled up to my little spot behind the store and parked. As I

Cohasset Village work begins in earnest

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The work to remove the ledge at the base of St. Stephen's needs to be finished, as well. This will move the sidewalk about 5 feet further toward St. Stephen's.

In addition to interface on the Greenbush project, the Town Manager and the Selectmen have asked us to work on the Revitalization. So, we will use this space this week to talk mostly about this project.

This past week Revitalization has restarted in the Village. The new storm water drainage items that we were not able to place in the streets last fall are being put into place. This involves three areas:

• At Depot Court and Ripley Road. This past week one of the two drain grates were put into the street at the rear of the South Shore Art Center. Another needs to be placed in front of Dramatic Kitchens. Unfortunately, this drain is so close to a utility pole that the utility must be present to support their pole so it does not collapse during the digging. We are waiting for Nation Grid to stabilize their pole during digging. If we had our contractor dig without National Grid, the pole might come down and disrupt power service in this area. Not a good thing. So, we wait.

• On South Main Street at the park between French Memories and Tedeschi's. The structure that goes here is a bit complicated. A drain and catch basin needs to be placed in the street. However, James Brook flows underneath this location, so there is not enough depth for a traditional catch basin. So, a shallow catch basin will be set at the edge of the street where it needs to be. Storm water will then directed to a large underground drainage structure that is located under the sidewalk. This drainage structure is then piped a very short distance back into the James Brook culvert. This work was done on this past Tuesday.

• Southern end of the Common, in front of the South Shore Community Center. Next, two new catch basins need to be located at the Southern end of the Common, in front of the South Shore Community Center. This also has been completed this past week.

We mentioned the James Brook culvert in the above paragraphs. For those of you who might be new to Cohasset, James Brook is a very important waterway that drains the entire area from Lower King St. (near Forest Avenue) to the downtown Village area. This is a total distance of between 1 to 2 miles. From the North down to Smith Place, James Brook flows in an open above ground stream. At Smith Place the brook goes underground into pipes as it passes under the downtown Village area and empties into Jacobs Meadow between the Masonic Building and attorney Humphries office. It is into this culvert where the new drain structure in front of Tedeschi's and French Memories drain will drain.

The work to remove the ledge at the base of St. Stephen's needs to be finished, as well. This will move the sidewalk about 5 feet further toward St. Stephen's. About half of these 5 feet will be added to the width of the sidewalk. The other half will be added to the width of the street. Thus, both the sidewalk and the street will be safer as a result of the increased width. This ledge work will be starting next week and the rock removal should take to or three days. At around the same time, possibly starting next week, Northern Construction, our contractor, will be rearranging the entrance to the Greenery Building at 24 South Main St. This work should complete by the middle of next week.

The contractor then will work on the new sidewalk, curbing and streets. We are having some discussions with the contractor about working at night. By "night" we mean approximately 4 p.m. to midnight. Our expectations are to remove old sidewalks in the most congested areas at night and then repave quickly once there is enough paving to justify a full truckload of asphalt. The surface will be perfectly safe to walk on but steps in and out of the shops may be a bit higher. We also intend to grind and pave the street at night starting around the 24th of April. We will notify you if this changes.

We thought you might enjoy this picture taken on Wednesday behind the Red Lion Inn in the right of way. We would think this is really a rough road!

The contractor believes night work this may make the work go much faster. As you can imagine, digging up streets and sidewalks is a very difficult job with cars and trucks passing by on Main Street during normal business hours. Further, daytime work is disruptive to most businesses. We also understand that working in the evening is not without its disruptions as well. Residents who live in the village center as well as businesses open in the evening will be inconvenienced. Our goal is to try to blend the project together so that it is done as quickly as possible and inconveniences the least number of people, residents and businesses.

Treating dogs as people

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The last time we invaded the privacy of the canine world, I was torn between getting a $349 cell phone called a Petcell or a $50 aromatherapy bath with a $29 terry cloth robe as a Christmas present for Jedi, who used to be our family pet but is now known as our family companion.

Jedi is a dog of uncertain breeding but a good dog, nevertheless, as I am assured every time she mistakes the kitchen floor for the bathroom and my slippers for the thigh bone of a Black Angus. Me, I prefer cats. Who was it who said: "Dogs have owners; cats have staff?" Right on! But I digress . . .

The subject of dogs came up the other day when I read that scientists at the Broad Institute of Harvard and MIT have succeeded in mapping the DNA of dogs from the smallest chihuahua to the biggest Great Dane.

I'm not sure what that means but Institute Director Eric Lander calls it "mind-boggling" and I can't argue with that. But it's a bit discouraging to think that science has more reason to examine Jedi's genetic code than mine.

All over the nation, dogs are coming to be treated better than people when it comes to food, shelter and clothing. For the coming vacation season, there's a how-to book called "Pets on the Go," by Dawn and Robert Habgood.

The Ritz Carlton Hotel in downtown Manhattan, say the Habgoods, "provides 22-carat gold-plated IDs, aromatherapy spritzes, hand-painted ceramic dinnerware, quilted travel mats and Burberry pet raincoats" for VIP (Very Important Pooches).

Loews Ventana Canyon Resort in Tucson, Ariz., they say, "includes a pet concierge, who suggests animal-friendly eateries, shops and scenic hikes into the canyon. The hotel provides a 'Did You Forget?' closet filled with pet goodies."

San Ysidro Ranch in Montecito, Calif., they say, has a "Privileged Pets Program, featuring 'Pawier' water, homemade treats or gourmet items off the pet menu. Explore the 17 miles of trails, then relax with massages for you and your pet."

I'm told there's even a book coming out called "Teach Your Dog to Read," in which author-trainer Bonnie Bergin claims to have taught some 300 dogs to read. "It takes about three or four minutes to teach a dog their first words," she says.

For God's sake, don't tell Jedi! I didn't get her the $349 Petcell phone or the $40 aromatherapy bath. If she could read that I was thinking of it, she'd never let me forget about it. If she could talk, that is. Don't laugh!

At least ours are not as tough as the pet protection laws in Rome where, under ordinances that went into effect last fall, a man can be fined up to $600 for keeping his goldfish in a round bowl instead of an aquarium.

Not yet, anyway.

You decide: Disney World or Disneyland?

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

With the big vote over it's Return To Normalcy Week here in Cohasset. People we loathed and plotted against last week go back to being just our parents again. We steal signs from a neighbor's lawn and fling them into another neighbor's 30-yard dumpster purely for the visceral thrill of it, not for political gain. And we deserve the break, certainly. But let's not kid ourselves; one crucial issue remains unresolved. We must now turn our collective attention back to the contentious question that has hung over this nation for 35 years, namely, which is better: Disneyland or Disney World.

This is the ideal moment for the town to tackle this urgent matter, because frankly I need your support. As a husband and father of three daughters I am constantly being outvoted. The only other male in my house is a cat who doesn't bring much testosterone to the table anymore, if you catch my drift. Meanwhile the clock is ticking, because my daughter Emily turns six in July, and visiting a Disney park each year a child turns six is one of only two Lengyel Family traditions, the other one being the strict observance of allergy season. To prepare you for the vote I will now set aside the petty personal prejudices of my wife and children and with only rationality as a guide, construct a list of pros and cons that will help lead us toward the inexorable conclusion that Disneyland is in fact way, way better than Disney World.

Like any piece of real estate the three most important qualities of a vacation destination are location, location and location. With this in mind, let us notice that one of the destinations is in Southern California, whereas the other one is located in a gigantic outdoor sauna. Now, I realize that many of you have some affection for Florida, and the last thing I want to do in this column is alienate a large potential constituency by insulting their favorite state. That is why I urge those of you with poor taste in states to skip the rest of this column and move straight on to the police blotter. The rest of you are no doubt well aware of the following facts:

California has Yosemite National Park, Lake Tahoe, redwood forests, pristine deserts and canyons, Mount Shasta, Napa Valley, Big Sur, and Clint Eastwood.

Florida has a huge swamp.

Biting insects are not a problem in California.

In Florida the swarms of biting insects are not a problem when compared to the biting 500-lb. reptiles.

California has a thriving, multi-faceted market economy that fosters competitive pricing among its many and varied attractions.

Epcot Center gift shops supply fully two-thirds of Florida's tax revenue.

When one thinks of entrepreneurial spirit, innovation and "youth culture", one thinks of California.

Sales of Geritol(TM) make up the remaining third of Florida's tax revenue.

California has In-N-Out Burger.

Q.E.D.

Still on the fence? Then allow me to quote Disney's own web site, which provides the following information titled, "Getting to Disneyland":

"Disneyland is located in Anaheim, California. To get to the park, fly to Los Angeles International Airport, then travel south on the I-405 freeway, east through Orange county on I-105 to I-605, to I-5 south. Exit at Harbor Boulevard and travel south. Disneyland's main entrance is on the right."

Now see if you can pick up on the subtle but unnerving differences between those directions and these, to Disney World:

"Travel Tip: Packing for your adventure to The Magic Kingdom can be exciting. But don't get carried away! Disney Corp. recommends that you arrive with a minimum of two empty bags per person.

Fly to Orlando. During descent do not stow your tray table or return your seat to its upright and locked position; I will do it for you. After touching down on Tinkerbell Runway 1-Left your "Magic Carpet" will taxi to Goofy Gate. Pick up your empty luggage at the Sorcerer's Apprentice Carousel, then be sure to check out one of our Disney Stores, which are conveniently incorporated into all airport restroom exits. Leaving the airport? No problem! Simply purchase 2-day or 3-day park-hopper tickets for each member of your family, hand the tickets slowly and carefully to any of the armed and adorable Disney characters blocking the doors, run the final gauntlet of strategically-placed Disney merchandise, step outside and you're there! Welcome to Disneyworld! A wholly-owned subsidiary of Wal*Mart!"

Oh to be six again...

N.E. Fisheries discussion is Wednesday

MARINER'S CORNER

STEVE BOBO

Each brings considerable expertise to the table about what's wrong and what's right about one of New England's most important products, the fish we eat.

The Harbor was the center of Cohasset's life for more than 200 years from after the American Revolution until about 1898 because of the fish caught hereabouts. Next week on Wednesday 19 April at 7 p.m. at the Paul Pratt old library building at 106 South Main St. we will be having a discussion and forum about the New England Fishery.

Susan Playfair, author of a book "Vanishing specie Saving the Fish, Sacrificing the Fishermen," published in 2003 will conduct a panel discussion about our fishery with Dr. Robert Thompson dentist and avid fisherman and fisheries historian, together with Paul Figueiredo, Cohasset lobsterman.

Each brings considerable expertise to the table about what's wrong and what's right about one of New England's most important products, the fish we eat. Paul will talk about the problems he is observing. Bob, will talk about the outlook, interests and concerns of all fishermen, commercial or otherwise, both inshore offshore, and in lakes ponds and rivers.

So if you're interested in learning more about those delicacies many of us catch, most of us eat, and all of us admire, come to see us at the Pratt building next Wednesday. Light refreshments will be available, as well as interesting neighbors and friends.

Override us now, but don't overwhelm us later

COMMENTARY

PAUL ANTICO

So many of us in Cohasset are incredibly frustrated and tired of constantly being asked for more money, many times with the implicit threat that our kids' educations are at stake.

Regarding your article last week, "Budget sparks fiery debate on Town Meeting floor," I want to express my appreciation for your detailed, two-sided coverage of this important issue. With that said, and as one of the antagonists of this debate, I would like the opportunity to more clearly spell out what I believe the town needs to address now, in the weeks leading up to the vote on the budget overrides.

As you pointed out in your article, I am in favor of cleaning up the financial mess this town has gotten into by passing the entire override request, despite its high cost. However, given that this full override includes the "wish list" requests of each department in town, I firmly believe it will then be fair to say "Enough is Enough!" So many of us in Cohasset are incredibly frustrated and tired of constantly being asked for more money, many times with the implicit threat that our kids' educations are at stake. We have averaged more than one override per year over the past 18 years, which reflects poor town budgeting. Further, our town spending has increased by roughly 8.5 percent per year while our neighbors have found ways to hold to just over 5 percent (with inflation under 2.5 percent). This is unacceptable management of our hard-earned tax dollars.

It is time for Cohasset's taxpayers to send the message to our elected and appointed officials that if we vote in favor of their budgetary wish list via the full override, then it is fair and prudent for us to demand no further overrides for the foreseeable future (barring catastrophic events), with the consequence being their jobs! If annual increases of 2.5 percent (plus normal new revenue streams) are deemed insufficient, then we should be given a reasonable, justifiable figure that demonstrates long overdue sound financial planning.

Selectman Sullivan believes it is unfair of me to criticize the hard work that he and others have done over 20 years in creating town budgets without having gotten involved in the process directly myself. Before being cut off by Moderator Evans at Town Meeting, he asked me directly, "Were you even at any of the [budget] meetings?" This is a very valid question and one that frankly is quite important. So let me provide the answer. No, I have never attended a budget meeting. Zero. Not one.

So am I in the wrong to criticize? Hardly. We all accept jobs in life that come with certain responsibilities, some of which involve fiduciary obligations. For example, a mutual fund manager has an obligation to earn acceptable returns for shareholders. If this objective is not achieved, should the shareholders have the right to question that manager and potentially remove the manager from his or her position? Absolutely! It would be ridiculous for the manager to suggest that the shareholders don't have a right to demand change since they didn't help manage the fund. Similarly, if one accepts a position requiring financial understanding and responsibility for the tax dollars of an entire town, then it is absolutely justifiable for the taxpayers to criticize unacceptable results, such as those that were presented to us in the Town Meeting warrant.

Following Mr. Sullivan's logic, only those who helped craft the budget would have the right to vote on it, for the rest of us do not have the detailed knowledge involved in its creation. Further, if Town Manager Griffin is right in stating that our town's debt problem is the result of so many Town Meeting-approved projects over the years, then why were so many endorsed by the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee? Why didn't anyone with a closer knowledge of the town's finances stand up and say that we couldn't afford these capital expenditures? Whose responsibility is that if not a senior town official? It may seem unfortunate, but every person and organization in this world has to learn to live within their means. This includes the Town of Cohasset.

Frankly, this issue is not about the 2006 override (at least not the Spring edition). It is about demanding professional management of our town's finances. It is about demanding that our taxes not go up by 50 percent over 5 years (roughly 8 percent per year compounded). It is about demanding that we follow through in our desire to help our seniors stay in town by not overtaxing them before they become seniors. And it is about maintaining a Cohasset that is open to all and not just the wealthy! That is what this issue is about.

Thus, I reiterate my challenge to the Selectmen and other town officials. If the full override is approved, is it fair to hold you to a 2.5 percent maximum tax increase in the coming years? If not, what number is fair and why? I look forward to your responses to this crucial question that is on the minds of many. Your responses may affect the outcome of the override vote. In addition, I encourage others to write criticisms of my arguments. Whether or not you agree with me (or my approach), I believe this debate is long overdue and is good for Cohasset.

Redirect energies to fixing the town's money problem

COMMENTARY

TOM CALLAHAN

Whether either override wins or loses, however, it is time to confront the problems with our education funding system.

The upcoming override vote, at either amount, is a difficult decision for the thinking voter to make. Neither the blind fealty nor blind animosity to the education establishment continually displayed by the respective sides of the debate is helpful to making a rational decision. Intellectually, it is difficult to justify $1.5 million more to a deeply flawed system, with the knowledge that little is solved and overrides for the school system will continue. There is the urge that perhaps one solution is to blow up the system and rebuild it as it should be. However, unless that is done by all districts on a coordinated basis, our isolated protest vote will only hurt our own students. As a parent of high school age students, I selfishly, emotionally, and also rationally, have no choice but to support the current system. I will at least vote for the lower override; perhaps the higher one as well.

Whether either override wins or loses, however, it is time to confront the problems with our education funding system. Cohasset cannot continue this way. If this override isn't the breaking point, that point is just around the corner. The considerable efforts we spend manipulating the town budget and ripping each other apart each year need to be re-directed to some or all of the following:

Reform 2-1/2 : It is or should be clear that the 2-1/2 percent budget cap is no longer economically realistic. As a Selectman in 1999, I had come to the conclusion that our budgets grew on average 4-1/2 percent per year. So I'd like to submit to our Legislature the following tax cap legislation from Anne Arundel County, MD — property taxes "shall not increase, compared with the previous year, more than the Consumer Price Index percentage of change, or by 4.5 percent, whichever is the lesser." There is no override provision. The cap is the cap – meeting the original intent of 2-1/2, but at a more realistic percentage.

Regionalization: It should also now be clear that under the current system of funding, a town of 7200 people, no matter how wealthy, cannot support a fully stand-alone school system (and perhaps other services). However, attempts to regionalize municipal services usually fails on the altar of the municipal parochialism so endemic to Massachusetts.

If not full regionalization, then a partial system. My particular concern is the lack of electives at the high school. We are already sharing some sports teams. (Priorities!) Why, then, can we not similarly regionalize electives at the high school level? Let's leverage the economies of scale that our larger neighbors and regionalization can afford. The transportation issue some have raised can be solved, if there exists the desire to solve it. Let's face it, we cannot do everything in-house, and our students are suffering /will suffer "competitively" as a result.

Adjunct Faculty: Another solution to the electives problem is to allow for adjunct faculty. I can and have taught at Massasoit and I know other adjunct faculty who live in town. I'm sure the union at Massasoit doesn't like it any more than the MTA/CTA will, but tough! They took $5 in union dues out of my paycheck and can do so here with my blessing. Adjuncts need not teach any core course requiring state certification, but there is absolutely no reason they can't teach college- or life-preparing electives at the HS level. We have a lot of brainpower in this town to leverage as well.

College Offerings: I am told that seniors have the opportunity to take college courses as electives to fill in the time that for many is now filled by empty time in study halls. It is my further understanding that they have to get themselves to these courses. I've heard that Hull HS reached a deal where Quincy College instructors come to them. Can we not reach a similar deal with some institution?

Block Scheduling Must Die: Block scheduling at the high school must go. Even if we had a range of electives to offer, there are problems scheduling what we do have as early as sophomore year, and then you have large gaps between instruction in some subjects. Additionally, with the studies that say that HS kids shouldn't be starting as early as 7:30 a.m., I cannot believe that these long classes are beneficial for tired students with shorter attention spans.

Recognize the Importance of New Revenue: The passage of articles at Town Meeting that will add beneficial tax revenues passed despite the pro-override crowd. As usual, the vast majority of them didn't appreciate the connection of these proposals to their cause, and left the meeting en masse after the budget passed. (And kudos to the Mariner for correctly chiding these people). More zoning proposals are coming, and we need to appreciate the need to create more commercial tax revenue. Even this, though, is not an absolute panacea. Even if maxed out, our commercial districts are too small to sustain us forever if the school budget and the "municipal entitlement mentality" maintain their insatiable monetary appetites. Even neighbors with much larger commercial tax bases are looking at overrides this year. Commercial tax growth still needs to be accompanied by other reforms and added scrutiny in expenditures.

End the Obsession with MCAS: We need to lobby the state to back off on the bill of goods that is MCAS. Its mere existence has led to an unhealthy obsession, and the recent drop-off of scores in Grades 4 and 8 is now a panic-inducing excuse for the override. To quote Andy Rooney from last Sunday, however, "Something's wrong here. Any time teaching is done just to help kids pass an exam, it's wrong. The purpose of teaching is to provide an education, not to help kids pass a test. Subjects like science, art, history and music are being taught very little in a lot of schools. We're going to raise a generation of cultural idiots.."

Pressure the Feds: The core problem is that education funding cannot rely solely on the property tax. That was the point of the many lawsuits in many states that led to the various permutations of ed reform. That reliance continues, still creating educational disparity, and now in Massachusetts, attacking the education systems of even the wealthy communities. The energy and anger of the pro-override crowd should not be directed at assorted town officials, candidates and town meeting wags, but at Kennedy, Kerry, Delahunt and most especially the self-described "education President", Bush. If just 1/558th of the known defense budget (= $1 billion) were redirected to education at the local level via block grants, how much would that help? How about 2/558ths? Perhaps the plan is to instead facilitate an uneducated cannon fodder class for the next Crusade, but it is on the Feds (of both parties) where the pressure needs to be brought.

There are other problems that need to be addressed with education in Cohasset that have nothing to do with money. Everyone agrees these issues need to be addressed, so let's try to finally do so.

$1.495 override will keep Cohasset moving forward

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset is at a critical point in its history. If the $1.4 million override doesn't succeed on May 6, Cohasset may start a slow slide into mediocrity. These are strong words, but let me give you some history to show you why they are apt.

By 2003, Cohasset put its house in order. Critical sewer projects were completed. Schools were built or renovated to provide adequately for the future, and a new library was added. Cohasset has invested in the infrastructure necessary for the Town to move forward.

Cohasset has a strong management team in place to maximize our investments in Cohasset. Bill Griffin is an exceptionally well-qualified and experienced Town Manager and Dr. Denise Walsh provides valuable professional direction and administration to the public schools. She has successfully implemented the recommendations of the School Budget Investigation Committee.

Buildings and people are in place. But Cohasset's day-to-day operations and effective programs need adequate budgets! For the last three years, State Aid to Cohasset has dropped by $1.3 million. In FY '04 and FY '05, town services were level-funded and virtually stood still while more houses were built and school enrollment increased. Given the failed override of last year, teachers have been cut and building maintenance in all town buildings has been reduced to unacceptable levels.

The fat has long since been eliminated from these budgets!

• If no override passes, the performance of every town department will fall further behind.

• If the smaller $725,000 override wins, the gap will widen between increasing needs and static resources.

• If the $1.495 million override succeeds, Cohasset will move forward again and the schools will start their strategic five-year plan!

If neither override passes, taxes on the average Cohasset home assessed for $750,000 will be $8,212. That's a lot to pay to move backwards. If the $1.4 override passes, taxes on the same home will be $503 more. That seems like a relatively small amount of money for that homeowner to invest in Cohasset to change the direction of its future. Instead of sliding into mediocrity, Cohasset will move ahead again.

Some tips about getting lawn care right

COMMENTARY

SANDY DURANT

Now let's revisit compost, fertilizer, and grass seed again before I list some excellent resources as well as some new ones you need to know about.

With this incredible spring we are having, how can we not get serious, right now, about our lawn and its health? So for those of us who are serious now, or at least know they will be soon, here is a reprint of last fall's popular healthy lawn article with two new paragraphs of additional advice:

First, please remember if you want to convert your lawn from a chemical-dependent lawn to a naturally healthy lawn and you want it to look good until it is converted, you have two choices: 1. Quickly renovate by clearing everything out, adding six inches of nutrient rich topsoil, and re-seeding. Or 2. Slowly transition by testing your soil, balancing its acidity, adding nutrient rich topsoil (about an inch each spring and fall), and over-seeding with a good fescue/clover blend. Most important, if you decide to transition, do not completely stop the chemical fertilizers you have been using or you will be starving to death grass plants that are rooted in dead, barren soil. However, do start using organic, slow release, water-insoluable fertilizer and pesticide alternatives at the recommended doses. When your soil is replenished and your grass plants are mostly fescues, perennial rye and clover with some bluegrass mixed in, then you have successfully transitioned (or renovated) to a healthy non-chemical dependent lawn. This second choice takes about three years and requires more attention than choice number one, but is far less labor intensive and costly. Lastly, we will soon be publishing a list of services that will completely renovate or help you transition your lawn.

Second, avoid planting invasive plants on your property. They are non-native "over-achievers" that cause profound environmental and economic damage when they escape from our home landscapes. Although experts have determined that these plants are harmful, they are still widely available in catalogs and nurseries. These invasives include Norway maple Acer platanoides; Bishop's weed Aegopodium podagraria; Japanese barberry Berberis thunbergii; Burning bush Euonymus alatus; Yellow flag iris Iris pseudacorus; Japanese honeysuckle Lonicera japonica; and Purple loosestrife Lythrum salicaria. For a complete list, information about methods for removing invasive plants, and a list of recommended substitute plants visit www.newenglandwildflower.org

Now let's revisit compost, fertilizer, and grass seed again before I list some excellent resources as well as some new ones you need to know about.

Most importantly, create a healthy environment and bring back the life: top dress and rake in an inch of balanced, nutritious compost each spring and fall. Use organic fertilizer that can be broken down and naturally fed to grass plants. Reintroduce Nematodes, microscopic worm-like animals that cause disease in insects, particularly white grubs, sod webworms, and chinch bugs. Add grass seed mixes in cool weather (spring and fall) that naturally crowd out unwanted weeds and don0t need endless watering. To speed up the soil building process you may want to add microbial innoculants, "good" bacteria and fungi that support beneficial microbes and earthworms.

If you want to give your lawn an extra boost of fertilizer in the spring and fall, choose a low nitrogen organic fertilizer with an NPK (nitrogen-phosphorous-potassium) ratio of approximately 3-1-2. Never use more than 1 pound per 1,000 square feet.

For a truly carefree lawn, plant a superior variety of hard fescue (Festuca longifolia) such as Discovery, or Oxford, bred from grass plants that survive without pampering. It is recommended that you mix fescues with perennial rye grass (avoid annual rye grass) and Dutch white clover and some bluegrass seeds for superior vigor, insect and drought resistance. These mixtures are readily available. For the first few years, re-seed annually. Cost? Seeds of premium species and cultivars are worth the extra cost as bargain seed mixes are often adulterated with weed seed.

Now, a few words of caution. Compost is turning into a big and, as yet, unregulated business. Unfortunately, there are companies processing waste into compost without regard for what pathogens, microelements, and major elements might be carried into the material. Such compost can be full of the pathogen e.coli, contain too much nitrogen that helps pathogens increase rapidly, or have high levels of microelements like lead and cadmium. It is best to know where the compost came from and what's in it if at all possible.

And remember, here in New England there is a lead zone around all older homes and buildings. Small pieces of paint containing lead land in the soil from deterioration and when old paint is scraped away. Never plant edible food within the 10-15 foot "lead zone" of a building. If you live in an older home and want herbs beside your doorstep, plant them in containers.

Opening the door to wind power

COMMENTARY

MIMI WHITE

The committee decided to use these free services for the purpose of finding a possible site for the installing of a MET tower to gather wind data.

When the Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee came together in August, we were an unlikely group of people with a little knowledge about many things. We were motivated by the desire to do something in providing possibilities for new sources of energy for our town (and, as one member said "and for the universe"). It only took one meeting to convince the committee it needed to do some serious research on energy alternatives. The fields of research about alternative sources of energy are expanding quickly, and many towns are becoming aware of the possibilities. It is the leadership of Hull in placing the first and second wind turbines on the South Shore that moved us into serious investigation into wind power. "How did Hull do that?" The expertise of a committee member and airplane pilot shared the "how" wind worked, and his information on aerodynamics was helpful, but what we really were interested in was how Hull was able to accomplish their movement into wind power.

Andrew Stern, of Citizen's for Alternative Renewable Energy, who has played a key role in the town of Hull and their first 600KW wind turbine, has regularly been available for information and options. He informed the committee that Hull Turbine 1 paid for itself in four years. It has supplied energy to roughly 250 homes. Hull Turbine 2, will produce 4.5 million KW hours energy, and will supply roughly 900 households. Between the two turbines, 12 percent of the entire town power will be supplied. He brought with him Malcolm Brown, Hull Power and Light, and Stewart Smith of Oak Creek Energy in California. All of them pointed out the need to find the key wind location, and secondary issues include wind strength and turbine height. They had much experience in working with the monitoring devices, and also the experience with choosing and installing wind turbines. There is a wonderful sense of cooperation with Hull, and we are hoping to foster connections with both Hingham and Scituate. Four of the committee members went to the meeting in Hingham to see if we could learn from their progress in forming a Long Range Energy Plan Committee. Hingham is hoping to form a committee to begin the process to integrate new guidelines for development in the town.

Kristen Burke, of Massachusetts Technology Council, spoke to us and the Board of Selectmen, to explain how to investigate the possible siting of a wind tower (MET tower). MTC is a state program funded by surtax on our electrical bills and is charged with working with communities to build alternative (renewable energy) systems. The committee decided to use these free services for the purpose of finding a possible site for the installing of a MET tower to gather wind data. The committee has received the report of three sites, and will be discussing these with Kristen at the next meeting.

With our investigation into money-saving and environmentally responsible energy alternatives, the committee is convinced that the citizens of Cohasset will begin to be aware of the necessity for new possibilities. Meanwhile, we can start new practices in our homes by attention to low-energy lighting and the careful use of electrical and heating use.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, April 25, and will be posted.

approached the corner, I observed in horror a tree man putting the finishing touches on the demise of the 60 foot, 20 inch caliper spruce tree adjacent to the Independence building. I could not believe what I was seeing, and felt as if something inside me actually snapped. I had gained somewhat of a reputation as a tree-hugger when a group referring to themselves as the Historical Society insisted on cutting down a beautiful ash tree which adorned Elm Street with shade, and I raised a stink.

A week prior, I had attended a meeting addressing the downtown project. Details about all aspects of the job to be done were discussed, including the planting of new trees so badly needed for aesthetics. Never a word spoken about sacrificing the only tree down there with any real stature. I called the project manager knowing full well I was going to get the standard answer; it was in bad shape, it had to go. What he neglected to say is that we're going to make damn sure it is down before anyone could cry foul. To deny that would be to overestimate my naivete.

The tree incident is really only a symbol of the very negative change in direction our town has taken over the last 10 or so years. Cohasset use to be one big family, and I perfectly realize it can never be that again. I am afraid what it has become instead is a bastion of egocentric ultra-competitiveness; at the same time having lost the key elements of sophistication and grace. A friend of mine told me of going to Sandy Beach on Friday nights for a parent and little kids get together and even that was competitive.

I find it appalling how many times I have heard one of these up-and-comers say that if a person can no longer afford the perennial tax overrides in town, they should get the hell out. One referred to it as economic displacement. Solution: Allow older people who have been here for a designated period of time to have there tax rate frozen, the result of which would be the people utilizing the services, namely the schools, would bear the brunt of the cost. Call it a users fee if you wish.

Speaking of schools, I cannot imagine that the School Committee does not want a fiscal watchdog among them so badly that they would mount up one of their little e-mail conspiracies to prevent it. If I might, a few suggestions for the School Committee. Take heed from the schools where the committee member, past and present, have sent their own kids. Where do private schools get all of their money? Alumni, of course. These schools have huge reunions with classes of five year intervals under one big tent each summer. Everyone has a fantastic time being hit up for some dough - yeah! Why not set up a big tent on Government Island each June. Saturday night have a gala event for five or so CHS classes with the intent of them reaching into their pockets. Under the same tent on Sunday, have a town party and give the people who are actually using the facilities the same opportunity.

That concept makes far more sense to me than observing these outrageous displays of special interest which has become Town Meeting - an institution I refuse to partake in, feeling it is an exactly wrong procedure, not a right one. Seriously, when 600 people show up to push one agenda item and proceed to vacate after their vote has been cast, all the while having one of our most brilliant lawyers in town trying to explain what has just happened, something seems amiss, no?

Enough for now, there is, however, more. Why not start with a simple hello instead of a straight ahead stare. What our town is missing more than anything right now is the cordially toward one another, which at one time was the Cohasset norm.

James Watson lives at 101 Border Street.

Fusco grateful for support

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to thank the residents of Cohasset for their vote on Saturday. I am humbled and honored to have won a seat on the Cohasset School Committee. I am looking forward to working with the other members of the committee to help make our schools the best they can be. A lot of hard work and sacrifice went into the campaign and I want to thank the many people who gave of their time and wisdom to help make my campaign a success.

I would also like to acknowledge all of the other candidates and their supporters for their commitment to this community. Our system of government was founded on the principles of a free exchange of ideas and of government by and for the people. That so many people not only braved the weather to exercise their right to vote but put in countless hours in support of each candidate says much about what makes Cohasset the kind of town in which we should all take pride.

We have much work to do to make sure our schools improve each and every year. I have many ideas I plan to share with the other members of the School Committee. Although the results of the override vote will dictate some of our immediate priorities.

I will spend much of the next 30 days talking to other school committee members and Dr. Walsh to understand the committee's current issues and priorities. I am looking forward to the work ahead.

CHS boys tennis off to a 4-0 start

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High boys tennis team's schedule will present the Skippers with a few tests throughout the season.

They have passed the first such test, as Wednesday's 5-0 win over Sacred Heart gave Cohasset its third win in as many days, and improved the team's record for the season to 4-0.

Cohasset has played the Clippers tough over the years, and again figure to be the biggest threat to Norwell's league dominance.

The next test comes the week after vacation, when Cohasset has four matches in five days, three against high-caliber competition. After traveling to Cape Cod Academy on Monday the 24th, the boys host Scituate on the 25th, Norwell on the 27th, and face Hingham on the road on the 28th.

Norwell, of course, still has "The Streak" going, having gone over a decade since losing a South Shore League match. Cohasset has played the Clippers tough over the years, and again figure to be the biggest threat to Norwell's league dominance.

Senior first singles Nils Sceery, one of the team's three captains (along with fellow seniors Dan Sullivan and Chris Pescatore), said after Wednesday's match that topping Norwell is the team's number-one goal this season.

"I know they (Norwell) have been working hard, but I think we have the depth to give them a very good match," Sceery said. "I think we can do it."

That depth stems from a big turnout during preseason tryouts that has resulted in 18 players being on the team's roster this season. It has also helped that several key players from last year's team, which advanced to the Division 2 South quarterfinals, are back.

Sceery, Sullivan and Blain Morin have all looked impressive in Cohasset's first four matches, combining to lose just one set. The first doubles duo of Pescatore and Zack Murray have also been playing strong tennis.

"Zack and I have been meshing really well," said Pescatore. "Today (Sacred Heart) was a little tougher, but overall we've been playing well. We've been controlling the net, which is critical for us."

Several players have contributed to the cause at second singles. On Wednesday, it was sophomore Ryan Crough and freshman Victor Hartman winning in straight sets. Josh Dupre, Chris Ackley, Owen Stevenson and Ivan Sceery have all seen action, and Chris Donze, a regular in the lineup last season, figures to rejoin the mix soon.

Elizabeth Landon finesses a shot over the net during Wednesday's match against Ursuline. Landon and first doubles partner Meg Anderson came back from a set down to beat a tough opponent.

Ursuline hands girls tennis its first loss of season in tough 3-2 match

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In 2004 and 2005, the Cohasset High girls tennis team lost its home match to Ursuline, only to visit the Dedham school later in the season and return the favor.

History is halfway toward repeating itself after the Skippers lost a tough 3-2 decision to Ursuline on Wednesday. It was Cohasset's first loss of the year, as they are 5-1 heading into the April vacation break.

After senior Chelsea Grossman won her first singles match 7-5, 6-1, Ursuline held a 2-1 team lead with both doubles matches in their third sets.

At first doubles, sophomore Meg Anderson and junior Elizabeth Landon lost their first set and fell behind, 6-5, in the second. They forced a tiebreaker, and with both girls combining strong serves and equally solid shots at the net, won the tiebreaker 7-3 to force a third set.

While that second set was being played, Cohasset head coach Gigi Meehan said that if Anderson and Landon won the set, they would go on to win the match. The girls backed up their coach's confidence with a big 6–4 third set victory that tied the overall match at 2-2.

That brought everyone's attention to second doubles, where Cohasset's Sally Meehan and Charlotte Landon were locked in an intense battle with Ursuline's Joanie Fisher and Cat Crane. The Cohasset duo had won the first set, 6-2, but Fisher and Crane came back to take the second, 7-5.

Laxers staying busy

CHS boys win 2 out of 3 this week to improve to 4-1

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team had a very busy week, playing three games in four days before April vacation. Cohasset improved its record to 4–1 and next plays Dover-Sherborn at home on Saturday, April 22 at 11 a.m.

Skippers 13, Falmouth 5

The Skippers had their offense firing on all cylinders in Sunday's 13-5 rout of Division 2 Falmouth on Cape Cod.

However, it was the team's man-down defense that may have been the key to victory. After a hard fought, very physical first half, Falmouth pulled to within two goals early in the second half. After two quick penalties, Cohasset found itself two men down for a full minute.

Defensemen, Jeff Brown, Ryan Kucinski, Anthony DiPaolo, midfielder Trevor Brady and goalie Ben Libby successfully killed off the penalties. Shortly thereafter, senior captain Aidan Buick (seven goals, three assists) took over the game.

"Aidan is one of the top attackmen in the state and is almost impossible to defend," said Cohasset head coach Stew Curran. "He has a quick first step and his shots come from all angles, making it very difficult on the opposing goalie."

Against Falmouth, Buick had some big help in the offensive zone. Sophomore attackman Mark Flibotte had three goals

Reality check

Lady laxers' loss to Duxbury shows plenty of work left to be done

For 42 minutes Tuesday, the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team played even with powerhouse Duxbury.

It was the other eight minutes that proved to be a problem.

In a game that head coach Chuck Jaffe deemed a "reality check" for his players, the Skippers surrendered two goals in the first minute of play and six goals in the first seven minutes, all before Cohasset could get its first shot on goal.

The Skippers (3-1) could never quite recover, ultimately losing by a 19-9 score. Jaffe said there is plenty to be learned from the game, starting with his team's attitude toward playing a great program like Duxbury.

"I think they have to learn that they can play with that team," Jaffe said. "They need to understand that they have to work harder. You have to think and act like an elite player, and they're not there yet."

Between those first seven minutes and the last minute of play — when Duxbury scored three times — the game was virtually even, featuring back-and-forth swings that showed some promise for Cohasset.

Duxbury turned a 10-3 halftime lead into a 15-4 advantage but never rested its starters or inserted reserves, and Cohasset answered with a four goal run to make it a 15-8 game with just under six minutes to play. From there, the teams traded quick goals, until Duxbury scored three times in the last 1:08 of the game, the last score giving the home team a 10-goal lead with just six seconds left on the clock.

For Cohasset, Lindsey Durkin scored four times and added an assist, with Gabriella Flibotte registering a hat trick for the third consecutive game. Lisa Spirito scored twice, and Kara Wilcox, Kaleigh Swain and Kaley Madge all picked up single assists.

JoAnna Hamilton, who was peppered throughout the day, made 11 stops in net.

Jaffe said that with the only possible way for the two teams to meet again is having it happen in the playoffs, the Cohasset girls have a lot of work to do before the next meeting, a contest the local girls most likely are eager to play.

"We would love nothing better than to catch Duxbury in the

CHS softball drops opener to Abington

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

This is somewhat of a good news-bad news story. How about getting the bad news out of the way first?

The Green Wave engulfed the Skippers in Abington by a score of 15-0 over the five inning contest. Seven Abington runs in the first inning deflated the Skippers. The rest can be told by the by the final score.

"Abington is an outstanding team," admitted head coach Deb Bostwick. "Their offensive production is really tough to dampen."

In fact, the Green Wave racked up a total of 16 hits. The Cohasset players quickly realized a victory looked like a long shot.

The good news? Bostwick turned this depressing situation into an experiment for testing out players in different positions. She sent senior captain Melissa Crowley-Buck behind the plate.

"I moved Melissa from the outfield because her communication skills make a big difference when she's behind the plate," Bostwick explained.

The upbeat Bostwick praised Alida Tangherlini, Virginia Spofford, and Carly Salerno, for their performances in the outfield. Both Spofford and senior captain Erin Liddell contributed base hits and got stranded on base.

"This was a tough loss, but I think we'll come together," said Spofford. "The underclassmen have a lot to add to the team. Once everyone gels, we'll do much better."

Cohasset fans should not get bent out of shape around this Abington blowout. Most observers would argue a season can turn around in a second in high school sports. Recall the girls basketball team, which started out last December with a dismal performance only to end up deep into tournament territory.

Count on the Skippers to stick with their game until things start to click. The loss to the Green Wave will likely fade quickly.

Despite missing the first half of the season with a leg injury, Riley returned in solid form this winter down the stretch…Came back just in time to take second at the Cohasset Tournament in the 130 class…But his greatest accomplishment came in the postseason…As the top seed in the 130 bracket, Riley was the last man standing at the Div. 3 South Sectionals, besting the No. 2 seed from Canton to win the title…Riley re-injured his leg the next week at the Div. 3 State Championships…He earned a win in the first round, but was forced to sit out the rest of the competition, ending his four-year grappling career…A consistent performer throughout his tenure, Riley had wrestled at three different classes, seeing similar success at each one…For his efforts this season, he was named by teammates as the co-Outstanding Wrestler of the season…A three-time Patriot League All-star, Riley leaves some big shoes to be filled in the middle-weights.

Mike Pronk - Senior (Capt.)
171 - Marshfield

One of just a few seniors on the young and talented Marshfield squad, Pronk concluded his four-year wrestling career with a solid senior campaign…Despite missing a month of action due to a fractured shoulder, Pronk still managed to finish second at the Div. 2 South Sectionals to fellow All-Scholastic Alex Rollins of Silver Lake…Went on to take sixth at the Div. 2 State Championships a week later…Pronk went onto compete at the All-State Championships…Was second to Rollins again at Marshfield's own Holiday Tournament, helping the Rams finish sixth overall…Took third place at the North Quincy Tournament, as Marshfield was fourth out of 18 teams…Pronk's presence and consistency at the 171 position helped the Rams power to an 18-7 record, just two years after going 4-14 as a group…The squad tied Bridgewater-Raynham for the Old Colony League title (3-1)…Marshfield earned the No. 3 seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney and topped Somerset before being edged by eventual South winners, North Attleboro (36-25)…Pronk's younger brother, Joe (103), will continue the strong family tradition at MHS next season.

Karl Gumpright Senior (Capt.)
103 - Pembroke

Karl Gumpwright

He is easily the most accomplished wrestler in the young history of Pembroke. As a freshman and sophomore at Silver Lake he honed his skills and broke out as a wrestler in his junior and senior years at Pembroke. As a junior he was 38-7 and finished third at states, while being named a Patriot League all-star.

This season he went over the 100 career win mark while notching 41 wins. For his career he finished with a record of 120-22. He was the south sectional champion at the 103 pound class, as well as the Division 3 state champion this year while winning the Marshfield tournament, the Hudson tournament, and the Division 3 state championship. He was also named team MVP for the second straight year. He is a high honors student who excels in history. He has an interest in pursuing either education or criminal justice and will attend Bridgewater St. next fall.

Eric Johnson Senior (Capt.)

Eric Johnson

Pembroke was successful this year with the strength of its lower division wrestlers, and Johnson was one of the leaders of that group. As a team captain he complied a 40-10 record this year en route to the Division 3 south title at the 112 pound division. He was the runner-up in the Marshfield Tournament and took home third at both the North Quincy and Hudson Tournaments. He also finished fourth at the Division 3 state tournament. His best effort came in the south sectional final when he pinned his opponent in a surprising victory, for someone who was not regarded as a pinner. For his efforts he was named a Patriot League all-star this season. Johnson helped lift the Titans to an improbable run to the Division 3 south sectional title, the first such title for any sport for the second year school. In his spare time he enjoys wiffleball can also be found competing for the Titans' baseball team during the spring season.

Dan Longo - Sophomore
140 - Pembroke

If it seems like every Pembroke wrestler is on the team, well it's not quite true, but Longo was another deserving Titan who captured the South sectional title at 140 pounds this season while compiling a 20-4 record. He is only a sophomore and is the youngest of the group of accomplished Titan wrestlers but he showed he belonged this year. In addition to the sectional title Longo finsihed second at states and third at the Marshfield and Hudson tournaments. He got better as the year went along and that was evident in the final meets as he won his biggest matches. He had three wins in the sectional tournament, all by virtue of pin, and was just a machine that afternoon.

He is an honors student in geometry and biology, and also enjoys hockey and lacrosse. Next season he will be counted on as one of the leaders of the Titans.

Steve Tressel - Junior (Capt.)

Steve Tressel

Though he was overshadowed all season long by a very accomplished Rockland wrestler at 152 pounds, Tressel had the last laugh and the biggest win of the season. In the first match of the Division 3 south final Tressel pinned Jackie Erickson with a leg sweep in the final seconds of the third period to send a huge message to the Bulldogs that they were in for a battle that day. The Titans went on to win the meet and the sectional title. For the season Tressel finished second in the sectionals, third in Marshfield, and North Quincy, and won the Hudson Tournament while compiling a 37-6 record. Next season should be his big year to shine in the division with Erickson graduating. He is an honor roll student that enjoys finger painting, hanging out with friends, and computers in his spare time. He is also a standout on the football and baseball teams.

Dan Wandell - Junior (Capt.)
160 - Pembroke

The last of the Pembroke quintet, Wandell had a strong season as well in helping the Titans to the Division 3 south title and a share of the Patriot League title as well. He went 39-9 on the season while winning the Division 3 south title in the 160 pound division an improvement from last year's sixth place finish. He finished 5th in the Division 3 state tournament while winning the North Quincy, and Hudson tournaments. His performance in the sectionals while wrestling sick was very impressive and head coach Dave Vining felt he should have received outstanding wrestler recognition. He is a Massachusetts student-athlete citizenship award winner. In his spare time he enjoys football, wrestling politics, and lumberjacking. In the off-season he stays active wrestling in the Bay State games and for the Grizzly Wrestling Club and has also participated in National tournaments.

Dan Bohenek - Senior (Capt.)
189 - Rockland

The premier 189 wrestler in the area for the last two seasons, Bohenek was about as automatic as it gets…The three-time Patriot League All-star successfully defended his Div. 3 South Sectional and Div. 3 State titles this winter…He entered the All-State Championships having yet to be beat for the second-straight year in a row…There, Bohenek finished a strong fourth overall, falling in a very close 5-3 overtime decision to Xaverian…A three-time Patriot League All-star, Bohenek was the best in the class, helping the Bulldogs take second in the standings behind only Duxbury, to whom they lost to by one point…Was a regular in tourney finals, twice winning titles at the Marshfield, Cohasset, and Whitman/Hanson Invitationals…Bohenek's consistency at his position helped the second-seeded Rockland team best Foxboro in the Div. 3 South Sectional team tourney to reach the finals against PL foe Pembroke, where they were edged 36-33…Advanced to New Englands and won a match there to complete a 40-win season (132 in his five-year career)…An All-Scholastic linebacker last fall, Bohenek also plays baseball at RHS…He hopes to continue his football career at St. Anselm or Stonehill.

Jackie Erickson - Senior (Capt.)
152 - Rockland

Showed just how tough he really is when he managed to win the Div. 3 State title despite wrestling with a shoulder injury sustained in the semifinal round…Erickson earned the trip to the states after winning the Div. 3 South Sectional crown for the second-straight season…Still reeling from the injury at All-States, Erickson finished a strong fourth after being forced to default against his North Attleboro opponent…Captured his second-straight title at the Cohasset Tournament this winter, and was victor at the Whitman/Hanson Invite as well, helping the team win and finish third respectively…Finished fourth at the Marshfield Tourney…His consistency at his class helped the Bulldogs take second in the Patriot League (8-1) and finish 15-4 overall…Compiled a 42-4 record this winter, surpassing 130 wins in his five-year career…Helped Rockland reach the finals of the Div. 3 South Sectional team tourney with a big win over Foxboro in the semis…Erickson plans to

Chris Fucillo - Senior
275 - Rockland

Was a very consistent competitor at the heavyweight class this winter for the Bulldogs…Fucillo was a strong fourth at the Div. 3 South Sectionals and equaled his performance at the Div. 3 State Championships a week later, with a fourth-place finish, qualifying him for the All-State Championships…Fucillo's athleticism at the class set him apart from other big men…Performed extremely well at dual-meets, helping the Bulldogs capture second in the Patriot League (8-1) and 15-4 overall…Fucillo was won the heavyweight title at the Whitman/Hanson tourney, helping the team finish third, and was a strong second at the Cohasset Invite, where Rockland won for the second-straight year…His consistency on the mats helped the Bulldogs earn the No. 2 seed in the first-ever Div. 3 South Sectional team tourney, where Rockland advanced to the finals with a big win over Foxboro…Also a two-time football All-Scholastic, Fucillo also competes on the RHS spring track team…He was a PL All-star in both football and wrestling this season.

Donald Gillespie - Junior
135 - Scituate

Donald Gillespie

One of the leaders of a rejuvenated Sailors wrestling program that qualified for the Division 3 dual meet tournament this season…In that tournament, earned six points for his team with a pin against his Foxboro opponent…Gillespie was strong from beginning to end this year, finishing third in the Division 3 South sectionals and fifth in states…With that fifth place finish, he qualified for the All-States competition…A Patriot League All-Star this season…One of Gillespie's best performances came in January's Cohasset tournament, in which he won his weight class…Praised by his coaches for his work ethic and improvement throughout the season (he was named Most Improved Wrestler at the team's season-ending banquet), Gillespie will lead the Sailors once again next year

Alex Rollins -
171 - Silver Lake

Rollins was one of the toughest wrestlers to beat this season and a very bright spot for a team that was in transition with a first year head coach. Silver Lake had a difficult season as a team, but the Lakers could always count on a victory when Rollins came to the mat. The senior went undefeated in the regular season at the 171 pound division while capturing the south sectional title. He won the Marshfield, and North Quincy tournaments. He was 33-3 overall the year with 27 pins finishing third at states and third at All-states. He was the obvious choice for team MVP and a two-time Patriot League all-star. He is an honors student with a 3.5 gpa, and enjoys playing basketball and working on his rap demo. Rollins is also a standout on the football team and was a Patriot League all-star and a valuable defensive back.

Paul Keough -
130 -Weymouth

Wrestling is a tradition in Weymouth and Keough was another torch bearer this winter in leading the Wildcats to a 20-5 record on the season before falling to eventual state finalist New Bedford in the sectionals. He was 46-9 on the season and wound up with a career record of 93-20 over four years. He won the Whitman-Hanson tournament for the second time, and wound up second at the Woburn and Weymouth tournaments. GIRLS YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

Cohasset lax girls win four of six on April 9

Cohasset's youth girls lacrosse program had its first home games of the season besting Duxbury in three of four games on April 9, while its youngest girls took to the road.

The day started in Cohasset with a 15-and-Under (grades 7/8) contest that looked more like a track meet than an ordinary lacrosse game. In an up-and-down, end-to-end contest, the Cohasset White team fell behind 3-0, then scored four straight goals to take a lead, then let Duxbury 2 tie the game, then scored four straight to take the lead for good. By the end of the half, the score was 10-7 Cohasset; the second half slowed only slightly, as Cohasset White kept up the torrid pace and cruised to a 17-10 win.

Amy Meikleham – playing her first game of the season – made up for some lost time by scoring 6 goals. Isabelle Franklin netted four goals and added an assist, with Kaci Kucinski scoring a hat trick. Hannah Burgess scored twice, Jessica Fusco added a nifty solo score and Lindsay Allard potted one goal to go along with two assists. Abby Faulkner also posted two assists, with Maddy Altholtz adding a single helper on the day.

Thomson Jaffe and Molly McElgunn split the goaltending duties and combined for six saves, with McElgunn shutting the door in the second half to enable the White 15-U squad to raise its record to 2-0.

Next, it was the Cohasset White 13-U team (grades 5/6) against Duxbury 2. Allie Farren converted an Anna Seraikas feed to tie the score at 1, but from there Cohasset failed to capitalize on several quality chances while Duxbury slipped in two goals to make the score 3-1 at the break.

After Kristen Alexander slammed home a direct-free position shot to make it 3-2, Duxbury scored two quick goals. Sarah Evans brought Cohasset back into the contest and Carly Oddleifson score her first career goal, but the home team could never get things back to even, and Duxbury scored two late goals to make the final score 7-4 for the visitors.

Ellie Tedeschi made seven saves in the net for the White team, which saw its record fall to 1-1.

The Cohasset Blue teams had the most exciting games of the day, each seeing the score swing wildly throughout the course of the action.

For the 13-U Blue team, Cohasset took a quick lead on the strength of two Whitney Jaffe goals – one on a penalty shot – only to see Duxbury score three quick ones to take a lead. Jaffe answered for Cohasset, and Alison Whelan responded to yet another Duxbury score to know the game at 4 as the teams went to the break.

Duxbury scored first in the second half, only to see Isabella Flibotte feed Danielle Healy to tie the game up. Whelan gave the home team a lead, but Duxbury responded with two scores to take the lead at 7-6. Whelan completed a hat trick to tie the score, Marie Gilman then made an end-to-end rush before feeding Hope Kissick to give Cohasset a lead, and Jaffe scored her fourth of the day on a left-handed shot off a breakaway. Christina Healy answered a Duxbury goal with one of her own, and Cohasset held the lead to close out the game with a 10-8 win.

A huge part of the win was the stellar effort of Stephanie Brierly in the nets. Brierly stopped 12 Duxbury shots, denying Duxbury time and again when it looked like the visitors were ready to take command of the game.

Finally, the Cohasset Blue 15-U team took the field, and took charge early, jumping to a 4-0 lead that stretched to 5-2 at halftime. Duxbury responded with the first four goals of the second half to take the lead, and the teams then traded goals to get to 7-6 before Cohasset potted the final four games of the day and shut down Duxbury's fast-break-oriented attack to come away with a 10-7 win.

Isabelle Franklin scored a hat trick, Olivia Murphy and Kaleigh Teague each scored twice, with Lindsay MacNaught, Kelsey Erler and Hannah Burgess scoring once each. Anna Michalowski contributed two assists, and Thomson Jaffe and Molly McElgunn backstopped the team, contributing a total of seven saves in the win.

At the 11-and Under level (grades 3 and 4), the Blue and White teams took to the road on April 9. The Blue squad won its second straight game with a dominating 7-0 performance against Pembroke; the Cohasset squad kept the game close by moving its defense to offense after halftime, allowing more players a shot at the glory that comes from scoring points.

Victoria Bryan led the way with a hat trick, Peyton MacNaught scored twice and Dagmar Seppala and Annie McElgunn added solo scores. Seppala, Christina Tedeschi, Charlotte Allard and Rebecca Brown – who moved from defense in the second half – all notched assists on the day.

The 11-and-Under White squad , meanwhile, jumped out to an early lead in Norwell, only to lose it in the final seconds and come away with a tie. After surrendering the first goal of the game, Cohasset scored the next three, helped by a strong transition game that created good scoring opportunities. Cohasset maintained its lead through the second half, as the teams traded goals, but the home team was able to get a shot and knot things at 5 with just five seconds left to play.

Lily McCarthy scored twice for Cohasset, with Caroline Farren chipping in a goal and assist. Lexa Grasz and Isabelle Dunne added solo markers, with Caroline Evans, Alexandra Raymond and Christine Guinee picking up assists as the team's record fell to 1-0-1.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse has no games scheduled for April 16 but returns to the field on Sunday, April 23. For details, visit www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

Girls youth teams open strong against Hingham

The Cohasset youth girls lacrosse teams opened their 2006 season on a beautiful early spring day in Hingham on Sunday April 2, and after a slow beginning, came on strong in the end.

The Cohasset Blue 15-and-Under team (grades 7/8) started the day squaring off against Hingham White, and it showed one of the big effects the older teams will face this year. Seven of the top 10 scorers in the history of the youth program are part of the current high school freshman class, meaning that the girls who are still in the youth program have a lot of lost firepower to make up for.

That showed in the first game, as Cohasset matched Hingham in scoring chances, but simply failed to put the ball in the net. Thomson Jaffe made six first-half saves; backed by goals from Isabelle Franklin and Hannah Burgess, it was enough to keep Cohasset in the game, which went into halftime tied at 2.

From there, however, Cohasset's inability to net the ball showed. Jaffe made five more stops in the second half, but it simply wasn't enough. Burgess and Lindsay Allard scored to keep the game respectable, but Hingham left the field with a 7-4 victory. For Jaffe, the 11 stops pushed her past the 300 saves mark for her youth career; no other goalie in the history of the youth program has even half that amount.

The failure-to-score problem continued in the day's second game, which featured the Blue 13-U team (grades 5/6) against Hingham's White squad. Despite scores from Christina Healy and Danielle Healy, Cohasset fell behind 4-2 by halftime, despite having as many shooting opportunities as the home team.

In the second half, Hingham stretched its lead to 7-3 – the Cohasset goal coming off the stick of Katherine Brown – before Cohasset kicked it into gear. Whitney Jaffe sandwiched a hat trick around a Sarah Evans goal, as Cohasset clawed back into it, pulling as close as 8-7. The game ended with a 9-7 final in favor of Hingham.

Ellie Tedeschi went the distance in net, making five stops for Cohasset.

Leave it to Cohasset's youngest girls to turn things around. As both 11-U teams (grades 3/4) took the field in the middle of the day, playing games simultaneously.

The Cohasset 11-U Blue team fell behind 2-0 against Hingham White, but then roared back to take a 4-2 halftime lead. The surge was the result of excellent ball movement, which resulted in scores from Kathryn Dunn, Peyton MacNaught, Eliza Murphy and Charlotte Allard. While Cohasset started finding the cage, its defense started to gain confidence too, with Shannon McGowan blocking several passes and goalie Maddie Curley making a great save from point-blank range.

It was more Cohasset domination in the second half, with Victoria Bryan, Dagmar Seppala and Molly Fitzgerald all picking up several ground balls and winning nearly every draw. Bryan also scored two goals in the second half to help put the game away. Dunn picked up another goal and assist in the second half and McNaught added two assists to her scoring total on the day.

Jackie Driscoll also scored her first of the season on a nice drive to the net, making the final score 8-3 Cohasset. The defense continued its strong play with Hannah Newhall clearing the ball particularly well.

Meanwhile, the Cohasset White 11-U team jumped out to a 3-0 first-half lead and was never headed against Hingham Yellow. Alison Bodner dominated the offensive zone with one shot on goal and assists on the first two scores, first feeding Katie McCabe and then dishing to Christine Guinee who stuck her shot in the upper right corner. Katie McKenna sparked the third goal, carrying the ball through midfield and hitting Caroline Evans with a crisp pass; Evans dumped it Isabelle Dunne, who juked the defense and smoked another shot into the net.

Hingham regrouped for the second half, putting together several strong offense efforts, only to be denied by Lily McCarthy. After finally breaking through for a score, Cohasset turned the tide, with Gabrielle Weissman breaking up a play that appeared headed for the net; Emily Robbins scooped up the loose ball and was able to sink her shot to expand the lead. McKenna closed out the day's scoring with her second goal of the day, making the final score 5-1 in favor of the visitors.

When the older girls returned to the field, they seemed inspired by the success of the younger ones, although it might just have been that they appeared to be up

BOYS YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

April 2 Cohasset Boys Lacrosse Highlights

The season opener for U15 White was down in Bridgewater on an oversized field. Under the new three-team model at U15ís, the White squad fielded 14 players against Bridgewaterís four-year young program and jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first quarter on a goal by Tom Flibotte. Ian Quinlan added an unassisted goal in the second quarter to take us into the half with a 2-0 lead.

With the winter rust shaken off, the second half was all Cohasset. The defense broke a couple sticks and kept order in front of the crease. The hustle was abundant. Good transition work gave us three more goals in the third quarter, another from Flibotte and two from face-off man Alex Kinnealy.

Bridgewater finally put one by an otherwise impenetrable Jack Murphy in the fourth quarter. With Conor Queenan potting one in the fourth quarter on an assist from Kinnealy, the White squad took a 6-1 victory over Bridgewater.

The U15ís will practice from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Friday nights at Milliken.

The U15 Boys Blue Team hosted Bridgewater in the first game of the day and in a manner that weíve come to expect from this talented 7/8 grade group, managed a decisive and well executed victory, shutting out their opponent 12-0.

Mark Seraikas and Chris Brown swapped off in the cage, contributing to a strong defensive effort with both also playing close-D with Will Lynner and Pat Dunn pitching in to stifle any offensive momentum the other team tried to muster. Key midfield work by Nick Lieberman (2G), Derek Youngman (1G), Chase Murphy (1G), and Olly Forrer (2G/1A) dominated the possession counts, making it impossible for Bridgewater to gain any ground.

Offensively, the attack group of Dean Driscoll (1G/2A), Luke Ernst (2G/1A), and Ian Porter (1G) kept the game out of reach with precision passing and ball movement that seemed to always find the back of the net. Before jumping in the goal in the 2nd half, Brown added some excitement from his D position by breaking up an offensive threat, taking the ground ball full field on a fast break, and after a HS level face dodge (try that with a long pole!), finished the effort in style by putting up a score of his own on a rocket that found the upper left-hand corner. All in all, a good start to what should be a great season.

The U15 Gray began the season on a positive note with a strong 10-4 win against an enthusiastic but less skilled Abington team. Led by particularly focused play by the attack and defense, Cohasset jumped out to a 5-0 lead in the first quarter on two goals each by Max Shipp and Will Wise, and an aggressive end-to-end rush and goal by Tom Pecca.

Abington clawed back with three unanswered goals to begin the second quarter, narrowing the score to 5-3. However, Cohasset quickly regained the momentum, led by two strong ground ball fast breaks by Graham Stevenson, the first resulting in a goal by Shipp, and the second in an unassisted goal by Stevenson. Cohasset closed the half with a goal by Wise, assisted by Shipp, to lead 8-3.

In the second half, strong defensive play from both the defense and the middies held Abington to one goal, while Wise tallied two more, the first assisted by Carrier and the second assisted by Christian Lemaire. For the day, Wise finished with five goals and one assist, and Shipp had three goals and two assists.

The Cohasset U13 White squad opened its 2006 campaign on the road against Bridgewater. Despite only having one outside practice before game day, the boys demonstrated some accomplished early season lacrosse. The squad played consistently across all four quarters, with a nice balance of veteran 6th graders and emerging 5th graders, and ended up on top 10-8.

Led by goaltender Chris Murphy, Cohasset demonstrated a defensive commitment that made the difference in the game. Joining in the defensive effort were Ryan McGovern, Chris Silvia, David Hill and Colin Bell. The Cohasset midfield played quite well on both ends of the field, leading a number of fine offensive and defensive transitions. Midfielders Charlie Neaves, Nick Tangherlini, Brendan Queenan, Anthony Nahill, Coleman Hernon, Matt Swanborg and Adrian Dunne, all contributed to solid two-way play.

Combined with midfield assistance, the Cohasset attack consistently found fine offensive opportunities. Attackmen Chris Lunde, Drew Nahill and Ryan MacCarthy all provided highlights for the fans.

Cohassetís scoring included goals from Lunde (4), Tangherlini (4), Nahill and Neaves, with assists going to Neaves (2), Lunde (2) and Nahill.

The U13 Boys Blue Team got off to a great start to their season in a tightly contested opening win against visiting Bridgewater.

In a match that saw multiple lead changes Cohasset dug just a little deeper in the waning minutes of the game to notch the victory 5-4. In this first match up of the season, the boys played both sides of the ball extremely well led by a stingy defense by Willy Brown in the cage who shut down several point blank shots, newcomer Blake Erler who has found his spot in close-D, and anchored by Ben Curley, a formidable presence in the middle.

The transition game was in good hands with middie istudsi Dean (2G) and Mitch McNary (1G) doing a lot of the heavy lifting leading several fast breaks, filling in on defense, and each getting on the scoreboard. Dan Barnes and Derek Froio were also key factors with Derek tallying a notch to cap off a sensational iclear-to-scoreî effort that used 4 quick passes up the field that found Derek wide open on a nice feed from behind by Dean.

Having fallen behind by a point, the boys rallied in the last three minutes to tie the score and then to take the lead for good. The tying effort was on a nice give and go from Froio to John Mills who found the opposing goalie looking the other way, but the real treat was soon to come. With less than a minute to play, in a mad scramble around the cage that looked more like a rugby scrum then a lax game, Mills again found glory by muscling through a ground ball, dodging several defenders from behind, and burying the rock on a spectacular left-handed sniper shot that sealed the day.

A great ending to a great day of lax.

The season got off to a quick start for the Grey U-13 team on Sunday as the initial face-off went to Alex Evans and he hit John Collins in stride to score the first goal of the year. The Greyís never looked back as they faced a determined Abington squad at Milliken Field.

Most of the action stayed in the Abington end in the first half as Evan Yeager, Danny Czerkawski and a forceful Gus Helbock notched goals on great transition plays. Kyle Healy saw nine shots in goal and stopped a few zingers, as Abington got one to close the half 4-1.

The defense held tight for Grey with strong showings by Jim Lydon, Robbie Hillman and Pat Kearney. Geoff Swain had the seasonís first long stick defensive end to end run at the visitors goal. The scrappy middie lines of Foster Eymer, Zach Strecker, Teddy Patsos, Blair McGowen and Jamie Timothy gave Abington fits as they had trouble getting to the Grey goal.

In the second half, the net was defended by Brennan Bukowski as he pushed back four shots, only allowing one. Yeager, Collins and Czerkawksi netted second goals each in the half and the game ended as it started, with Evans feeding Healy this time, for his second of the half as well. The Grey overall exhibited an excellent team effort in its first game together gaining a 9-2 win for opening day.

Cohasset U11 White versus Bridgewater (away)

In the first quarter Mark McKenna got us on the scoreboard with a goal and the assisted Curtis Golden on his goal. Score 2-0 at the end of the first. In the second quarter McKenna scored again and Bridgewater got one in. Will Golden had two saves in the first half. Score at halftime: 3-1.

Big scoring third quarter for Cohasset with four goals from four players : Golden, Ryan McKeon, Cole Kissick and Charlie Michaloski. Charlie Steele was a very key play maker as he assisted on several of these goals. Jack McElgunn was our goalie for the second half and had three saves. End of third, Cohasset 7, Bridgewater 3 as they added one more in that quarter.

Even scoring in the final quarter as Kissick and Michaloski added their second goals. Steele assisted again by feeding the ball to Kissick while Kissick ran to the crease for the last goal for Cohasset. Bridgewater slipped two in for a final score of 9-3.

Cohasset White played a coordinated game on the field, with strong ground ball coverage and assisted goals. By the second half it was clear that the U11 boys were ready for the 2007 season.

Cohasset U11 Blue versus Bridgewater (home)

The game started in Cohassetís favor, with a quick assisted goal by attackman Cole Maher. Assist by middie Colin Whelan, who continued tocontribute at both offense and defense throughout the game. Zack Coggins made a great shot from close in and then Max Montgomery finished the first quarter with a third goal for Cohasset. Bridgewater middies broke into the crease for two quick goals and the quarter ended 3-2.

The game progressed with Cohasset maintaining a lead. Henry Brown, Conner Green and Jeff Powers all had goals, while Montgomery added another and Coggins added two more for three goals for the game. Cohasset passed and covered ground balls very well, with notable midfield play by Mark Brown. We also dominated in face-offs with Colin Whelan winning four and newcomer Martin Buckley nabbing one.

Defense held off some great shots with Henry Brown having two saves and Tommy Powers three. Bridgewater scored mostly on fast breaks but the defense held off most comers with solid play by Sam Murphy, Jake Burchill and Harry Sarakis.

In all, the team played a very solid game with contributions by all players to finish the game: Cohasset 9, Bridgewater 7.

Editorís Note: Next week, the Mariner will recap the boys'action from their April 9 games.

against weaker teams from Hingham. Either way, Cohasset rolled for the rest of the day.

First, the Cohasset White 15-U team jumped to a 6-2 halftime lead and rolled to a 13-4 win over Hingham Yellow. Burgess, playing her second game of the day, netted four goals, with Franklin, Olivia Sullivan, Maddy Altholtz and defender Mimi Mahoney scoring two times each. Allard netted one goal and Thomson Jaffe picked up an assist on one of Altholtz's goals.

Jaffe and Molly McElgunn split the goaltending chores, with McElgunn seeing the bulk of the action and making five saves against one goal allowed during her time in the cage.

It was more of the same when the Cohasset White 13-U girls squared off with Hingham's Yellow team. This time, a 6-2 halftime lead was turned into a 13-3 victory.

Allie Farren, playing in her first-ever game, led the way with four scores, with Alison Whelan and Whitney Jaffe both picking up two goals and an assist. Hope Kissick added two more scores, with Kristen Alexander, Sage Stebbins and Megan Green adding one goal each. Stephanie Brierly made four saves to backstop the victory.

CHS boys improve to 4-1

despite being flattened by Falmouth defenders each time he took a shot. Junior midfielder Chris Davis, who worked the give-and-go to perfection with Buick and Mike Bunstein, had two goals and two assists. Sophomore midfielder Chuck Czerkawski added a goal and three assists and junior attackman Mike Bunstein continued his fine early season play with four assists.

Curran praised on his team's unselfish play.

"The boys are really passing the ball well, cutting to space off the ball and finding the open man," he said. "Eighty percent of our goals this year have been assisted. Even with sophomore Mike Grimm out with an early season knee injury, this team has a lot of firepower and a lot of scoring options."

The Cohasset defense was again very solid in front of Libby. Conor Holway and Jake Cuneo provided a big physical presence in the middle and Brown harassed the Falmouth attack all day, taking the ball away on numerous occasions. Both Libby (14 saves) and sophomore Nate Porter (six saves) never let Falmouth back in the game after Buick's second half offensive explosion.

Duxbury 14, Skippers 6

The two-time Division 1 defending state champions overmatched Cohasset at Alumni Field on Tuesday. Duxbury dominated the contest from the beginning until the Skippers made a late run in the fourth quarter.

The Cohasset defense, particularly Libby (26 saves), played very well in the loss. Duxbury had an overwhelming margin in both ground balls and time of possession, which made the difference. Cohasset again hurt itself with too many penalties, with Duxbury capitalizing four times on man-up situations.

Duxbury All-American long stick Chris Nixon (bound next year for nationally ranked Georgetown) seemed to be everywhere throughout the game. Nixon picked up ground balls and made solid hits in the midfield, stripped the ball behind the goal from the Cohasset attack and even had two goals for the visitors.

Flibotte led the Cohasset offense with a hat trick and one assist. Flibotte scored his first goal beating Nixon clean on a beautiful roll dodge in traffic. Bunstein, P.J. McCaw and Davis added single tallies for Cohasset in the losing effort. Curran thought his squad came out a little tentative against the "best team" in the state.

"Duxbury beat us to the ground balls and we had trouble maintaining possession against their pressure defense," he said. "We just had too many turnovers and penalties. You can't give a quality program like Duxbury extra chances with the ball and the man up advantage."

Curran praised the continued outstanding play of Libby, and the fact that his club played hard through the final whistle.

"Libby has positioned himself well in goal, made some spectacular saves with his quickness and generally made good decisions on clearing passes," said the coach. "My team never quit."

On a bright note for the future, JV coach Ronan Buick reported that his team fought back to earn a 6–6 tie against the Duxbury JV.

Skippers 13, Barnstable 9

Cohasset returned to its winning ways against Division 1 Barnstable at home on Wednesday evening.

The Skippers jumped out to an early 5–0 lead. Czerkawski found Aidan Buick on the crease with a beautiful feed for the first score. Flibotte then scored on a textbook fast break started by an aggressive ball strip by Cuneo, a ground ball pick-up by Kucinski, a quick feed to Buick and finally a perfect assist from Bunstein to Flibotte.

Czerkawski, assisted by Flibotte, Flibotte on a roll dodge from behind, and Buick unassisted added quick goals. However, Barnstable stormed back to cut the deficit to 5–4 at halftime on a series of fast breaks. Cohasset was fortunate to kill a two-man down penalty situation toward the end of the first half.

At the start of the second half, Peter Ernst, cutting to the goal, scored quickly on the man up on a feed from Buick. Davis scored unassisted and then Bunstein fed Buick for a "comfortable" 8-5 Cohasset lead. Barnstable again came back to tie the game at 8-8 which had the Cohasset fans on edge.

McCaw put the Skippers on top with a bullet from outside and then junior midfielder Dan Trendowicz found Flibotte on the crease twice within a minute for two quick strikes. Bunstein, continuing his unselfish play, assisted on another Buick goal to put the game away. Kucinski finished off the scoring when he stole an errant pass at midfield and fired a shot with his longstick into the upper corner.

Curran was not pleased with his team's eleven penalties.

"We need to do a better job of staying out of the penalty box," he said. "This was a funny game of scoring spurts. We scored five and Barnstable came back. We scored three and Barnstable came back. Fortunately, the final scoring spurt was ours."

Buick (two goals, four assists), Flibotte (four goals, one assist) and Bunstein (two goals, one assist) led the way for Cohasset. Libby had 10 saves.

This report was submitted by the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters.

Deja vu all over again

FROM GIRLS TENNIS, PAGE 19

With the third set tied at 4, Meehan smashed a forehand winner to break Ursuline's serve and give her and Landon a 5-4 lead. In the next game, Meehan served to a 40-15 advantage, giving Cohasset a double-match point.

Once again, however, the Ursuline team fought back, taking the next four points to break serve. That gave the visitors the momentum, and they ultimately took the set, 7-5, and the match for their team.

"That match came down to whoever served best, and they out-served us," said coach Meehan. "But, to our girls' credit, they never backed off. The bottom line is you have to play tight matches to win tight matches. It's good competition to play these teams, and it's only going to help us down the road."

Up until Wednesday, the Skippers had not been truly tested. The most competitive had been the April 3 win over Westwood by a 4-1 score. Grossman, who is 6-0 on the season, lost the first set but came roaring back, 6-2, 6-3, to take the win. Senior Emilie Shea earned a straight set win in third singles, with the Anderson/Landon and Meehan/Landon duos also taking straight set victories.

The team's other four matches have seen some lineup shuffling to get other girls some match action, and they all have responded, as Cohasset defeated Sacred Heart, Abington, Carver and Harwich by 5-0 scores.

Grossman and senior Susan Curry swept the top two singles spots in all those matches, with four 6-0, 6-0 matches between them. Senior Remy Lee picked up a couple wins in third singles, with Shea and junior Christie Muir taking one match apiece in that lineup spot.

Anderson, Meehan, Shea, Lee, the Landon twins, Kate McBride and Carrie Muir all saw doubles action in those four matches, and again, all were victorious.

Lady laxers' loss shows plenty of work left to be done playoffs," said the coach. "I would love to see Duxbury again, and I hope our girls would believe they have a better shot."

Skippers 13, Falmouth 8

Cohasset hosted Falmouth in the rain and sleet last Friday, and the home team overcame both the elements and a tough opponent to start its season 3-0.

The two teams traded goals in the early going until the score was 4-all roughly 10 minutes into the game. At that point, however, Cohasset took control and scored the final five goals of the half. Spirito had a hand in every goal of that spurt, netting three herself and feeding Flibotte for the other two goals.

Falmouth mounted a comeback after the half scoring four of the first five goals to shave the margin to two. The Clippers also benefited from stellar goaltending, turning away one threat after the next and refusing to allow Cohasset to pull away despite dominating the time of possession.

In the end, however, Cohasset's superior physical conditioning kicked in, and the home team controlled the action down the stretch, scoring the game's final three goals and holding down a potent Clippers transition game.

Spirito finished the day with six goals and two assists. Durkin added a hat trick plus an assist, despite missing about half of the game after being checked in the head by a Falmouth defender. Flibotte had her second consecutive hat trick and Swain scored her first goal of the season subbing for the injured Durkin. Mary Previte added an assist.

Hamilton made six saves in the net for Cohasset, who are next in action on the 24th when they travel down the Cape to take on Cape Cod Academy. On the 27th, the girls host defending Division 2 state champion Norwell.

JV report

Duxbury 7, Skippers 5

The junior varsity squad lost its perfect record in a hard-fought loss to Duxbury on April 11.

For the first time this season, the jayvee squad actually scored first, with Caitlin Mahoney registering her first goal of the season. Duxbury answered just 14 seconds later and scored twice more to build a 3-1 lead before Madeline Leahy stemmed the tide. Aisling Guinee's six first-half saves kept the team in the game, as the score was 4-2 Duxbury at the break.

Two Duxbury scores in the first two minutes of the second stanza seemed to put the game out of reach, but Cohasset fought back. Leahy fed midfielder Jen Silvia for her first goal of the year, Katie Gaumer covnerted a feed from Michelle Madge and Mahoney scored again to make it a one-goal game with just 1:13 to play.

Needing to be aggressive to get the ball back, Cohasset instead allowed a fast-break goal, due to some outstanding passing from Duxbury, and the game ended with the home team on top 7-5.

Guinee finished with 12 saves on the day.

Skippers 9, Falmouth 2

Cohasset's junior varsity girls had to wait through the cold and wet of the varsity game only to have conditions turn really ugly by the time they took the field against Falmouth.

The girls started the game as cold as the weather, allowing Falmouth to get two quick scores and failing to hold the ball, let alone must much attack. From that early point on, however, it was the Cohasset team that caught fire, running away with the game.

Michelle Madge broke the scoring seal for Cohasset, and her younger sister Kaley followed with two of her own to give the Skippers the lead. Gaumer netted a solo score, Kaley Madge set up a Grace Clougherty goal and then converted a feed from Mahoney to make the score 6-2 at the half.

Guinee kept Falmouth at bay in the second half, with five of her six saves on the day coming in the second stanza, and all of them stopping short-range shots or penalty throws. While the defense – led by Amanda Hurd, Natalie Hunt and Stefi Belz – shut down Falmouth, the offense expanded the lead. Kayla Farren scored a solo marker, Madeline Leahy nailed her first goal of the season and then fed Gaumer for the final tally, as Cohasset walked away with a 9-2 win.

The JV girls are now 2-1.

The JV report was submitted by coach Chuck Jaffe.

Spring sports teams boast winning records

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

Let me start by giving a big shout out to Brendon Barrett for gathering all of the news and information incorporated in last week's article. While I was on a field trip last Tuesday, Brendon so generously went around to all of the usual news beats for me and collected probably the largest amount of information so far this year, so a big thanks to him.

This week may be an abbreviated one, that doesn't mean that the news will be, for I have a rather full-size portion that you can feast on. The spring sports teams are tearing it up so far with every team boasting a record over .500. The usually erratic New England weather has leveled off, so seniors should be in for smooth sailing the rest of the year in terms of eating lunch in the courtyard and frolicking in the spring weather once May rolls around. According to nurse Collins, this is precisely what we, as students, and everyone for that matter, should be doing – going out and getting fresh air. But enough with all that jazz, here is the best part, the news for this week.

• Sign up for Drivers Education in the Main Office. New session will begin May 8. You must be 15 years and nine months old to be eligible.

• The vision and hearing tests being conducted by the nurse for all students are almost completed, and a letter will be sent home if any problems exist.

• Mr. Welch sent me, Chris Pescatore, to Government Day at the Massachusetts State House on Friday, April 7. Government Day is an opportunity for students all over Massachusetts to come together and interact to discuss legislation and learn how a bill is heard and debated.

• Mr. Buckley's Outdoor Education was blessed by the presence of Jessica Rowcroft on Monday, April 10. Jessica spoke to the class about heritage landscapes and how we can make and preserve them.

• Some 10th graders will be going on a field trip to Quincy District Court to see a performance about a freed slave.

• Ryan Engram wrote an essay about the separation of powers in our government and it was submitted to the Supreme Judiciary Court of Massachusetts as part of an essay competition.

• Sign up for the June 10 ACT tests by May 5. Sign up for the June 3 SAT tests by April 28.

• The Cohasset High School Concert Band won the Bronze Medal at the statewide music festival.

• Charles Miller won the CP Harvey Jazz Award for outstanding musicianship in Jazz.

• Nils Sceery, Melissa Crawford, and Jess Bilbo were all published in last month's issue of Teen Ink.

• Thanks to Laura Sinclair for generously donating 100 photos from Mr. Skipper to the Spinnaker.

• There was a senior class meeting Monday to discuss upcoming dates for end-of-year and graduation procedures.

• The superintendent's Administration Council met on Tuesday.

• The PSO President's Council met on Tuesday.

• There was a meeting for the Relay for Life in the Library on Wednesday.

Voilà, some nice information this week that is in dire need of being obtained and reserved for a little longer than usual because next week is April vacation and although I feel it is my duty to relay the news to you the reader, I am afraid there just won't be any. The school will be empty and I will be away with my fellow seniors rewarding ourselves after the strenuous year that we have partaken of so far this year. So with that, enjoy the week off students.

I will be back in two weeks to report the happenings of our wonderful school.

Parenting teens discussion at First Parish

Topics include risk-taking behavior, suicide and violence prevention, relationship issues, and adjustment challenges. The discussion is open to the public. Those planning to attend should call Sandy at 781-383-1100 or email sbailey@firstparishcohasset.org by noon on Tuesday, April 25.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Annual arts night is May 11

— OSGOOD-DEER HILL NOTES —

• The third annual Osgood-Deer Hill Arts Night will be held Thursday, May 11, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. This year's theme is "Arts Across America," bringing American art to students through dance, photography, music, poetry, sculpture, and more. Event organizers need local artisans to help teach children about the many venues of American art. Those interested in sharing their talents and interests should email Diane Kennedy at devline@juno.com.

• Congratulations to the students at Osgood, Deer Hill, and Cohasset Middle School for their role in making this year's PSO Read-a-thon a tremendous success. With the coordination of Tracy Thomas and Suzanne Jackisch, students recorded their reading minutes and secured pledges from family and friends.

• Introducing the Deer Hill "Tommy Award." We have all heard of the Emmy, the Oscar, and the Tony. Now students will have the chance to earn the coveted Tommy Award as part of the Deer Hill character education program. The Tommy Award, which resembles a 14-inch Oscar, is designed to recognize students and classes who offer support to custodian Mr. Jones by helping with cleaning and recycling. Students who help Mr. Jones will receive smiley face tokens. The class that collects the most Tommy Tokens wins the Tommy Award for the week.

• Grades Five and Six Deer Hill Band members will be marching in the Little League Parade on Saturday, April 29. Band members will be wearing Deer Hill Band t-shirts, which will be given out the week prior to the parade. Thanks to American Legion Post 118, Cohasset Police Association, Goodwin Graphics, Goulet & Company and T. Jones Landscaping for their generous sponsorship.

• The Third Annual Cohasset PSO Telethon will be broadcast live Wednesday evening, May 10 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Channel 22. Viewers can phone in a tax-deductible contribution and be entered into various raffles. To donate for the raffle or online auction email Claudia McKeon at psotelethondonations@yahoo.com. Include the item, value, and where it can be picked up. Anyone interested in performing can email the names of the performers, talent-act, and approximate length of performance to cohassetpsotelethon@yahoo.com as soon as possible. To mail in a pledge instead of phoning in, make check payable to Cohasset PSO and send to Cohasset PSO, P.O. Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025, postmarked by Monday, May 8.

Kids' variety show benefit is April 28

The By Kids 4 Kids Cabaret will present its premiere variety show on Friday, April 28 at 4 p.m. in the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common. The first-ever performance by this group – featuring entertainers from ages 11-16 – will benefit the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS and Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundations.

The free one-time performance will feature singers, musicians, bands, and dancers showcasing their talents in a wide range of styles and disciplines. Thomson Jaffe, an eighth grader at Cohasset Middle-High School, is organizing the event. Doors will open at 3:40 p.m., and the show will run about 90 minutes.

Tickets are not on sale, but attendees will be asked to make donations to support the two research groups, which help children around the world. For more information about the benefit call Thomson Jaffe, 781-383-9858.

'Big' override supporters prevail in Town Election

address those deeper, underlying issues to give our schools an infusion of much needed cash now while figuring out how to address these trends and minimize the need for large overrides in the future."

Hill, who has a 6-year-old son in the school system, said he supports the $725,000 override to keep the town from losing ground but could not support the $1.5 million override because he says "there is a better way to do things."

"I don't necessarily know what those things are or I would have run for the School Committee," he said. "But I do know you can't keep throwing money at a broken wheel — there are problems that need addressing."

Hill said property taxes are forcing some residents to move. "Soon the town will be all 'haves' and the 'have nots' will be gone," he said. Hill said if he runs again it won't be "for a long time."

"The override is definitely the top issue, but it would be unfair to the candidates to imply there are not other substantial factors influencing voters' decisions."

Steven Fusco, right, campaigns with his dad, Ralph Fusco, along Highland Avenue on Saturday afternoon. Fusco was elected to a three-year term on the School Committee.

Two-term incumbent Rick Flynn, 47, of Summer Street, and political newcomer, Steven Fusco, 45, of Surry Drive, won the seats on the School Committee. Flynn, who changed his mind about not seeking reelection and got into the race, and Fusco, who serves as chairman of the school Technology Committee, both supported the $1.495 override. Flynn and Fusco received 1,346 and 1,328 votes respectively.

Leonora "Lee" Jenkins, 57, of Jerusalem Road, came in third with 1,150 votes (178 votes behind Fusco). This was Jenkins' second run in two years for the School Committee. Last year Pam Wilson, who did not run for reelection this year, squeaked by Jenkins with 33 votes to fill a one-year, unexpired term. Jenkins, who is co-founder of Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers — a tax watchdog group — had not endorsed either override prior to Saturday's vote.

Barbara Buckley, 44, of North Main St., withdrew from the race after the ballots were printed. Her decision likely helped Flynn and Fusco. While Buckley still got 279 votes, a strong Buckley campaign could have split the Flynn-Fusco vote, helping Jenkins.

Flynn said while the chance of the $1.495 million override passing definitely got a boost with Saturday's election, he will continue to do his part to help educate voters on why the override is needed.

"I don't think the results mean this was a one-issue election," Flynn said about the victory for the three pro-override candidates. "I think voters understood the schools are part of the town and pitting the schools against the town makes no sense.

"If the schools go down the drain, it's not good for anyone," he said. "I tried to focus on the 'big picture.'"

Flynn explained that while this was his third run for the School Committee, it was his first contested race and therefore, the first time he had to put a whole campaign together.

He did not think allegations that the schools have "mismanaged and misspent money" resonated with voters. "Dr. Walsh has done a good job and has brought clarity to the budget process."

Flynn said the number of new people who got involved in the election process this time around was encouraging.

Fusco said while it is true the three winning candidates supported the $1.495 million override, the election results should not be overly correlated with override vote expectations.

"The override is definitely the top issue, but it would be unfair to the candidates to imply there are not other substantial factors influencing voters' decisions," he said. "Although the override has dominated some of the press coverage, I wouldn't describe this as a one-issue election. The people I have spoken with have had equally strong feelings about declining MCAS scores, the schools' overall ratings, user fees, and the need to implement recommended curriculum changes."

Fusco said the larger override is needed to move the schools forward. "Even though I am prepared to deal with any outcome, we can't hire new teachers, purchase new books, etc., without an infusion of capital."

Jenkins said she believes this election was driven by emotions and under the circumstances there was little chance of having a rational open debate about the issues.

"One selectman said 'you either believe the superintendent or you don't.' That view is a disservice to all voters because education in Cohasset is not so black and white," she said. "Also, after recent experiences with former top administrative employees, it is wise to exercise oversight in addition to prudence and caution."

Jenkins also said in talking with many override proponents, she was disappointed to hear they equate higher taxes for municipal spending with high home values and excellence in education.

"It is an unfortunate myth that increasing amounts of municipal spending will protect a homeowner's 'investment' in his home and also provide a top school system," Jenkins said. "Our recent poor test scores and lack of electives underscore that even with paying the highest real estate taxes in the region, it has not guaranteed results."

Jenkins said she could not support the override. "I consistently said that as a rational person there were too many numbers not disclosed in the budget to be able to support the override and the superintendent never answered all my questions," she said.

Our Town, Cohasset's own Cable-TV talk show, presented election results live on Cable Channel 10 Saturday night. The five candidates in contested races and handfuls of their supporters packed the selectmen's office nervously waiting for the results. Most thought the election would be too close to call. Moderator Dan Evans read the results to audible gasps and cheers and swore in those candidates present.

Incumbent Water Commissioner John McNabb ran uncontested for a third term and was the top vote-getter of the day with 1,790 votes. For complete results, see page 29.

Fire Department had a busy March

A summary of Fire Department responses during the month of March is as follows: five building fires; nine brush fires; two motor vehicle crashes; 69 medical emergencies; 29 inspections; 143 investigations; eight assistance calls; and 24 miscellaneous responses. Fifty-three emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 50 medical emergencies and three fire calls, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

The Fire Department ambulance transported 43 patients to South Shore Hospital, and one patient to Quincy Medical Center. Mutual aid ambulances transported nine patients from Cohasset to South Shore Hospital. One motor vehicle crash in March required transport to South Shore Hospital, Lincoln said.

Fifty-three emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 50 medical emergencies and three fire calls.

Fire alarm system activation responses totaled 13 during March. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for eight responses, and alarm malfunction was the cause of five responses. The five responses classed as building fires were caused by: one electrical outlet arcing; one food on the stove; one heat gun being used to remove paint; one natural gas fireplace malfunction; and one oil burner malfunction.

Training with the Fire Department's new Ice Rescue Platform continued during March. The rescue platform was purchased in 2005 for $2,995 with funds provided by a Commonwealth of Massachusetts Fire Equipment grant.

The carbon monoxide detector legislation known as "Nicole's Law became effective on March 31. The Cohasset Fire Department has completed eight inspections of dwellings requiring carbon monoxide detectors since the law took effect, Lincoln said.

have any other choice" than to enforce what has been suggested as an appropriate course of action, said Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer. "It would be very hard for us to go against the recommendations." The Deans, who have the right to appeal the order within 10 days to the district court, said that is their intention.

Griffin conducted the first dog hearing Feb. 16. Residents Claire Barnum, Mary Hartshorne, Donald Staszko, and Kearin Lewis, who had all been either threatened or attacked by the dogs, provided written and/or verbal testimony. Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy and the Deans provided testimony as well. From that meeting, Griffin drafted a list of recommendations for the board to consider. The board took up the matter at its Feb. 28 meeting, but did not formally issue a recommendation to allow time for the behavioral analysis to be conducted and a report submitted.

Marder evaluated all nine dogs at the Dean home on March 21. John and Mia Dean, as well as Marder's two assistants, were present for all nine evaluations, while Animal Control Officer Murphy was present for some. Marder evaluated the dogs for friendly and fearful behavior, as well as aggression and trainability.

In her evaluation, Marder recommends sisters Bebe and Pippa, 2-year-old females, Wally, a 1-year-old male, and Tye, an 8 month male, be removed from the Dean property.

Wally bit Barnum at Cohasset Greenery, owned by Mia and John Dean's daughter Alida. In Marder's report, she said when Wally was taken outside during the evaluation, he ran toward her and circled, which led her to put Mia Dean in front of her for protection.

"I'm sorry, but I don't see we have any other choice."

— Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer

Bebe has been accused of biting Hartshorne when a pack of roughly six of the dogs surrounded her and knocked her to the ground, causing her to break her wrist. Pippa and Tye have not been accused of biting.

The Dean family will be allowed to keep the parents of all the dogs, Doone, a 7-year-old male, and Tag, a 4-year-old female, as well as Nox, a 2-1/2-year-old female, Buster, a 1-year-old male, and Ness, a 14-month old female. Tag bit resident Donald Staszko last August, but the incident has been chalked up to her being a mother dog about to whelp a litter of puppies, feeling threatened by a stranger.

'Bizarre' evaluation

But the Deans say the evaluation process was both unscientific and bizarre, and the report on the evaluation is full of factual errors. Mia Dean said she had never seen anything done like the tests which were done on her dogs, and the process was "absolutely weird." She said the dogs did not understand what was going on as Marder's test included her acting friendly, then threatening, and underneath it all, Marder was a stranger whom the dogs had never met before.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said however bizarre the evaluation might have seemed, Marder does make distinctions in her evaluation that some of the dogs are trainable and some are not, and those distinctions are based on the tests she did.

Mia Dean explained one of the dogs which was deemed unable to be trained has "Never done anything to anyone" and it is inaccurate to say he cannot be trained. "That couldn't be farther from the truth," she said, as he does respond well to many commands. She said if the selectmen issue the order, "We're going to have to appeal and get a behavioral expert with border collie experience. I don't think she (Marder) understands this breed at all."

Selectman Fred Koed reminded the Deans they were asked whether they would allow their dogs to be evaluated and whether they would accept the results, and they said they would. "This does seem to be a scientific process," said Koed.

"It was not," replied Mia Dean.

Animal Control Officer Murphy who witnessed some of the testing, said in his opinion, the evaluation conducted by Marder was appropriate. "I have known her for 20-plus years. This is the standard. This is the norm. I have to agree with what she has said 100 percent," Murphy said.

Before issuing the order, Spofford revisited an item on the draft order which stated no additional litters would be bred on the property at any time in the future. "My understanding is at the time of the last hearing, there were five additional puppies which were not discussed," he said. "I did not have that information and quite frankly, I felt I was misled."

Spofford said he had extended himself to ask the Deans about their future plans for dog breeding and whether they would have any more puppies. The board even agreed to allow one more litter, rather than none, which had been the recommendation from Griffin, "Not realizing they already had the one more," said Spofford.

Koed concurred and said the Deans had several opportunities to let the board know about the puppies. "I'm a little disappointed about that myself," he said.

Mia Dean explained they had thought they were only talking about the dogs in question at the hearing, not the puppies.

But Spofford and Koed said the Deans were specifically asked about whether they intended to allow their dog to have another litter of puppies. When they said they would likely either not have any more puppies or potentially one more litter, "It implies to me none currently exist," said Koed.

The board voted unanimously to impose the order, but the Deans have 10 days in which to appeal that decision to the district court, and they said they would. Without appeal, within 30 days, Bebe, Tye, Pippa, and Wally shall be transferred to a border collie rescue organization. If a transfer of one or more of the dogs cannot be arranged, the remaining dog or dogs will be humanely put to sleep at the owner's expense within 30 days of the issuance of the order.

Also within 30 days, Nox, Buster, Doone, Ness, and Tag must be neutered at their owners' expense. In addition, within 45 days, if the Deans decide to keep the dogs, they must build an enclosure which allows sufficient room for exercise but prevents access to strangers. The Deans must also apply for a kennel license. If the Deans decide not to keep some or all of the dogs, they must be transferred to a very experienced border collie owner.

In the future, the Deans will be restricted to owning no more than five dogs at a time, with the exception of the last litter of puppies until they are 6 months old. No additional dogs will be bred at any time in the future.

South Shore Music Circus raises tent on 55th season

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

In a sure sign that summer is just around the corner, the South Shore Music Circus will open its Cohasset box office at noon on Saturday. For its 55th season, the venerable venue has booked a roster of new and old favorites beginning with Tony Bennett on June 9.

"We're very proud that this season marks the 55th anniversary of the Music Circus," said Vincent G. Luongo, general manager of the Music Circus. "It has always been our goal to present world-class entertainment in an intimate, relaxed setting that appeals to patrons and performers alike."

The still touring, still recording rock band Styx was originally formed in Chicago in 1961 as The Tradewinds so it's hard to believe that there would be many firsts left for the group with hits like "Renegade," "Babe" and "Mr. Roboto." When the first musical act ever to have four consecutive triple-platinum albums rolls into Cohasset on August 12, however, it will mark the group's Music Circus debut.

With pop-rockers Hootie and the Blowfish, the new double bill of Southern rock pioneer Dickey Betts and Kenny Wayne Shepherd, eclectic Irish group The Saw Doctors, and perennial favorites The Beach Boys also headed to Cohasset, rock is definitely on the menu this summer at the Music Circus. Country fans have much to anticipate, too, including the returns of both LeAnn Rimes and Trisha Yearwood.

Laughs will be likely under the tent when comedians Brian Regan and Kathy Griffin make their headliner debuts during a season that also includes the returns of both Lewis Black and the legendary George Carlin.

Longtime Music Circus devotees will be heartened to know that the recently knighted Tom Jones will be back after an absence of several years. The 66-year-old Welshman has managed to remain current thanks to collaborations with contemporary artists, but Sir Tom probably still keeps "It's Not Unusual" and "She's a Lady" on his song list. Johnny Mathis will once again take his familiar spot center stage, accompanied this time around by a full orchestra, and chances are tickets for Mr. Mathis will go fast as they have for his many prior Cohasset visits.

"We appreciate the loyalty of our patrons and performers, who return year after year, and look forward to attracting new customers and entertainers looking for a theater experience that delivers a personal connection not possible in larger theaters," said Luongo.

For tickets and information about the 2006 season at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, stop by the box office beginning April 15, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccirus.org.

Movie review

Christine (Catherine Keener) feels helpless as Olivia (Jennifer Aniston) takes charge of an uncomfortable retail moment.

Adult 'Friends'

Friends With Money (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

From "Friends" to "Friends With Money" may not sound like much progress. But playing a desperate housecleaner in Nicole Holofcener's smart new comedy, Jennifer Aniston continues to build a credible body of screen work.

Meet Olivia (Aniston), a frowning, pot-smoking stalker who gave up teaching because her rich students mocked her car.

Now she's a singleton whose closest friends are three married couples poised at youth's end who do not entirely like their lives, spiritually, sexually or professionally.

Set in Southern California on the fringes of the film industry and featuring women her age, "Friends With Money" is a semi-autobiographical effort from writer-director Holofcener, whose credits include the 2000 film "Lovely & Amazing" and the television series "Gilmore Girls" and "Sex and the City."

Women, especially women with creative minds and perhaps even creative occupations, are a specialty of this house. Just add the vocal stylings of Rickie Lee Jones, and off you go.

David (Jason Isaacs) and Christine (Holofcener regular Catherine Keener) are bickering writing partners building a view-obstructing addition to their mid-century modern home. They try their dialogue out on one another as they sit at abutting desks, typing into matching iBooks. But it's hard to tell if the hatred, bile and accusations are real or fictional.

Clothing designer Jane (Frances McDormand) and investment adviser Aaron (Simon McBurney) appear to have the perfect marriage. But their friends believe pixie-ish Aaron, proud owner of a Yohji Yamamoto jacket, is gay, and Jane has given up washing her hair and snipes at rude strangers.

Wouldn't you know it, the happiest couple of the lot is also the richest. Franny (Joan Cusack), who has inherited a fortune, and Matt (Greg Germann) still like to make love. Their lives are a swirl of fund-raising events to which they invite their less well-off friends and pay for their $1,000 seats.

Olivia does not have any sympathy for these people. When she isn't raiding department store cosmetics counters for free samples, Olivia's day involves vacuuming, pulling hair out of drains and brushing other people's toilet bowls. She may borrow an item here and there and take unscheduled breaks, but she apparently is a good worker.

When her friends set her up with a reptilian personal trainer (Scott Caan), she stays open-minded. She even puts on the French maid uniform he buys her for Christmas. Is Olivia's true Prince Charming a pudgy, sweet-natured slacker (Bob Stephenson) who haggles with her over her cleaning fee?

"Friends With Money" is a minor work with a major cast in which Aniston seems notably at home. Holofcener's ability to tell funny stories about unhappy people gives the film further distinction and sets it a notch above TV sitcom fare.

If this is "Friends," it's "Friends" with an edge.

Rated R. "Friends With Money" contains profanity and sexual situations.

A new take on 'Swan Lake'

Bourne's production adds depth to Tchaikovsky classic

Matthew Bourne

Matthew Bourne set the theater world not only on its toes, but en pointe with his bold reinvention of Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake," when he replaced the traditional female corps de ballet swans in tutus with a company of bare-chested, feathery-legged, smudge-faced men in order to show the aggressive, more sinister side of the creatures most commonly admired for their grace and elegance. Since its London premiere in 1995, Bourne's "Swan Lake" — opening for a limited run next week at Boston's Colonial Theatre —has been praised for its blending of classical dance with humor, spectacle and comedy to introduce the ballet to a wider audience than it had probably ever reached before.

"Matthew is just extraordinary," explained dancer Neil Penlington by telephone last week from San Francisco. "He is all about telling a story. Purists may want to stick with a classic production of 'Swan Lake,' but people who come to see this production with an open mind will immediately know that they are in the presence of something completely different. It is more accessible than anything else in classical dance. This show is a mix of everything. It opens people's eyes. Dance fans, and even people who've never been to a ballet before, love it."

Originally written by Tchaikovsky in the late 19th century, "Swan Lake" was staged at Moscow's Bolshoi Theatre in 1877, but it wasn't until 18 years later — and after the death of its composer — that it was finally staged in St. Petersburg and became a universal classic. Bourne's witty and sexy revisiting of the tale is now the longest-running ballet in London's West End. While re-staging the show for today's audience, Bourne made sure to retain two essential elements that have made "Swan Lake" such a lasting favorite — Tchaikovsky's great score and the story of our constant yearning for an unattainable ideal. In 1999, Bourne earned Tony Awards as Best Choreographer and Best Director for the Broadway producton of "Swan Lake," now on a new North American tour. Penlington, who dances the role of the Prince in the current production, has done several of Bourne's other shows including "Highland Fling," "Spitfire," "Cinderella," and "The Car Man."

"When I first saw Matthew's work 10 or 11 years ago, I was immediately drawn to his approach. Since then, I've done just about all of Matthew's shows and I'm especially delighted to be in this one. 'Swan Lake' is one big story and it's up to the Prince to tell it from start to finish. The Prince is a dreamer who has been fascinated by swans since a young age. As a boy, he held a toy swan and was comforted by it but he also had nightmares about the wild, unpredictable nature of a large, powerful swan. He starts out happy, then things go from bad to worse for him and tragedy takes over his life. I go through so much as the Prince that sometimes after I dance him I feel like I need to see my therapist," says the Welsh-born Penlington who now calls London home. "The Prince is truly an amazing role for a man. I'm just glad I waited until now, when I'm 34, to play him. As a classical dancer, you never quite imagine you'll play a role with such depth"

Matthew Bourne's "Swan Lake" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, April 20-23. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadway-acrossamerica.com.

Holiday on Windstar cruise shows joys of Italy and more

By FRAN GOLDEN

PALERMO, Sicily -- Herald crime reporter Michele McPhee laid on the steps of the Teatro Massimo crying, "Papa, Papa," just like Don Corleone's daughter did when she was shot in "The Godfather 3," which filmed some scenes here.

It was clear we were not on an ordinary tour of Italy. In fact, we had decided to explore the Italian coast and islands by sea with Windstar Cruises precisely for that reason. Or as the cruise line's official motto goes, "180 degrees from the ordinary."

We knew we were in for something different when we first spotted our ship, the Wind Surf, in Civitavecchia, near Rome. The ship's not your giant cruise ship but rather a 308-passenger, 614-foot sailing vessel -- this one thoroughly modern with computerized sails, nice cabins, open decks for sunning, fine dining, a spa and other upscale amenities. Friendly, well-traveled passengers and an unstuffy onboard atmosphere add to the yachtlike flavor.

Creative itineraries are part of the mix, too. Our weeklong Mediterranean sailing included several port calls in Italy, a day in Tunisia and an overnight (and disembarkation) in Malta.

There were many highlights, but the most dramatic was Stromboli, off Sicily.

Imagine standing on a deck of a sailing yacht, staring at a clear sky with twinkling stars and every 10 minutes or so, fiery orange explosions from the world's most active volcano on a nearby island. On the Wind Surf, we were able to watch this natural show for nearly an hour.

Eye-opening moments occurred on shore as well.

Prosperity was on full display on the Italian resort island of Capri, where designer shops and luxury hotels and restaurants rule -- and the rich and famous have been known to hang out.

While Michele headed off on a tour to see the famous Blue Grotto, later declaring it a rip-off (she only got about two minutes inside the cave), I had a nice time looking at the big yachts in the harbor (but spotted no celebs).

Later, taking the funicular from the sea up to Capri Town, we decided to get off the tourist track (and away from the designer shops) with an energetic two-hour hike to Arco Naturale, a giant rock arch in the sea. We agreed that the views -- as far as Naples in the distance -- were well worth the trek.

Off the Gulf of Naples, the Wind Surf anchored near Sorrento, a pretty cliffside city that boasts beautiful Victorian hotels and lots of lemon trees and maybe dangerous mermaids (the city was known in Greek mythology as the City of Sirens).

Our tourist goal was Pompeii, the city destroyed nearly 2,000 years ago by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius. We booked a shore excursion (the bus ride is about 40 minutes) to walk down the same streets as the ancient Romans. With a little imagination, you can visualize life as it was in ancient times, when more than 15,000 people resided in the commercial port. Think toga, toga (Pompeii once had gladiators and something like 22 houses of ill repute).

We knew we were in for something different when we first spotted our ship, the Wind Surf, in Civitavecchia, near Rome.

Back in Sorrento, we had excellent anchovy and olive pizza at the outdoor Bar de Carmine (Piazza Tasso). Despite the excellent cuisine on the ship, this was one slice of Italy we did not want to miss.

In Palermo we found a city of contrasts; a place that's ugly and pretty, thick with smog but surrounded by mountains and right on the blue/gray Med. On one block there are impressive neoclassical buildings and on the next, trash-strewn slums. And there are tales of how the Mob rules.

The people we encountered, however, were hardly Mafiosos but very friendly ceramics shopkeepers. And male models, whom we oggled while dining on Sicilian cuisine at an ultra-mod restaurant called Sapori Peduti.

Our visit to Tunis, capital of the North African nation of Tunisia, was enlightening.

Having some trepidation about traveling in an Arab country alone, Michele and I booked an all-day shore excursion.

What we found was an interesting mix of Arab and European cultures -- most people on city streets were in Western garb, for instance, including young women in tight jeans and tops. But we also spotted men in red skull caps and a woman with her head covered walking a camel.

At the souq we really felt we weren't in Kansas anymore. The historic market was a cobweb of shops in a giant covered building where haggling is aggressive and so are some of the vendors, mostly men, who are not above grabbing your arm to show you their wares. Everything is negotiable here, and I fought hard to get a woven berber rug for $160 (knocked down from $450), including walking out of the shop, twice.

Americans helped liberate Tunisia during World War II, and our visit included a stop at a cemetery where haunting white markers serve as reminders of those who died in the North African campaign. It's located outside Tunis near ancient Carthage, a city conquered and destroyed by the Romans.

Nearby, we stopped at the pretty hilltop village of Sidi Bou Said, known as the city of saints and poets for its inspiring Mediterranean views and white Moorish-style buildings. The villas here, with their terraces fronting the sea, made it hard to remember we were in a Third World country.

Valletta is the capital of Malta, the little island nation located in the Mediterranean between Sicily and North Africa. There's a history here of being conquered, a lot, hence the ambience is little British, a little Spanish, a little Arabic. The Knights of the Order of St. John were among those who left their mark (including fortifications on the harbor).

I went off to explore the city on foot, and though I did not find the Maltese Falcon (it's fictional), I did get to visit St. John's Co-Cathedral, lavishly baroque in style and among the prettiest churches I've seen anywhere (and I've seen a lot of churches).

Michele, meanwhile, got an idea of the island's arid landscape and pretty but littered beaches on a 4x4 tour.

Of all the places we visited, the one that stole a piece of my heart was the tiny Italian island of Lipari.

While Michele booked a beach excursion to Vulcano, known for its mud baths, hot springs and black sand beach (an outing she declared fantastic), I headed off on a public bus to explore the 14-square-mile volcanic island. I sat next to a little old lady carrying grocery bags as the bus wound its way uphill on narrow streets and past sheer cliffs.

We had a conversation, partly in sign language, about island life and what she was having for lunch that day. And we both gawked at a group of German hikers on the bus, all loaded down with backpacks and hiking poles.

I got off the bus with a friendly couple from the Wind Surf, and we walked down from high on a mountain back to the sea, passing some country folk along the way.

At one town I put my feet in the cool (but not cold) sea before my companions and I enjoyed a delicious lunch of stuffed calamari and eggplant capanota at an outdoor cafe.

We declared our Windstar Cruise the perfect way to experience Italy by sea.

Cook saga ends sadly

Fate of site now in heirs' hands

By Samantha Brown

"This attempt to build on the property is over."
— Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer

After nearly three years of trying to build senior housing on the Cook Estate, the town has decided to call it quits.

Weathervane Construction Corp., the fourth and final developer to take a crack at the project, pulled out of the deal last Friday, April 14. The Board of Selectmen made the decision during an emergency meeting Tuesday to no longer pursue building housing on the Sohier Street parcel.

"This attempt to build on the property is over," said Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer.

The town was up against a deadline of March 31 to sign a land disposition agreement with the developers. An LDA is a document similar to a purchase and sale agreement. However, Dormitzer said the developer had questions pertaining to wastewater that needed to be answered before the company would sign off on the project, which led the town to ask for one more two-week extension from the trustees of the estate, bringing the deadline up to April 14.

But April 14 came and went and the paperwork was still not signed. At 5 p.m. Friday, "For all practical purposes, the third RFP for Cook expired," said Dormitzer.

Opening lines of communication

School tools: Web site, forums, and op-ed pieces

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Over the course of the next five years, the Cohasset school department has set a goal of working toward improving communication within the department, and with the community. To that end, a Communication and Community Development Action Planning Committee was formed to take a look at how the schools can better involve the community in its everyday affairs.

Using the district's Strategic Plan — which sets goals the district would like to see met over the next five years — as a guide, the committee came together to find ways to open the lines of communication between the schools and the entire Cohasset community, including town government and local businesses. It gathered information by talking to members of the Cohasset school department and school departments in other towns, and conducted surveys of best practices to help guide Cohasset in the right direction.

Beverly Bielewicz presented the committee's findings to the School Committee at its April 6 meeting. School Committee members Rick Flynn and Jamie Williams were members of the communication committee. Bielewicz said the committee agreed, one of the most important communication initiatives that should take place moving forward, is bringing the school district Web site up to the point where the community visits it regularly, and uses it as "the go-to community tool" for the schools.

To help organize the school's site, she said the committee suggests there be one person in charge of posting information to the site, and people should know how to get in touch with that person to include any information they have regarding upcoming events or any news to share.

The committee suggested monitoring hits to the Web site as well to gauge its success. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said the hits on the school department's Web site are already being monitored, and "I think you'd be surprised about the number of hits" it receives, she said. However, she said continuing to spread the word about the site and raising its popularity is a good idea.

Bielewicz said once the town

Candy Ford and her daughter Colby Smalzel spent spring vacation on the set of a movie. Both have been cast in an independent film titled "Casting Doubt," for which filming began Tuesday.

Mother-daughter team ready for the big screen

Have roles in feature film

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Many middle-school students were busy on family vacations to destinations like Florida or the Bahamas during spring break this week. But for Colby Smalzel and her mother Candy Ford, vacation meant waking up at 4:30 a.m. to arrive at work by 7.

While it might not seem like much of a vacation, for these Cohasset residents, it was the opportunity of a lifetime that got them out of bed in the morning, as both have been cast in local independent filmmaker L. Steven Stanley's latest feature picture, "Casting Doubt."

Filming began Tuesday, and the mother-daughter duo could not wait to arrive on the set. The movie, a murder mystery set in the backdrop of a musical play, is being filmed in the Dedham Community Theater in Dedham Square. The film opens with the injured director of the play stumbling into the theater clutching his shoulder. He has just been stabbed by an unknown assailant wielding rusty antique garden sheers. A murder has just taken place, and someone in a gray hooded sweatshirt has committed the crime. While the director waits for an ambulance to arrive, the film flashes back to the past three months of rehearsals, giving clues about the identity of the attacker.

"I have no clue who did it and I don't know who dies," quipped Ford after her first day on the set. She said what she does know is that neither her character nor Colby's character is the murderer, and both make it through the film alive.

The part Ford plays is very true to her real life. Ford is the owner of the Candy Ford Group, a nationwide modeling and promotional staffing agency, and Stanley cast her as a casting director in the film. Due to their both working in

Teen Garage renovations

After eight years of operation, the Cohasset Teen Garage will be closed for renovations starting through late May.

The Teen Garage serves youngsters grades six and over and is located in the Town's old Highway Garage off Main Street.

During the late 1990's the Highway Department moved to its new facility and the Town gave the old Garage to the Youth Resources Committee for a Teen Center.

Selectmen change meeting schedule

The Board of Selectmen will meet on Monday nights from now on. Selectman Gary Vanderweil had suggested the change more than one month ago, and the board agreed it was only fair to wait until the new member of the board was voted in after the April 8 Town Election. Newly elected Selectman Ted Carr agreed to the change and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he will draft a new meeting schedule with April 24 as the next meeting date.

Former CYC accountant arrested in Hingham left

Bail hearing held yesterday

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The arrest was the result of a nearly five-month investigation launched in December after allegations surfaced about the Hingham Rotary Club theft.

The former treasurer of the Hingham-Hull Rotary Club was slated to be back in court yesterday (after the Mariner went to press) for a bail hearing relating to charges he stole $42,100 from the organization.

Hingham police arrested Davenport B. Crocker, Sr., 69, last Thursday at his office on Station Street; he was booked at the station and pleaded not guilty when he was arraigned Friday morning at Hingham District Court on the charge of larceny of more than $250. Detectives Robert Mansfield and David Galvin served Crocker, a Cohasset resident, with a warrant for his arrest at 5 p.m. Thursday (April 13). He was allowed to make a phone call to his attorney before being placed in handcuffs, Sgt. Michael Peraino said. The detectives brought Crocker to the station for booking.

The arrest was the result of a nearly five-month investigation launched in December after allegations surfaced about the Rotary club theft. At about the same time, the Cohasset Yacht Club sent out a letter to its membership explaining Crocker, the club's accountant and long-time member, had been stealing from the yacht club for at least seven years, allegedly taking about $427,000. The yacht club struck a "deal" with Crocker that would get the club's money back in exchange for not pursuing or initiating criminal proceedings. But Cohasset police said they would be working with the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office in investigating the alleged theft.

David Traub, spokesman for Norfolk County DA William Keating's Office, said the DA's Office review of the matter is continuing and there are no charges at this time.

Cohasset Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon said, the Cohasset Police Criminal Investigation Division is actively investigating the allegations concerning the Cohasset Yacht Club in conjunction with the Norfolk District Attorney's Office.

"We are aware of the status of the Hingham case and have been in communication with the Hingham Police Department," Lennon said. "Unfortunately, we can't make any other comments at this juncture in the interest of preserving the integrity of the investigation."

It's not clear if Crocker's alleged embezzlement of funds from the Cohasset Yacht Club could be used in a potential trial on the Rotary larceny charge. Hingham is in Plymouth County and Cohasset is in Norfolk County.

It has been alleged Crocker admitted to members of the board of the Hingham-Hull Rotary Club that he had taken the money and would pay it back. He allegedly wrote out checks to the Rotary club to cover the missing funds but then stopped payment on the checks, Peraino said. "That's when the Rotary Club came to the Hingham police," he said.

According to court papers, the current rotary treasurer, a CPA, has found that $42,100 was allegedly stolen.

According to papers on file at the court as of April 12, Crocker had taken no action to repay the organization. Police, who executed a search warrant at his office in December, are also still awaiting results from the computers confiscated from the office.

Despite the allegations, Crocker was apparently still operating his accounting services business, Davenport B. Crocker Inc. Accounting Services, in Hingham. His office voicemail sounds upbeat and friendly and finishes with "we will get back to you as soon as we are able. Have a nice day."

Neither Crocker nor his attorney could be reached for comment.

Peraino said the Plymouth County District Attorney's office was expected to ask the judge at today's hearing for $50,000 bail. Peraino said the bail is being requested because Crocker owns property in Florida and could be a flight risk. At the bail hearing a further court date would be set for a pre-trial conference, he said.

Court papers state the Rotary Club president went to Crocker's office on Dec. 15 to get a check for a donation and during that meeting Crocker admitted to stealing from both the Rotary and Cohasset Yacht Club. The yacht club discovered the embezzlement after several checks bounced. In the CYC letter to its members, the commodore said when confronted with incriminating facts, Crocker admitted to stealing $53,314 from the club but after a forensic review of the books, the number totaled $427,000. Crocker paid the CYC $200,000 and the rest of the money was secured through a second mortgage on Crocker's Florida condominium., according to the yacht club.

Cook costs town about $400,000

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cook Estate cost the town a lot of money for which it received nothing. When all is said and done, the town will have lost roughly $400,000, and has now taken a step backwards in terms of meeting its affordable housing quotient.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said all tolled, the town paid out $600,000, but $200,000 of that money was given to the Cook trustees as an initial deposit in November, 2003.

"That, we will get back," Griffin said of the $200,000 deposit. "The $400,000 is our out-of-pocket expense."

The town had planned to purchase the Cook property from the heirs of the estate for $4.5 million. The Weathervane Construction Corp. bid $4.9 million on the project, and the balance would have been $400,000, which would have covered the town's costs.

Costs associated with the project date back to 2003. At that point, the town was optimistic it could work with a private developer to build a project it wanted to see, which would provide affordable senior housing for the town's eldest residents. Cohasset is trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state and the Cook project would have helped the town meet its requirement.

The town went to work and began various forms of due diligence. Between engineering services, consulting services, legal services, appraisals and other miscellaneous costs, the town has spent $310,000 trying to push the project forward.

When wastewater problems surfaced for the site and deals began to fall through, the town needed more time. The town paid non-refundable extension deposits of $20,000 in September, October, and November of 2005, as well as a $31,500 non-refundable extension deposit in December 2005 to the Cook trustees. In total, the town paid $91,500 to the trustees which will not be returned.

The Weathervane Construction Corp. paid a $231,500 deposit to the town at the time it submitted its bid. The company will have the entire amount of the deposit returned since it did not sign the Land Disposition Agreement.

Town Meeting approved much of the funding used to aid the Cook Estate efforts. Town meeting authorized the $4.5 million bond for the town to purchase the property from the Cook heirs as well as $90,345 in appropriations and reserve fund transfers.

The project fell through for a number of reasons, but first and foremost, developers did not feel comfortable entering into an agreement to build a project, not knowing whether the wastewater could be handled on site. Weathervane had planned to purchase the property from the town for $4.9 million and build 45 Cape-style mixed-income condominiums for those 55 and older. The town would have purchased the property from the Cook heirs for $4.5 million, and the balance from the purchase would have gone to cover the town's costs. The project would also have brought the town one step closer to meeting the 10 percent affordable housing threshold set by the state.

"We had proposed doing an in-depth hydrogeologic study to be certain the site conditions could handle the amount of Title 5 flow (roughly 7,200 gallons per day) that our proposed project would generate," Weathervane president Jim Bristol said Wednesday. "The Land Disposition Agreement, unfortunately, required deposit monies that we were not willing to put at risk in addition to the engineering money and effort."

Bristol added everyone the company worked with in Cohasset was very supportive, but in the end, "We feel questions regarding the site being able to handle the proposed septic system were too great to overcome."

Dormitzer said when he called the Trustees of the estate to inform them of the latest turn of events, "They were very exasperated that the town continues to come up with obstacles, barriers and special requests at the last minute." Jane Bancroft Cook, the owner of the estate, passed away four years ago this July. Dormitzer said her trustees have been very patient in working with the town all this time. However, they have been charged with liquidating the property and that is what they must do.

Members of the Board of Selectmen said the developers also expressed concern abutters to the site, in particular, Donald Staszko, who owns Cohasset Plaza, would appeal the permits once granted, which could tie up the project in court for years. However, in a letter sent to the Board of Selectmen dated April 5, Staszko's attorney Charles Humphreys stated Staszko is genuinely in support of the project and that such a project is in the best long-term interest of the town.

"He, in no way, wishes to slow down or unnecessarily interfere with its successful and speedy completion," Humphreys stated in the letter. While Staszko was one of the bidders on the project during the second round of bids, Humphrey said Staszko is not interested in doing the project as presently envisioned.

Humphreys acknowledged Staszko was concerned with the potential adverse effects of a large scale septic field immediately up gradient of the septic fields proposed on his abutting property. "He is also concerned that drainage, both surface and subsurface, not properly engineered, could have materially adverse affects on the complex drainage plan he has for Cohasset Plaza," the letter stated.

However, Humphreys said Staszko's concerns are the same any abutter to a large project would have, and his concern should not serve as a deterrent to any developer. The company need not be concerned about appeals, "If the construction of the septic system and drainage systems are designed and permitted to meet all required engineering standards, and do not result in an adverse effect on the abutting Cohasset Plaza land."

With the RFP expired, the town is now left with no other alternative but to let the project die. Town Meeting approved sunsetting the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw April 1, which the project would have filed under, which means if another RFP was sent out for the project, it could not be built under the bylaw. The Cook project as outlined in the last RFP was the last project to be allowed under the bylaw.

Many, including the developers, were disappointed the project did not work out for the town. "We believe many folks in Cohasset were as excited as we were to build a Weathervane Community on such a beautiful piece of property as the Cook Estate," said Bristol.

In an interview Wednesday, Town Manager Bill Griffin said since he began working in Cohasset in January 2005, there has not been any other issue in town he has devoted as much time working on. "It felt like a wake last night," he said of Tuesday's emergency meeting.

The Cook Estate, located on Sohier Street, is a roughly 19-acre parcel of land, that was owned by the late Jane Bancroft Cook. The town has been working with the heirs of her estate since 2003 to build senior housing on the site. The project was put out to bid, then wastewater issues forced a reduction in scope of the project. A second Request for Proposals was sent out for the smaller project, and two subsequent developers both pulled out due to tight permitting deadlines. Weathervane Construction Corporation was the fourth developer to try to work with the town to develop the property. Now that the heirs of the estate are no longer working with the town, the fate of the property is in their hands.

Towns in crunch mode with declining state aid

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

State aid reductions have led to tough times in many Massachusetts towns. Since fiscal 2002, Cohasset has seen its net state annual revenue drop from $1,482,282 down to $910,613, and it is projected that figure will drop to $878,494 for fiscal 2007.

To help combat the reductions, Cohasset residents have passed overrides three times since calendar year 2001 and will try for a fourth at the special election May 6. The town will choose among raising the operating budget by $725,000, $1.495 million, or voting no on both options and sticking with the non-override budget.

The town added $300,000 to the fiscal 2002 operating budget, another $350,000 in fiscal 2004, and $400,000 in fiscal 2005. The town voted down a $400,000 override for fiscal 2006.

The net amount of aid received by a town is the amount of state aid minus assessments which must be paid back to the state. This fiscal year, the town received $1,811,140 in state aid, but was required to pay back $900,527 in assessments, which means the net state aid received was $910,613. While state aid had increased by almost $107,000, assessments increased by roughly $124,000.

In fiscal 2007, Cohasset is projected to receive $603,788 less in net state revenue than it did in fiscal 2002. "For a town this size, that's a lot of money," said Town Manager Bill Griffin. He said if state aid had not been cut the way it has, the town would likely not need to go for the $725,000 override to maintain services.

The state awards revenue to towns within 10 categories: Chapter 70 funding (school funds and state aid for public schools), school transportation, lottery, additional assistance, highway fund, veterans' exemptions, elderly exemptions, veterans' benefits, charter school reimbursement, and miscellaneous funding.

Chapter 70 funds make up the bulk of state funding awarded to the town. In fiscal 2002 Chapter 70 funds totaled $1,434,091, and remained at that level for fiscal 2003. In fiscal 2004, Chapter 70 funding was reduced by $286,818, which is where it stayed for fiscal 2005. In fiscal 2006, Chapter 70 funds were increased by $73,350, bringing the figure up to $1,220,623. It is anticipated Chapter 70 funds will increase by roughly $136,000 for fiscal 2007, which begins July 1.

In fiscal 2007, Cohasset is projected to receive $603,788 less in net state revenue than it did in fiscal 2002.

State school transportation aid has not been funded at all since fiscal 2003. In fiscal 2002, there was $45,379 allocated, and that number increased to $49,138 for fiscal 2003. Since then, there has been no state money allocated toward school transportation, and none projected for fiscal 2007. There has also been no highway fund money allocated since fiscal 2003, and nothing allocated for veterans' benefits as far back as fiscal 2002. Miscellaneous funding has not come through since fiscal 2002.

In contrast, state assessments continue to rise, due largely in part to the increase in retired teacher insurance. The town pays insurance for retired teachers, and they are not part of the town's insurance group, they are part of a state group called the Group Insurance Commission. "The cost has gone up substantially over the last three years," said Griffin, adding it is an assessment, and "There's not much we can do about it."

In fiscal 2002, the town paid $328,615 in teacher insurance, and it increased to $366,995 in fiscal 2003. The fiscal 2004 assessment was $378,527, which jumped up to $399,031 in fiscal 2005. This year, the town was assessed for $544,229, and it is expected the number will increase to $758,353 for fiscal 2007.

Griffin said a number of cities and towns have their teachers in a state insurance group, and a number of Town Managers have requested to meet with the GIC to discuss the rise in costs.

Other assessments are also on the rise as the Norfolk County tax assessment has risen by roughly $10,000 over the past five years. Other figures, including those for registry non-renewals, mosquito control, air pollution control and charter schools have stayed relatively steady over the past five fiscal years, while assessments for the Mass Bay Transit Authority have gone down.

State aid rundown for Cohasset

Fiscal year	Total State Revenue	Total State Assessment	Net State Revenue	Net Change in dollars	Net Change percent
2002	$2,163,146	$680,864	$1,482,282
2003	$2,125,715	$743,880	$1,381,835	- $100,447	-7 percent
2004	$1,708,993	$793,051	$915,942	- $465,893	-34 percent
2005	$1,704,310	$776,589	$927,721	+ $11,779	+1 percent
2006	$1,811,140	$900,527	$910,613	- $17,108	-2 percent

Committee looks to open lines of school communication

has its Web site up and running, the school and town should have their sites linked together. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he is working on getting the town's Web site started and said last week, he met with a Web site developer to request a proposal. The developer also built the sites for the towns of Scituate and Hingham, and although Griffin said he has not yet received the proposal for the site, he is hopeful it will be up in roughly two months.

But not everyone uses their computer every day, said Bielewicz, which means other communication tools must also be used on a regular basis. She said the schools should work with the superintendent to submit information to the Cohasset Mariner on a regular basis, including expanding the School Notes section and providing Op Ed pieces. She also said the schools would like to expand their use of local cable television to publicize school events, such as the Mr. Skipper Contest, the May Arts Night, and the Town Wide School Band Night.

The committee also suggested the school department provide information forums, potentially one night each quarter...

The committee also suggested the school department provide information forums, potentially one night each quarter, where parents and community members could gather to speak to members of the school department, receive updates, and have questions answered. School Committee member Alfred Slanetz suggested having something more informal, such as a coffee, which could help "depoliticize" the gatherings.

Bielewicz also said the committee was introduced to the idea of providing parents with an annual school report, and thought it would be a great idea for Cohasset. The town of Norwell has an annual report which lists all the MCAS scores for the district, the student-teacher ratios, information about the guidance department, and a budget message, which Cohasset's could be modeled after.

Bielewicz said the schools currently have a number of communication tools in place that are working very well. The middle-high school recently received letter tiles to allow the school department to essentially advertise the goings-on at the school on the sign outside the school. The department also uses the Connect-ED telephone message service, which sends a pre-recorded message to the home of every student with a message from the school. The tool has been used in emergency situations, as well as to provide reminders about everything from holiday concerts to MCAS testing. The formation of the middle-school newsletter, the "Middle-school Messenger" has also helped open the lines of communication.

The Communication and Community Development Action Planning Committee will reorganize and will be opening up to new members. Anyone interested in becoming a part of the committee should contact the office of the superintendent at (781) 383-6111.

Students honored at State House for their 'Letters About Literature'

"To have two students participate (from Cohasset) and win is wonderful news."
— Sharon Moody, children's librarian

The Massachusetts Center for the Book has announced the winners of the commonwealth's Letters About Literature 2006 program. Cohasset students Madeline Blackburn, grade four, and Foster Eymer, grade five, each received Honorable Mentions in Level I of the Massachusetts program.

Madeline and Foster participated in the program through the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, with the help of librarian Sharon Moody. State Sen. Robert Hedlund issued citations to Madeline and Foster in recognition of their achievements April 5.

"This is a great feat for a small town like ours," said Moody, adding almost 3,000 students from 100 Massachusetts towns participated. "To have two students participate (from Cohasset) and win is wonderful news."

The MCB held an award ceremony at the State House April 5 to honor 50 students chosen for recognition this year. A standing room only crowd of students, teachers, librarians and state legislators gathered to honor all of the award winners as exceptional Massachusetts student writers. The ceremony was part of the Massachusetts Library Association's Library Legislative Day.

Each year, MCB invites readers in grades four through 12 to write personal letters to authors, explaining how their work has changed or augmented the students' views of the world or of themselves. MCB presents the Letters About Literature program with sponsorship from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum, and in cooperation with the Center for the Book in the Library of Congress and Target stores, which are national sponsors of the program. Houghton Mifflin Co. and the Massachusetts Library Association also support the state program.

Moody said every year, she hands out entry forms to children and encourages them to make the effort to write a letter. She said she encouraged Foster to enter after he and his mother told her how much they enjoyed "The Boy Who Saved Baseball," by John Ritter. "I had noticed how often he took the book out and how often the family borrowed the audio version," said Moody.

Moody said she also discusses new books and the importance of reading and writing with Madeline's mother on a weekly basis. "Knowing how much her children read and the emphasis the family puts on education, I made sure to remind her of the contest and included several entry forms with her stack of books," said Moody. Madeline chose to write her letter to Lowis Lowry about her book, "Number the Stars."

Awards were presented by three of this year's judges, John Brereton, director, Calderwood Writing Initiative, lead sponsor of the program; Karen Casey, Houghton Mifflin Co.; and Katie Baxter, Massachusetts Library Association. Judges recognized achievements in each of the three age-level categories. Madeline and Foster were included in the Honorable Mentions Level I category.

Massachusetts ranked among the top three states this year in the number of students who participated in the national program, receiving nearly 3,000 letters about books that have made a difference in students' lives.

To read more about the program and view the letters written by this year's award winners, please visit the Web site of the Massachusetts Center for the Book at www.massbook.org.

Grade five student Foster Eymer was awarded an Honorable Mention in Level I of the state's Letters About Literature program at the State House April 5. Foster wrote to author John Ritter about his book, "The Boy Who Saved Baseball." Foster was encouraged to enter the contest by Paul Pratt Memorial Library children's librarian Sharon Moody.

Madeline Blackburn holds a citation issued to her for receiving Honorable Mention in Level I of the state's Letters About Literature program. The contest asks students to write a letter to their favorite author, explaining how the book has changed their life. Madeline is in grade four at Deer Hill, and wrote her letter to Lowis Lowry about her book, "Number the Stars."

'Ground Zero' authors at Buttonwood Books

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A,will welcome Charles Vitchers and Robert Gray on Monday, April 24, 7 p.m. where they will present a slide show and host a discussion about their book, "Nine Months at Ground Zero: The Story of the Brotherhood of Workers Who Took On A Job Like No Other" (Scribner Books, $25).

"Nine Months at Ground Zero" is a firsthand recollection of Sept 11, 2001, from some of the men who built and ultimately dismantled the buildings at Ground Zero. They briefly recount where they were when the planes struck the Twin Towers and then detail their response to this incident in American history. They talk about the overwhelming response by the men who know New York City from the inside out. They knew immediately that the equipment, expertise and manpower would need to come from the workers who built these massive structures. The call went out and they came – supervisors, foremen, ironworkers, carpenters, crane operators, welders, laborers – ordinary people responding to the greater need in a time of crisis.

The authors are donating their profits from the book to charity. Vitchers has worked in all aspects of the construction industry for more than 30 years. A native of Manhattan, Vitchers served as a general superintendent at Ground Zero. He is a general superintendent for Bovis Lend Lease and recently completed work on the new AOL Time Warner building. Gray has been a member of the International Union of Operating Engineers for more than 25 years. Raised in Yonkers, Gray served as the master mechanic at Ground Zero. He also worked on the AOL Time Warner building. He lives in Brownville, N.Y. and Vermont.

"Cohasset Woman Loses 14.9 lbs. of Body-fat In Record Time Without Dieting, Drugs or Surgery!"

Cohasset resident Patricia Sheerin reports record loss of body-fat without dieting (in fact she's eating more now), drugs or surgery. This writer was so intrigued by Patricia's story that a further investigation became necessary.

Cohasset residents are clamoring to know how she did it. Patricia reports the "secret" is the accountability, coaching and comprehensive system provided by her Fitness Together personal trainer. "At age 46, I have never felt better," says Sheerin. "The focused, personalized program designed specifically for me by my FT trainer has really been the answer to achieving my weight loss, fitness and appearance goals."

Patricia Sheerin
After
Amazing Transformation

Following this personalized program, Patricia reports not only losing 14.9 lbs of fat in 9 weeks (reducing her body-fat by 10.5%), but also increasing her strength without adding any bulky muscle – in fact she's leaner and tighter than ever before, dropping two full dress sizes. Her energy and stamina have doubled and she is getting more attention and "looks" than she has in years – dramatically boosting her self image and self confidence.

When pressed for specific details on Patricia's "secret," she revealed there is an official guide available with powerful tips and strategies for men and women interested in achieving the level of success she has - just in time for the summer and bathing suit season.

the entertainment industry, Stanley and Ford had met before. Stanley thought because of her profession, Ford would be the perfect casting director in the movie. In turn, Colby was also asked to audition for another part in the movie, and both were cast.

As of Tuesday, Ford said "I haven't done anything yet," as filming for her scenes had not yet begun. However, 13-year-old Colby was kept very busy, shooting three scenes that first day, followed by a round of still photographs.

"It was nerve-wracking when we shot the first scene, but everyone made me feel so comfortable," said Colby.

Colby said she was downtown hanging out with friends when she got the call from her mother on her cell phone, telling her she had an audition for a movie. "I was wicked happy," she said. "I've always wanted to be an actress. I'm pretty serious about it."

Colby has been taking acting lessons and is a model with her mother's agency, and has landed herself a good speaking role in Stanley's movie as one of the actors in the play within the movie. Colby plays the part of Lauren, who is the little sister of another character in the movie.

Ford said one of the most exciting things about being in the movie is that when Stanley is finished with "Casting Doubt," he has plans to shoot one more film, which will be his third, and package all three to be presented at the Cannes Film Festival in 2008. "He's quite accomplished," Ford said of Stanley. His first film was titled "Secrets from Somewhere," and was named one of the top 100 films at the 2005 New York International Film/Video Festival. He hopes to begin filming his third movie, "Thunderstruck," by November.

"It was nerve-wracking when we shot the first scene, but everyone made me feel so comfortable."
— Colby Smalzel, 13

Ford said being in the film with her daughter and having it submitted to the festival will bring her full-circle on a personal level. Her father Wendell Ford, a dentist by profession, was very passionate about cinematography and in the early 1960s, submitted a movie to the Cannes Film Festival and won a bronze award. While she said she is not sure whether she and Colby will be traveling to attend the Festival, just having their images there on the screen will be something she knows would have made her father proud.

Independent filmmaker L. Steven Stanley cast Cohasset resident Candy Ford and her daughter Colby Smalzel (not shown) in his latest picture, "Casting Doubt." The movie is being filmed in Dedham, and will be submitted as part of a three-movie package to the Cannes Film Festival in 2008.

Our World, Greek Church team up for tasty Taverna

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As a young boy growing up in Greece, Harry Athas remembers his mother making rice pudding on the stove for breakfast. Full of eggs and milk, fresh from the family's chickens and cows, it served as the perfect meal to sustain him while making the one-hour walk from his home to school.

Traveling to Greece today, it is not uncommon to see a fresh-caught octopus hanging in the sun to dry, and the same meals being made to feed the families of today that have been used to feed families generation after generation.

On Saturday, April 29 from noon until 9 p.m., members of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, in conjunction with the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, will bring a part of their heritage to the South Shore through "A Taste of Greece." The festival, which is known as a Greek Taverna, or small outdoor café, will allow Greeks and non-Greeks alike to experience real Greek food, Greek dancing, and the closest Greek cultural experience a person can have without leaving the country.

Athas explained while the Taverna will be held outside, it is not like the cook-outs held by Americans. "We try to serve the best we have here from Greece," he said, which includes shrimp and filet souvlaki (kabobs), lamb, and dolmathes (stuffed grape leaves). He said every dish will be served just as it would be if ordered in a restaurant in Athens.

In addition to food, there will also be entertainment for the whole family. Athas' band, Asteria, will play live Greek music, and there will be Greek dancers from the Odyssey Dance Troupe, based in Cranston, R. I. Marlena Alex, one of the coordinators of the Taverna, explained there are roughly five dances most Greeks know, but every island and all the different cities and towns of Greece have traditional dances which are specific to their region as well. She said it will be exciting to see the kinds of dances the troupe brings to Cohasset.

For the children, there will be costumes for dress-up and Greek artifacts to examine, and Michele Bolduc, director of the Our World Children's Museum, said there will be movies showing in the Museum theater which relate to Greece as well — Hercules will be one of the movies shown.

Joe Pagliuca, also known as "Big Joe" the Storyteller will be on hand to entertain the children as well. He will tell the children stories incorporating Greek myths and fables.

There will also be a silent auction for a new, 2006 9-foot inflatable Zodiac with a new Johnson 6 horsepower engine. The boat was donated by 3A Marine and has a retail value of $3,300.

The church used to hold a big Taverna every year, but due to the improvements being made to the church with the construction of a new community center, the festival has either not been held, or held in a smaller venue. However, because this year's festival will be held outside under a tent behind the museum, space is not an issue. "We've had smaller ones the last few years. This year, it's going to be a really big deal," said Alex.

Athas said everyone is really excited about the festival and cannot wait to bring back the Taverna in a big way. "We're inviting everyone to have a good day and help us keep our traditions going," he said.

"A Taste of Greece" will be held behind the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum Saturday, April 29 from noon until 9 p.m. Greek food will be served, there will be live Greek music, and Greek dancers. Admission is free and senior citizens receive a 15 percent discount on all food.

Community vision

It was nearly three years ago that the then Board of Selectmen held a press conference to announce plans to develop housing for Cohasset senior citizens on the Cook Estate.

This week we learned, that despite everyone's best efforts, that dream would not become a reality.

While there will surely be a ton of "Monday morning quarterbacks" out there that can explain how things could or should have been handled differently – at this point that is "all water under the bridge" to coin another phrase.

Therefore, rather than affixing blame, it is time for Cohasset to move forward. Without the Cook estate project on the radar screen and its affordable housing component, it is even more crucial that the town stays informed and continues to work toward creating affordable housing here.

We think it is critical that the Cohasset Housing Partnership – a new committee that will work with consultant Judy Barrett of Community Opportunities Group Inc. – should get up and running as soon as possible.

To that end, citizens interested in serving on the housing partnership should send a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., or email him at: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org.

The need for affordable and moderately priced housing in Cohasset has not gone away.

Over the past three years , the Mariner has used considerable newsprint covering the various plans for the Cook Estate. In fact, the Cook Estate has even rivaled the early days of restoration plans for the Greenbush railroad in terms of total inches of copy.

Soil conditions that are not friendly to a large number of units and lack of access to town sewer is what ultimately "did in" the Cook Estate senior housing plans.

However, on a positive note, the Cook Estate saga has created more awareness about the complexity of providing affordable housing when the rules for individuals to qualify for that housing are governed by the state. There continues to be confusion about how units "count" and how the town can best comply with Chapter 40B, the state affordable housing law.

Town Planner Liz Harrington, who will work with Barrett and the Cohasset Housing Partnership, said it best recently.

"Affordable housing needs to have a bright light shone on it," she said. "I am really looking forward to working with Judy (Barrett) and creating a community vision of what Cohasset needs for affordable housing."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Flynn is grateful for support

TO THE EDITOR:

To the voters of Cohasset:

Thank you very much for participating in the recent election. It was great to see so many of you take the time and care enough to exercise your vote.

To my supporters in particular, I thank you for all the time and energy you committed on my behalf. I especially thank my family for allowing me to commit three more years to the School Committee. I'm equally indebted to Debbie Shadd and John Brown for all of their organizational skills and for keeping me focused. Given the fact that this was my first real campaign, I particularly enjoyed discussing many of the issues that affect the entire town and the privilege of meeting so many people I didn't know.

My sincere hope is that the positive energy that was generated during the past few months stays with us and that we can work together as a town to make Cohasset a better place to live and work.

A great treasurer

TO THE EDITOR:

The election is over and all the bills are paid, thanks Alison Piasecki.

Roger Q. Hill

Ted Carr thanks Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

It is with great honor that I write to say thank you to the Cohasset community for electing me as the new member to the Board of Selectmen. I am overwhelmed that 50 percent of the voters placed their trust in me and look forward to proving that their trust is well placed as I serve all of Cohasset in my role as Selectman.

I especially want to thank the members of my Campaign Committee, a broad cross section of Cohasset. Starting with a dedicated few and growing each day, their support of my Candidacy throughout the entire race energized the campaign and led to its successful outcome.

I want to thank my wife Tanya for her dedication to the truth that allowed me to take policy positions based on the facts, and to my children for finding creative ways to use my campaign stickers and hold signs even when no one was around.

Finally, and certainly not least, I want to thank Roger Hill who ran with me for the same Selectman seat. I admire his dedication to the town and look forward to working with him on the issues facing Cohasset.

I will be maintaining my campaign web site as a means to inform people about important issues before the town: www.carrforcohasset.com. I also have set up a separate phone line for Selectman business: 781-383-0737 and a dedicated email address: Ted@carrforcohasset.com. I will be available after every Selectman meeting in Town Hall, and am happy to schedule time for anyone who would like to discuss town issues.

Whether the issue is senior housing, sustainable economic development, town growth, harbor pollution, or school funding, my concern is about keeping the Cohasset that we love and protecting those in our community who love Cohasset. I look forward to serving you as your Selectman.

Science & Math Night was a hit!

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent Science & Math Night at the Osgood School was a huge success thanks to our parents, sponsors, exhibitors and donors. We appreciate the opportunity to publicly acknowledge and thank them.

First, our family exhibitors deserve kudos. Their activities were fabulous, interactive, informative and most of all fun. We thank them for creating and encouraging an interest in science and math.

We were very fortunate this year to also have special outside exhibitors donate their time and resources to share science with our children. Thank you to the Northeastern University Marine Science Center, Our World Global Discovery Museum, South Shore Conservatory, South Shore Natural Science Center and Worcester Polytechnical Institute's FIRST Robot Team. The kids really enjoyed your presentations.

We would also like to specially thank Atlantic Brokerage Group, Cohasset Dental, Graham Waste Services, Grampy's, The Music Circus, Rockland Trust, Serono, Inc. USA, Shoe Market Kids, The Varney Boys and Twist Creative Group. These local businesses generously sponsored our t-shirt sales, thus funding future fun family science and math activities. We hope you will support their business efforts as well.

Our t-shirts were a sell-out! Thanks to the fabulous design work of Keith Conforti from Twist Creative Group. Keith worked tirelessly to create our robot logo, admission tickets and museum-quality map of exhibitors. Thank you Keith and thanks to Karyn Nee who also helped with our print communication efforts.

Our appreciation further extends to Atlantic Bagel, Cohasset House of Pizza, Shaw's and Victoria's. Thank you for donating food and beverages for our exhibitors. They needed the energy to serve over 600 visitors!

Finally, thanks to Boston Museum of Science, Buttonwood's, Our World and Staples for their raffle and other donations.

We are so proud of what we all accomplished on Science & Math Night. We can't wait to see you all next year.

Override ad numbers missing 'zeroes'

TO THE EDITOR:

I saw the nice ad in favor of Cohasset's override.

The numbers of the override were there, but they were missing a lot of 'zeroes.' It's not just $725, but $725,000.00, or seven hundred twenty-five thousand dollars. And of course, it's not only $1.459, but $1,459,000.00, or almost one and one half million dollars.

Hopefully the errors in the ad will be corrected and clarified.

I don't think the Cohasset Mariner intentionally runs ads that could be conceived as "a little misleading," and I know it's not their doing.

HEALTH NOTES

An update on status of Medicare D

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Medicare D Status: New report shows beneficiaries are saving money and choosing plans with enhanced coverage options.

Health and Human Services(HHS) Secretary Mike Leavitt recently issued a progress update on the new Medicare Prescription Drug Benefit. The report details substantial recent increases in enrollment, as well as new data showing that the vast majority of seniors are choosing alternatives to the standard government-designed plan.

According the HHS, "Enrollment has been accelerating because beneficiaries know that the savings are real and so are the benefits. We expect to see a substantial surge before May 15 — that's why we're encouraging seniors to sign up now so they do not pass up an average savings of $1,100 per person."

The Medicare Part D Prescription Drug plan is now three months old, and more than 27 million beneficiaries are receiving prescription drug coverage. Around 90 percent of Medicare beneficiaries have enrolled in a different plan from the standard plan designed by the government. Many are choosing plans that offer lower deductibles, or no deductibles; fixed co-payments for most drugs; and extra coverage in the coverage gap.

Beneficiaries are not the only ones seeing savings. The overall cost of the program to taxpayers for 2006 has dropped 20 percent since last July's estimate. States will save $700 million in 2006 compared to what they thought they would spend.

In addition, the report addresses several efforts

The Medicare Part D Prescription Drug plan is now three months old, and more than 27 million beneficiaries are receiving prescription drug coverage being made by the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) to improve and strengthen the program including:

· Enrollment reconciliation — A relatively small number of beneficiaries were carried on the books of more than one Medicare plan. CMS is working with plans to ensure each beneficiary is enrolled in the plan of their choice.

· Customer service — CMS has increased its monitoring of plan call centers to ensure beneficiaries are receiving timely and accurate information.

· Transition — Working with plans, pharmacists and physicians, CMS has provided guidance to ensure smooth transitions to drugs that are covered and, when necessary, to provide timely exceptions.

The "Secretary's Progress Report on the Medicare Prescription Drug Benefit" is available at:
www.hhs.gov/secretaryspage.html .

Several important things to remember:

∑ First Remember, Medicare D benefits, after May, if not requested, will not be available or at best become much more expensive. It's therefore necessary to take action soon. The deadline for signing up is this May, 2006, after which time various categories of benefits will become substantially more costly. Contact the folks at Cohasset Elder Affairs,(Call Caroll Barrett at 781 383-9112 at the Cohasset Community Center) for specifics.

∑ Second: is that you should keep a current list of the medications you take or plan to take; including dose size and the number taken daily. Check your list of medications against those provided in your Plan coverage. If the plan covers the medications you need and the benefits are equal to those in Medicare D you need do nothing more.

∑ Third: If you are already enrolled in a plan which provides medication, you should have the letter telling you in writing: either that the plan provides equal or better prescription drug coverage than Medicare D or it does not. Usually, at the beginning of the listing of benefits which your plan sends out yearly, there is a highlighted statement giving you this information. This is important in the event you may need to change plans later.

∑ Fourth: If you need medications not covered in your plan, you should look into changing plans. If you are a member in good standing of a current plan, you can change at any future time without penalty.

Remember, it's your money and health we're talking about. It's up to you to ensure you get what you pay for.

Family Feud makes triumphant debut

TO THE EDITOR:

The first of hopefully many years of Family Feud had a triumphant debut on Friday night, April 7. Nearly 100 audience members watched 11 'families' compete. "Appalachian Service Project" was the winner, besting Candy Ford's "Eye Candy" in the Championship Lightning Round. They, along with commercial sponsors Cohasset Collision Center, Second Congregational Church, Acapulco's, and Adrian Morris Salon, were among the largest contributors to the funds raised, which will go to creating a fun and safe environment for the Post-Prom Party. Thank you to the rest of the teams: Dickinson's, Martin's, Froio's, Summer Street, The ChickLets, Cohasset Baseball, Zach and His Peeps, Ofsthun's, Barrett's, and those behind the scenes – Kasey McCarthy, Sharon Arment, David Bigley, Mike Condon, Kathy Ofsthun, Andrea Martone, Helen Daley, Shirley Condon, and Kim Lee D'Angelis. Last but not least we'd like to thank our fabulous Family Feud staff, Tom Daley, our sound and light engineer, Katherine "Vanna White" Murphy, and Rich "Dawson" Ofsthun. Stay tuned to Channel 10 for the Replay.

Congratulations to the winner of our flat screen raffle, June Fahey of Cohasset. Thank you to all.

Override question

Coffee wars heating up

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Except for the kind the Irish make, I'm not much of a coffee drinker.

Oh, I'll have maybe two or three cups a week, light on the cream and sweetened by that stuff that comes out of the pink envelopes. The first few sips are enjoyable. Then enjoyment goes down as the coffee cools. I rarely finish a cup.

That's why I was surprised the other day when I learned that Starbucks, the Rolls Royce of coffeemakers, is engaged in a knock down, drag out battle with, of all people, Dunkin' Donuts and McDonalds for supremacy in the caffeine field.

"This is the Cola wars of the 2000s," says John Gilbert, vice president of Dunkin' Donuts. "It's been coming for a while."

And well it should. It's an $8.3 billion business right now. It expects to hit $19 billion by 2010.

There's even a North American Barista (coffee-maker) Championship, won in 2005 by Phuong Tran, who plies his trade in a Seattle coffee house called Zoka. It has a signature espresso called Paladino.

Of course, there's a website, CoffeeReview.com, edited by Kenneth Davis, who has written three books on the subject and reviews the brews, noting that the drink at Caffe Trieste in San Francisco is "a kind of a rough, robust 'take no prisoners' espresso."

The Stumptown Coffee Roasters in Portland, Ore., "serve coffee in French presses only (and) treat coffee like wine." The Intelligentsia Coffee Roasters of Chicago "hired a young guy just to go around the world picking out small lots of exceptional coffee."

Starbucks has been serving up gourmet coffee for some 30 years from locations that started in Seattle and have now reached 7,500 across the country.

This is what Dunkin' Donuts and McDonalds are up against as they lead their fast food forces into battle.

The heavy artillery for Dunkin' Donuts appears to be its Hot Turbo coffee, which is a normal cup of joe with a shot of espresso added. McDonalds is leaning heavily on the fact that it already has 13,700 locations in the United States.

"If it's faster and easier to get coffee at a McDonalds drive-through, then the Starbucks brand may not be as powerful," marketing analyst Bill Hulkower told USA Today.

And all this started, according to the legend, because a ninth century mullah (a Muslim holy man) in the Middle East used to fall asleep during his prayers and it bothered his conscience.

One day, he encountered a herdsman who told him that every time his goats ate the berries of a certain shrub, they would remain awake, running around and gamboling well into the night.

The herdsman showed the Mullah the coffee shrub and the holy man made himself a potent brew and he spent the whole night in a state of exhilaration that enabled him to finish his prayers and more.

Soon, the practice spread across the Middle East, where it reached such a level of importance that, as part of the marriage ceremony, a Turkish man had to promise that his wife would never want for coffee.

Or so the story goes.

Override talk on TV

Dancing in the streets!

TO THE EDITOR:

Re: James Watson letter dated April 14

"Benji" I think you need to get out of the village. You need to come out to the country for a breath of fresh air. Come to Beechwood.

I'm sorry they cut down that beautiful spruce in the village. I tried for 25 years to get a tree cut in Beechwood and was always told "you're on the list." I went to the front of the list when the tree fell down across Beechwood Street. Ben we have plenty of trees in Beechwood, come for a visit.

Ben when I need a Red Sox fix I walk over and see Leo at the Exxon station. Visit Leo, it will lift your spirits. On my way back from the Exxon station some kids walked by me mimicking the walk down the Yellow Brick Road by Dorothy, the Lion and the Tin Man in the "Wizard of Oz." Ben, come to Beechwood, they are dancing in the streets.

West Corner culvert funding secured

Public safety issue involves three towns

The West Corner Bridge and Culvert was built in 1850 and rebuilt in 1908. It is in extremely poor condition, receiving an engineering rating of 33 out of 100 in an inspection that took place over five years ago.

After town officials expressed concern over the fate of the West Corner Culvert replacement project funding, state Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley stepped in last week to secure a firm commitment by the Secretary of Transportation, John Cogliano. In a meeting in State House office, Secretary Cogliano committed the Transportation agency to oversee and provide necessary funding for the culvert project and related area road work.

The Massachusetts Highway Department recently indicated that it had no specific program for funding the replacement of locally-owned bridges apart from the Chapter 90 State Aid program. Hull, Hingham, and Cohasset have already utilized some of their Chapter 90 funds for the design of the culvert project, but even if the three towns combined their annual Chapter 90 funds, it would fall well short of the money needed to fund the West Corner Culvert project.

"This is a very unique and worthy project deserving of MassHighway support," Hedlund said. "The Secretary agrees and I appreciate his personal commitment to this project."

This project is unique because it involves three towns (Hull, Hingham and Cohasset) and addresses both transportation and environmental needs of the area. It is also a public safety issue.

Previously Hedlund and Bradley secured state bonding authorizations totaling $1 million to help fund the culvert project. However, MassHighway recently informed town officials that the project was ineligible for direct state funding. MassHighway typically does not fund culvert replacement projects, only bridge projects. The West Corner Culvert does not meet the definition of a bridge.

After last week's meeting, Secretary Cogliano agreed to broaden the scope of work at the West Corner Culvert by including Rte. 228 and Rockland Street improvements which helps MassHighway reach the criteria for state participation in the culvert project.

The West Corner Bridge and Culvert was built in 1850 and rebuilt in 1908. It is in extremely poor condition, receiving an engineering rating of 33 out of 100 in an inspection that took place over five years ago. In addition, MassHighway conducted an inspection on June 26, 2000 and rated the West Corner Culvert 4 (poor) on a scale of 0 (failed) to 9 (excellent).

Replacement of this bridge and culvert would have numerous benefits to all three communities. First and foremost it would ensure a safe bridge on a road (Route 228) that is one of only two major roads leading in and out of Hull. This project is also needed to protect and secure the vital utilities that pass through the culvert (water, sewer, natural gas, and telephone). In addition, reconstructing the culvert would allow for the replacement of tidal gates, resulting in a significant increase to the tidal flow in and out of Straits Pond. The need for such tidal flow improvement has been documented for more than 100 years.

The engineering report made the extent of the problem clear when it stated, "If these issues are not addresses, the degree of deterioration will accelerate resulting in the structural integrity of the bridge being compromised."

"That warning was written five years ago, which is why it is important that we do not have any more delays," Hedlund said. "Secretary Cogliano understood that and I am confident the project will continue to move forward."

The MassHighway Project Review Committee recently initiated this project. MassHighway's consultant is Louis Berger. The project is near the 25 percent highway and bridge design plan submission. Expectations are that the project will require about two years of pre-construction work. The design would likely include a new two barrel structures, new gates, resurfacing and other aesthetic improvements. Also included will be a traffic management plan designed for the heavy summer traffic typical near Nantasket Beach.

The initial estimated project cost is roughly $1.7 million. Currently, this project is expected to be advertised in the early 2008 cycle. Hedlund and Bradley secured $1M in the 2004 bond bill. Each town has already contributed to the $141,000 that has been spent on engineering and design work. The Conservation Law Foundation/NOAA Restoration Center prioritized this project and is financially support it. There is also a federal commitment of $700,000.

In addition to support from the state and towns, the project has overwhelming community support, including support from the Straits Pond Watershed Association, the Weir River Estuary Park Committee, and the Weir River Watershed Association. Dozens of letters have been received by various groups and individuals on the South Shore in support of the West Corner Culvert Project.

Bradley said, "I would like to thank the Secretary for his personal commitment to this important project which effects several communities in my district. I also applaud the local officials and community groups which have helped us keep this project moving thought the system. Lastly, I would like to thank Senator Hedlund for organizing the recent meeting and using his personal relationship with the Secretary to highlight the importance of this project to our district."

"The West Corner Culvert project is key to Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull," Bradley said. "I'm glad that we were able to find a solution that secures funding, provides for appropriate safety improvements to the culvert and roadways, and ensures the passage of vital utilities to the community. The West Corner Culvert project is good for the Communities of Hull, Cohasset, and Hingham."

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call from the week of April 10-14. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

RULES FOR HOUSE BUDGET DEBATE (H 4844)

House 127-22, approved a proposed set of rules to be followed when the House considers the fiscal 2007 state budget during the week of April 24. The package allows members to propose tax hikes or tax cuts only during the first round of consideration of the budget and prohibits them from proposing that revenues from tax hikes be earmarked for specific programs. Other provisions bar members from offering amendments dealing with casino gambling, slot machines and video gaming and require members to file all proposed amendments via computer rather than paper. Supporters said that that these rules would ensure that the budget is considered in an orderly and fiscally responsible manner. They argued that the House should not consider major proposals like gambling during budget debate and noted that any gambling measure should be filed as a separate bill and go through the regular committee process including public hearings. Some opponents said that the proposed rules are restrictive and anti-democratic and would further decrease the input and power of individual members. Others argued that it is unfair to prohibit members from offering gambling amendments when amendments on any other matter are allowed. Some said they objected to the omission of a prior rule that requires any member who proposes an increase in spending in excess of $100,000 to also offer a proposal decreasing spending by an equal or greater amount. (A "Yes" vote is for the rules. A "No" vote is against the rules).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

HEALTH CARE (H 4850)- Gov. Mitt Romney signed into law a bill making major changes in the state's health care insurance system. The measure requires all Massachusetts residents to have health insurance coverage by July 1, 2007 or face a financial penalty. It also offers low-cost insurance based on a sliding scale to low-income individuals and families. Romney vetoed several provisions including a mandate that all businesses that have more than 10 employees and do not provide health insurance to their workers pay $295 per-employee into a state fund that provides insurance for the uninsured.

SAME-SEX MARRIAGE (H 4617)- The Judiciary Committee held a hearing on an initiative petition asking voters whether they favor a proposed constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriage by defining marriage as between a man and a woman. The proposal does not include language nullifying any same-sex marriages that have already taken place. The Coalition for Marriage and Family last year gathered the required 65,825 signatures to bring the question before the Legislature. The measure now needs the votes of 50 legislators in both the 2006 and 2007-2008 legislative sessions in order to appear on the November 2008 ballot.

CHILD SEX ABUSE CLINICS/BAN ADULTS FROM PLAYGROUNDS (H 3867)- The Committee on Children and Families has recommended that a bill establishing eight regional medical diagnostic centers for child sexual abuse be shipped off to a study committee. The centers would provide specialized medical examinations of children who show signs of abuse and is aimed at serving children living in areas where there are no facilities that provide these services. Most measures that are shipped off to a study committee are never actually studied and are essentially defeated. The committee also recommended the same fate for a proposal banning adults from playgrounds unless they are accompanying a child. The measure would impose up to a $100 fine on violators.

BUY DRUGS IN CANADA (S 375)- The Committee on Elder Affairs has recommended sending to a study committee a bill directing Gov. Romney to request a federal waiver to allow Massachusetts to act as an agent in providing information to its residents regarding the safe purchase of prescription drugs at reduced prices from certified Canadian sources. The measure creates a state Office of Pharmaceutical Information to educate consumers and keep them informed about the advantages and any potential risks of purchasing Canadian drugs. Current federal law prohibits individuals from purchasing drugs from other nations.

KINDERGARTEN AGE (H 1040)- The Education Committee has recommended passage of legislation establishing a statewide minimum age at which children are eligible to be enrolled in kindergarten. The measure requires that a child be five years old prior to September 1 of the year in which he or she would begin kindergarten.

NOISE POLLUTION (H 3896)- The Environment Committee held a hearing on a proposal establishing a 13-member special commission to investigate and study the problem of noise pollution in the state.

FIREFIGHTERS (H 3969)- The Public Safety Committee has recommended passage of legislation prohibiting firefighting apparatus from responding to a fire alarm if there are fewer than two firefighters on board.

LONG-TERM CARE (H 2917)-The Health Care Financing Committee has recommended approval of a measure providing $150,000 for the Department of Elder Affairs to develop a program of public education designed to inform senior citizens about options for both public and private long-term care coverage. The program would be required to include information about Medicare, Medicaid, transferring of assets to qualify for state-subsidized long-term care, the state's power to collect the costs of medical and nursing home care from the estates of state-subsidized Medicaid recipients following their death and the options for purchasing private long-term care insurance.

ID FOR LIQUOR (H 2218)- The House gave initial approval to a bill allowing establishments that sell liquor to accept an out-of-state driver's license with a photo as a form of identification. The measure exempts from criminal liability and liquor license suspension any business or employee who "reasonably relies" on this type of ID. Current law provides this protection only if the employee or business accepts a Massachusetts driver's license, liquor purchase identification card, U.S. military ID card or passport issued by the United States government or by a nation recognized by the United States.

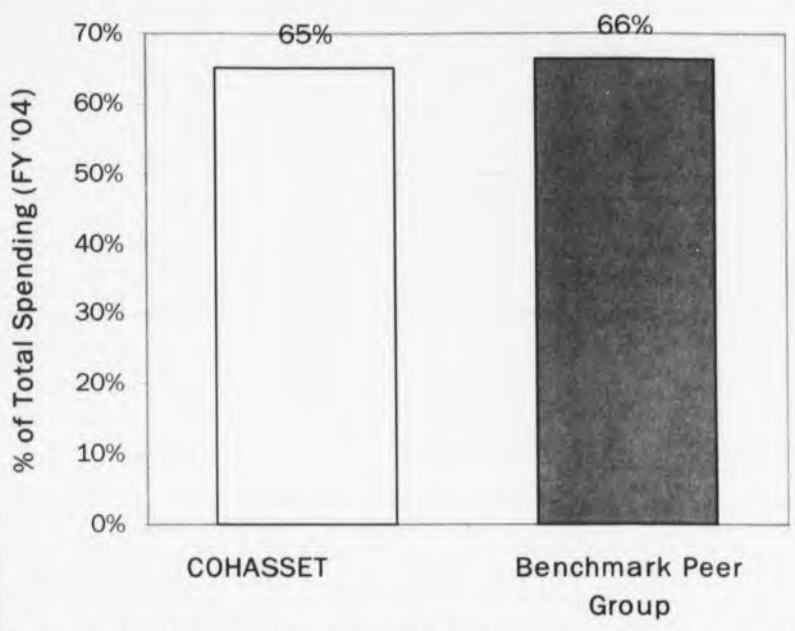
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts. Teacher compensation includes total teacher salaries and healthcare benefits.

This chart shows what portion of Cohasset's total education spending in 2004 went to pay for teacher salaries and healthcare benefits. This chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. This index provides a way to look at what percent of total education resources are being devoted to the classroom teachers.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spening, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Residents sought to form cable advisory committee

The town's contract with the Comcast cable company is almost up, which means discussion of contract renewal is currently on the table. Town Manager Bill Griffin said in many towns, there are active cable advisory committees which are charged with aiding in such matters. Cohasset used to have a cable advisory committee, but it has since become defunct. Griffin said it would be beneficial for the town to reinstate the committee, and said he will draft a charge to bring back to the Board of Selectmen for approval. Residents interested in serving on a cable advisory committee should contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or send a letter of interest to Town Hall at 41 Highland Avenue.

Historic override ballot vote can still be a little confusing

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In two short weeks, voters will make their way to the ballot box to cast their votes for or against the largest operating budget override in the town's history.

The polls will be open Saturday, May 6 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church. While elections are typically held at Town Hall, the special election has been moved next door to 43 Highland Ave. due to a scheduling conflict.

Many questions still linger around town regarding how a person should vote to accomplish their override goals. There is a $1.495 million override and a $725,000 override on the table, and voters have the right to vote on each figure.

Question 1a will ask voters if they would like to pass a $1.495 million operating budget override. Voters can either vote "yes" or "no." This figure will pass if it receives more "yes" votes than "no" votes. In other words, people who want the higher override to pass should vote "yes" and tell their friends to vote "yes," as the more votes in the affirmative, the better the chance it will pass. Those who do not want the figure to pass should vote "no" and tell their friends to vote "no", because if there are more "no" votes cast than "yes" votes, it will not pass.

Question 1b will ask voters if they would like to pass a $725,000 override. If this question receives more "yes" than "no" votes, one of two outcomes will occur, depending on how the votes are tallied for question 1a. With more "yes" votes than "no," the lower figure passes, but if the larger figure passes as well (if more people vote "yes" than "no" for the $1.495 million) the larger figure automatically wins. With override elections, a question must receive more "yes" votes than "no" votes to pass, but with more than one question, the largest figure to be approved always wins.

It's important to reiterate, if both overrides pass – only the larger override prevails. The two overrides are not added together into one super override. If the larger override loses, even by one vote, and the lower override wins a majority, the lower override prevails. If both overrides fail to pass by a majority, neither override prevails.

If the $725,000 figure does receive more "yes" votes than "no" votes and the larger figure fails, voting "yes" for the smaller figure will help ensure the town at least receives some override funding. It will not hurt the chances of the larger override if a resident votes "yes" for the smaller figure as well. Similarly, the lower override figure does not have to pass in order for the larger figure to pass. Each question stands on its own and "yes" and "no" votes are tallied for each, separately.

There are some in town who do not want to see an override pass in any amount. Those residents will want to cast "no" votes for both questions. It is important to remember it is the balance of "yes" to "no" votes for each question that determines whether or not an override will pass, not the number of votes cast for each figure. If a question receives more "yes" votes than "no" votes – even if that is by a single "yes' vote — it will pass.

How should I vote?

Two questions will be posed for voters to weigh in on at the Special Election May 6 and voters may answer "yes" or "no" on each.

Override elections are not the same as candidate elections where the person who gets the most votes wins. Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, with Pyramid Overrides, the higher override prevails if it wins by a simple majority. That means the higher number wins even if it wins by fewer votes than the lower override.

With overrides, leaving the question blank means a vote is not counted in favor or against the question.

Here are voting options:

- Voting Yes, Yes — casts voted for both for the $1.495 million figure and $725,000 figure. If both pass, the larger figure prevails even if the lower override gets more votes.
- Voting Yes, No — will cast a vote for the $1.495 million figure, and against the $725,000 figure. Again, if the larger number wins a majority, it prevails even if the lower override gets more votes.
- Voting No, Yes — will cast a vote against the $1.495 million figure, and for the $725,000 figure. If the larger override does not win a majority but the lower override does, the smaller override prevails.
- Voting No, No — will cast a vote against the $1.495 million figure, and against the $725,000 figure. Both overrides lose if they receive more "no" votes than "yes" votes.
- Leaving the question blank. Vote would not count for or against the override figure and could work against the outcome a voter would like to see.

School budget is on target

But utilities are being watched

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With roughly two months left in fiscal 2006, the school department is reporting it has spent a little more than 63 percent of its funds. While things are looking good, the area to watch will be utilities, as the schools are still waiting on some bills from the winter, and the water budgets have already spilled over their allocations.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro presented a budget summary to the School Committee April 6 which included figures to date as of March 31. The school department has a budget of $12,344,382 for this fiscal year, and at last count, had expended $7,669,588 and had encumbered $108,292.

"We're still looking at utilities," said School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro, adding when the bills from the winter arrive, the school department will have a better idea of where it stands in terms of heat. Currently, all three schools are at roughly the 50 to 60 percent expended mark, but that could change. The actual heating costs for fiscal 2005 were $354,704, and $389,400 was budgeted. To date, $213,406 has been spent.

Electricity costs are within budget, but are between 60 and 70 percent expended. The actual electricity costs for fiscal 2005 for all three schools combined was $261,052, and $250,000 was budgeted for this year. Currently, the schools have spent $165,784.

When it comes to water bills, the scenario is not looking as good as the other utilities. The actual cost for water in fiscal 2005 for the Osgood School was $6,884, but $6,000 was budgeted. As of March 31, the school has spent $6,998. Deer Hill's fiscal 2005 actual cost was $7,093, and $7,000 was budgeted. Deer Hill has spent $8,703. At the middle-high school, $11,621 was spent in fiscal 2005, and $14,000 was budgeted. However, that hasn't been enough as the school has already spent $15,120. All tolled, the schools are $3,821 over their water budget.

The schools' telephone usage is at a good level, with roughly 40 to 45 percent of its allocation spent. Of the $5,000 allocated for Osgood, $2,991 has been spent. At Deer Hill, $1,173 of the budgeted $3,000 has been spent. At the middle high school, $9,058 of the budgeted $20,000 has been spent.

DeGennaro said the schools are looking at joining a statewide contract where many communities purchase utilities together. That would help curb costs going forward, but would not affect this current fiscal year. He said the town is also looking to further consolidate its special education transportation program by partnering with other South Shore towns to provide the service.

New group says it has had 'Enough'

Forms to oppose $1.495 override

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"This is not just an uphill battle, this is an up-the-cliff uphill battle."
— Anson Whealler, Enough

A new group has formed in town that is opposed to the $1.495 million override.

"We think the middle class and elderly are being pushed out of town and cannot afford it," said Anson Whealler, 619 Jerusalem Road, who is the spokesman for the political action committee dubbed "Enough."

"My property tax bill is higher than my state and federal income taxes – and that's wrong," Whealler said, using his home as an example.

"Enough" has pulled papers from the Town Clerk's office to register as a ballot question committee. The Committee to Support Cohasset, a ballot question committee that supports the $1.495 million override, has had a several-months-long head start, filing Jan. 13 with the Town Clerk.

"This is not just an uphill battle, this is an up-the-cliff uphill battle," Whealler said, acknowledging Enough has only about 2-1/2 weeks to get its message out before the May 6 override vote. "I wish we had started before Town Meeting but everyone was waiting for everyone else to start."

He said Enough would like to send out a mailing and plans to identify voters likely to vote against the $1.495 million override and make sure they get to the polls. He also said Enough, which has a nucleus of about a dozen people, would be calling residents to explain their position on the larger override.

He said while Enough opposes the $1.495 million override, some of its members and supporters may vote for the $725,000 override.

Whealler said flyers and mailings by the Committee to Support Cohasset are using the figure 1.4 for the larger override, eliminating the zeroes and rounding it off. "It is not 1.4," he said. "It's $1,495,000 – they are not putting on the zeroes or adding the $95,000.

"I think that's a way of desensitizing us about how large the override is," he said.

He explained that Enough believes this year's $1.495 million override is setting the town up for larger overrides for the foreseeable future because of the new positions and programs that would be put in place should the override pass. "This (large override) is just the down payment," he said. "The upkeep on what it is getting us will carry us way into the future with more overrides."

Whealler said Enough also believes the town and school system could be run better than they are.

"Money is a scarce resource and should be used wisely to solve important problems – we feel the money is not always being used wisely."

Whealler, who has lived in town for 20 years, said he has voted for his share of overrides. "Each time, I've believed we wouldn't need another one and that hasn't happened yet," he said.

He said Enough is prepared to handle potential criticism from those who will say its members are "anti-school."

"There will be those who will say we are a bunch of mean-spirited people, lacking in the public interest who have got something against the schools," he said. "I don't know anyone in our group who feels that way.

"This is not about education," Whealler said, noting he has benefited from a very good public education. "We all believe the kids deserve an excellent public education – but we see a lot of things in the school budget that don't translate into any obvious way to excel in education."

Chairman of the Committee to Support Cohasset, Terry Green of Linden Drive, has said his committee's purpose is to educate Cohasset voters on the issues the town is facing to support the vast services residents demand, including the schools, and to ensure voters have the facts to make an informed decision.

"It is our committee's specific job to educate the town on the financial investment necessary to return the schools to the standards we all expect," he said in an earlier interview.

If the April 8 Town Election is a gauge – then the Committee to Support Cohasset has done its homework. The three candidates in contested races who supported the $1.495 million override all won.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Trash pickup rescheduled

Due to Saturday's inclement weather, the First Annual Town-Wide Trash Pickup, has been rescheduled to Saturday, April 29. Residents will meet in front of Town Hall at 2:30 p.m., and will then celebrate Earth Day, which is April 22, and the beauty of Cohasset by cleaning selected streets and sites including Black Rock Beach, the Beechwood Ballpark, Government Island, Jerusalem Road and Main Street. The town will provide garbage bags, but volunteers are asked to bring their own thick work gloves. The effort is supported by the Cohasset Board of Health, the Friends of Black Rock Beach, and the Cohasset Girl Scouts. For more information, please call Alison Callahan at (781) 383-1081 or Bill Burnett at (781) 383-3499.

Emergency management office seeks volunteers

The town's Office of Emergency Management is looking for volunteers to aid the town in the event of an emergency. Volunteers from all backgrounds are necessary, from those trained in CPR and first aid, to those who could help budget funding or provide communication services during a crisis. Deputy Director of Emergency Management Glenn Pratt said virtually any skill can be used during an emergency, and every bit of help is appreciated. To volunteer your services, please contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 with your name and contact information and someone from the emergency management office will get back to you.

Town seeking new shellfish constable

The town is looking for a new permanent shellfish constable. Elm Street resident Paul Pattison was appointed interim shellfish constable upon the passing of Cliff Dickson. The Shellfish Constable enforces the shellfish rules and regulations, including making sure shellfish is only taken from open, authorized areas. Cohasset does not have any authorized shellfish beds in its waters, which makes the position's scope somewhat limited. There is $500 budgeted each year for the Shellfish Constable position in the town budget. "It's very part-time, but very important," said Town Manager Bill Griffin. Residents interested in taking over as the full-time shellfish constable should contact the Town Manager at (781) 383-4105 or send a letter of interest to Town Hall 41 Highland Avenue.

Softballers on winning track

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

After a tough Opening Day assignment in Abington, the Cohasset High softball team found road trips to Harwich and Avon a little more to its liking last week, picking up wins in both games.

The girls scored an impressive 19-1 win over Harwich last Tuesday. Head coach Deb Bostwick said it was the program's first win over the Rough Riders since returning to varsity action five years ago.

As the score would suggest, the Skippers' offense dominated, collecting 21 hits on the afternoon. Five players - senior captains Erin Liddell and Katie James, juniors Christina Pinkus and Virginia Spofford, and sophomore Anna Haggerty - all had three hits.

Batting leadoff, Spofford set the table nicely, going 3-for-5 with a double, walk and two RBI. Pinkus went 3-for-3, including a home run in the fourth, and remarkably scored five runs. Liddell, James and Haggerty all went 3-for-5, with James knocking in four runs from the 8-spot in the lineup.

On the hill, Pinkus retired the first 10 batters she faced, and in four innings allowed just one hit and no walks while racking up nine strikeouts. Spofford tossed the final two frames, allowing only an unearned run.

The Cohasset pitchers were aided by a solid game behind the plate by freshman Kristin Monaco in her first high school softball game. Filling in for senior Melissa Crowley-Buck, who was away on a family trip to China, Monaco earned the praise of her coach for her performance.

"She did a great job catching Christina," said Bostwick. "I feel very comfortable with Kristin behind the plate."

Things were not quite as easy for the Skippers the next day, as they held on for a 6-4 win in Avon. Pinkus was again dominant on the mound through six innings, giving up just two runs on three hits while striking out nine. It was in the seventh and final inning where things got a little dicey for the visitors.

Pinkus led off the top of the inning with a triple. On a Liddell grounder to short, Pinkus made a run for the plate and slid in safely for a 6-2 Cohasset lead. On the play, however, she jammed the thumb on her pitching hand. In the bottom of the inning, Pinkus' first three warm-up tosses were in the dirt, and Bostwick had to summon Spofford from right field to close the game.

On a cool, windy afternoon, Spofford was allowed all of five pitches to warm up. The inning got off to a dodgy start, as she walked the first two batters, who both stole bases to put runners on second and third with no outs. On a 3-1 pitch, the next Avon batter hit a shot to third, but Haggerty made the stop in the hole on one knee and threw out the runner by a half a step. Avon scored on the play to make it 6-3.

The Avon runner on second stole third and then scored on a passed ball, making it 6-4 with just one out, as the home team now had the game-tying run on deck. Spofford stepped up to the challenge, though, and in a Papelbon-esque performance, induced a pair of outs to second baseman Carly Salerno to end the game.

A winning formula

Pitching and defense spur CHS baseball's 3-1 start

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset High baseball coach Al Gallotta says his team's performance against Harwich last week was as fine a game as he has coached at the high school level.

Coming from a man who has coached for 31 years, that is saying a lot.

But, when the defending Division 3 South champions and South Shore League favorites come to town, and you beat them 9-0 while playing error-free baseball, who can blame him?

"I don't think a high school baseball team can play any better than we played that day," Gallotta said earlier this week. "There's absolutely nothing we did wrong. It's extremely gratifying to coach a game like that and see kids play like that."

Sophomore Brian Hill took the mound for Cohasset that day and pitched the best game of his varsity career to date, tossing a three-hitter and striking out six. Hill was throwing his fastball, curveball and changeup for strikes, and benefited from a flawless game in the field from his teammates.

"The team played a great game behind me," Hill said after Wednesday's practice. "Once I got out of the first inning, I felt pretty comfortable the rest of the way."

The bats came alive for Cohasset as well, with a season-best 10 hits, three of them for extra bases. The Skippers scored four in the first inning, capped by a two-run triple from senior tri-captain Brian Straughn. Fellow captain Chris Bryan smacked an RBI double in the second to make it 5-0, and Hill had more than enough run support.

Junior third baseman Fletcher Smalzel and sophomore catcher Kyle Pinkus both had two-hit days. Pinkus also walked, stole a base and knocked in two runs, while Smalzel hit and single and a double and had one RBI.

The win improved the Skippers' record to 3-1, and Bryan says the reasons for the team's early success come down to the basics of the game.

"Our defense and pitching have made a big improvement from last year," he said Wednesday. "And our hitting has gotten a lot better from the beginning of the season. We struggled with the bats our first few games, but we've built Cohasset's Chelsea Grossman sizes up a backhand during last week's match against Ursuline. The CHS girls tennis team travels to Hingham on Wednesday.

Boys youth laxers continue winning ways on April 9

The U15 Boys Blue team teed up for a grudge match against Hingham and after getting up by five goals as late as the thirdrd quarter, they saw a spirited Hingham group stage a strong comeback effort in the fourth that almost succeeded, if not for some great team defense in the waning moments that protected a one-goal victory in the end, 10-9.

What made this effort even more remarkable, and might have been the reason for Hingham getting back into the game late, was that Cohasset played the game with a very depleted bench with only 13 kids suiting up for the game.

For the first three quarters, the game was well in hand on some outstanding high school level ball movement and transition efforts. Derek Youngman (3G/2A) had an MVP performance at middie, playing both sides of the ball and leaving everything out on the field.

Chris Brown got in on the action at almost every position - goalie, defense, and then showing up in a tired middy group at key junctures. Nick Lieberman (3G) had another strong performance with a great sniper shot from about 20 feet and Jake and Terrence Durkin (1G) teamed up to win key face-offs and to lend a hand at attack and middie.

Dean Driscoll (4G/1A) again showed why he is the team leader on the field by jumping up to middie from his attack position to give much needed rest to the troops while Luke Ernst notched two key assists in a similar dual role. Ian Porter and Will Lynner anchored the defensive effort along with Mark Seraikas who also took a quarter in the goal.

The victory was preserved by a standout effort by Chase Murphy, who took over in the cage in the second half. The excitement came down to the last 90 seconds when Hingham's momentum was looking to change the outcome. But after a Hingham timeout, Chris Brown grabbed his long stick and with the rest of the team shutting off all outlets, he relentlessly shut down clear by stripping the rock from the Hingham ball carrier, winning the ground ball, and then holding the possession until time ran out.

A hard fought game with a great finish for everyone that got to watch and play.

The U15 White squad took on perennial rival Hingham at home Sunday and won 6–3. Rock solid defense, superb goaltending that included stuffing a behind-the-back shot, and precise passing to cutting attack men, solidified the win in a game where Hingham had the advantage in time of possession.

The first quarter went 2–2 and although most of the loose balls went Hingham's way, the boys took advantage of our opportunities and led 3–2 at the half. Focusing on the backups and slides on defense in the second half, Taylor McQuade, Andrew Littauer, and Dave Hernon locked down Hingham's ability to shoot the ball. Jack Murphy took care of the rest from the net, allowing only one Hingham goal in the second half.

Middy adjustments in the second half, combined with endless hustle, saw Cohasset win back time of possession. Our transition game to a settled offense gave us many opportunities to light up the net, resulting in three more goals in the half. The attack worked magically together finding open men for scoring opportunities.

Ian Quinlan posted three assists and a goal of his own. Tom Flibotte netted four goals. Alex Kinnealy had an assist to go with his goal.

It was a great team effort all around, and really had the qualities of a game you would see later in the season. Good job, guys.

The U15 Gray continued their winning ways with a 9-4 victory over Kingston. As they did last week, Cohasset dominated the first half, leading 3-1 at the end of the first quarter and 6-1 at the half.

Cohasset extended its lead with two goals early in the third quarter, but then Kingston responded with three unanswered goals to close within four. However, Cohasset refocused its defensive efforts, and the final goal of the game was scored by Cohasset.

Cohasset's play was again led

SEE YOUTH LAXERS, PAGE 18

Boys youth laxers continue winning ways on April 9

FROM YOUTH LAXERS, PAGE 17

by a strong defensive effort, combined with a balanced offense able to find the open man and capitalize on opportunities. On defense, Keegan Flynn, Sam Leahy, Tom Pecca and Scott Wilson all played solidly, particularly in the first half when the game was still close.

On offense, six of the nine goals were assisted, demonstrating the effectiveness of alert team play and good ball movement. Will Wise (3 goals, 2 assists) and Max Shipp (4 goals, 1 assist) led the scoring, rounded out by Brendan Horigan (1 goal, 1 assist), Christian Lemaire (1 goal), Todd Emmanuel (1 assist) and Sean McCarthy (1 assist).

Grey U-13 took on a hard hitting Kingston squad at home. The Greys defensively stifled the opposition as the middie line of John Collins, Blair (Blake) McGowan and Alex Evans kept the action in the Kingston end. Evans again showed excellent vision as he assisted both Collins and Timothy in their first of three goals each on the day.

Middies Jamie Timothy, Pat Kearney and Evan Yeager kept up the pressure on Kingston as Kearney had a great "end-to-end" run to notch one of his three goals as well. The overall game was a complete team effort again as the heavy lifting of Gus Helbock, Geoff Swain, Robbie Hillman, Jim Lydon, Danny (CZ) Czerkawski (1) goal, on defense never really let Kingston pressure the Greys' goalies. Kyle Healy saw most of 3 quarters action, as a brave Brennan Bukowski ran a goalie "sweep" through a tough Kingston crowd before saving 3 shots and ultimately "taking one for the team."

The scrappy attack line of Teddy Patsos, Evan Yeager, Forster Eymer and Zach (Checker) Streker ran Kingston in circles. Zach was a highlight reel in effort as he consistently got to loose balls, was always in the play and both assisted and scored on great efforts in the Kingston zone. Teamwork and great lacrosse led to five assists on the way to an 11-4 win for Grey.

The U13 Boys Blue squad traveled to perennial arch-rival Hingham for an early season match up that proved to be a real nail biter right to the end. Following up on the previous week's heroics, the 5/6 grade boys once again had a "battle to the end" trading goals with a very talented opponent until finally notching their second one-goal victory with a 6–5 final whistle tally.

This game saw the debut of the "Big Man" Robbie Mahoney (2G/1A), who has found his niche standing tall in the crease area and re-directing key feeds into scores. Defensively, we saw impressive play from Blake Erler who looks like he was born with a long pole in his hand, and Ben Curley who anchored the top-side close D efforts while Willy "The Wall" Brown seemed to stopping everything that came his way in between the pipes.

The real story behind this win was the relentless middie pressure that Derek Froio put on Hingham's lead offensive threat - Tim Giarrusso – an ace sniper and AAU standout that was held to only 2 goals as Froio shut him down more often than not. Transition ball was again provided by the tireless efforts of Dan Barnes (who also stifled several Hingham charges on Defense), and Dean (2G) and Mitchell McNary (1G) who repeatedly broke down the Hingham scoring threats to convert them into fast break opportunities for Cohasset.

Middie John Mills (1G) iced the game with a nice upper corner crank off of a feed from Mahoney, while newcomer Alex Kent showed improvement at his attack position winning several key ground balls. The boys look forward to continuing their winning ways after the vacation break.

The Cohasset U13 White held its home opener under sunny, but cool skies. Led by veteran goaltender Chris Murphy, the team battled hard for four quarters against a talented Hingham squad.

Cohasset displayed some nice moments of good team lacrosse, but had difficulty maintaining ball possession and ended up on the bottom end of a 12-5 final score. Despite the score, the teams kept up a high level of energy up throughout the game and made Hingham earn the victory.

Cohasset's scoring included goals from, Nick Tangherlini (2), Chris Lunde, Charlie Neaves, and Ryan McGovern. Assists went to Charlie Neaves and Nick Tangherlini.

Next up for the squad is a home match with Norwell on Sunday, April 23 at1:30 p.m.

Cohasset U11 Blue at Hingham

The boys started the game winning the face-off and breaking to the crease. Colin Whelan passed to Cole Maher and Cole shot for the first goal of the game. Hingham was fast and also showed excellent teamwork with fast breaks to Cohasset's goal, winning 3 goals by the end of the half.

Cohasset's strength was in the defense with strong play by Matt Arnold, Liam Burke and Sam Murphy. The boys were down at the half, 4-1.

In the second half, the team was a bit tighter at midfield transition. Jack Conti won a goal with a good dodge to beat his man to the crease. Cohasset also saw some great play by Harry Serakis and Martin Buckley.

Cohasset got another goal with a great shot by Colin Whelan but the forth quarter ended too quickly and the boys lost, 7-3.

Cohasset U11 White, home versus Hingham

In the first quarter and only a few minutes into the game, Cohasset's Cole Kissick ran a fast break to Hingham's crease and he fed Mark McKenna for the first goal. Mark Brown scored the team's second goal to put them up 2-0 at the end of the first.

There was some great play on both sides of the field, but Hingham was tough and rough with three penalties to only one by Cohasset. Will Golden scored the third goal, ending the half at 3-0.

Leading off in the third quarter, Adam Benson became the team's first third grader to score a goal. Hingham notched its first goal in the third, but Ryan McKeon assisted Mark McKenna for Mark's second goal in the fourth quarter and Hingham responded with a fast goal.

Both Hingham and Cohasset drew two penalties each in the second half. Throughout the game, Hingham was tough defensively and the action was quite heavy, with a volume of both stick and body checking. Cohasset held strong, however, and walked off the field with a 5-2 win.

some momentum with our last two wins."

Bryan was on the hill for the first of those two wins, a 5-0 victory at Carver last Monday. Bryan was outstanding, giving up only four hits and striking out four for the complete game shutout.

Cohasset had just five hits of their own, but managed five runs thanks in large part to the performance of center fielder Chris Ofsthun, the team's third senior captain. Ofsthun got on base four times (two hits and two walks), scored a run and stole three bases. Sophomore right fielder Sam DeGiacomo also had two hits, scored once and knocked in a run.

Junior second baseman Corbin Faber had the Skippers' fifth hit, and that was the first of his varsity career. Senior left fielder Brendan Barrett had two RBI, one on a bases loaded walk and another on a successful suicide squeeze in the sixth to make it 4-0.

Gallotta said his team executed four bunts, either sacrifices or squeezes, in the wins over Carver and Harwich.

With a 10-day layoff behind them, the Skippers will have no time to rest on their laurels, as they begin a stretch of five games in seven days this morning with a road game at Cardinal Spellman. Tomorrow at 10 a.m., Cohasset will host Archbishop Wiliams, the school where Gallotta used to coach and serve as athletic director.

Those two games are part of a more challenging non-league schedule that Cohasset will be playing this season, and Ofsthun says that is just fine.

"It's better for us to play better competition," he said. "It makes it tougher for us to make the tournament, but it pays off in the long run. We would play those teams in the tournament anyway."

Gallotta says Bryan will pitch against Spellman today, and will likely come back on three days' rest to face Hull on Tuesday. Hill will go against Archies tomorrow and Norwell on Thursday. DeGiacomo figures to get his first start of the year on the mound when the Skippers host Avon on Monday.

"Virginia came up with an awesome save," said Bostwick. "I think it will be a boost for her for the rest of the year. I was really proud of her."

Spofford also knocked in two of the Skippers' three runs in the third with a hit up the middle that scored James and Salerno. Salerno had plated the first run of the inning with a hit down the left field line to score junior Alida Tangherlini, who had singled to lead off the inning.

Tangherlini knocked in a run during Cohasset's two-run fifth, as her grounder to short was enough to score Pinkus, who led off with a base hit. Freshman Carly Zappolo scored the Skippers' other run that inning, as she walked, stole second and came around on a base hit from Haggerty.

The girls have had the vacation week off, but return to the field next week with a Tuesday road game at Hull. They then host Carver on Wednesday.

OBITUARIES

Chester David Catler

Fought in South Pacific in WWII

Chester David Catler,81, of Boca Raton, Fla., died April 11, 2006, after a long illness.

Born in Quincy, he was a son of the late John and Doris Catler, and a former resident of Cohasset. After graduating from Quincy High School, he attended Bridgton Academy. He then went on to attend a year at Bowdoin College.

Mr. Catler entered the Navy after Pearl Harbor was attacked, and served on the original Ground Control Team in the Pacific. He fought in seven campaigns in the South Pacific. After the islands were captured, his team would set up the radar systems, which guided the aircraft onto runways. His unit was destroyed when his airplane was shot down by enemy gunfire. He was rescued after spending three days in a rice field. He then changed service to the Marine Corps. and fought in the Battle of Okinawa.

Chester David Catler

Mr. Catler returned to Bowdoin College and graduated in 1946. He opened a driving school in Hull that expanded into three more schools in the Boston area. At age 25, he sold the business and moved to Florida where he imported and sold handbags from South America. In 1953, he returned to Hull with his Australian-born wife, Lorette Bryant, and operated a liquor store adjoining his stepfather's market for 10 years, while raising three children. In 1963, he became a partner with Irving Greenblatt of South Shore Publishing in Scituate. Once the company became national they printed circulars for Sears Roebuck & Co. and Woolworth's, two of their larger accounts. He sold the publication 20 years later and retired to Florida.

He leaves his daughter, Lori Bryant and her husband, Kim Ackley, of Cohasset; his sons, Jon Catler and Brad Catler, both of New York City; his brother, Marvin Catler of West Hartford, Conn.; two grandchildren, Christopher Ackley and Evan Ackley; and a dear friend, Gail Presson.

Interment at Sharon Memorial Park. Arrangements were handled by Levine Chapel, Brookline.

Memorial donations may be made to Hospice by the Sea, 1531 West Palmetto Park Road, Boca Raton, FL 33486.

Crafting a Southern-charm getaway

By KARA MILLER
SPECIAL TO CNC

BENTONVILLE, Ark. - It's nirvana for crafts fans. In May and October, northwestern Arkansas becomes the land of corn dogs and quilts, roasted corn and handmade furniture, gator-on-a-stick and porcelain jewelry.

Since my mother had long harbored dreams of seeing the Ozarks' famous crafts fair cluster -- there are 10 fairs, all within a 20-mile radius -- we decided to celebrate her birthday by making a trip.

Bentonville is best known as the worldwide headquarters of Wal-Mart, and is a place with tons of corporate cash. In recent years, McMansions, golf courses and Italian bistros have sprung up, catering to legions of affluent executives.

Fortunately, small-time Southern charm is alive and well here, too, especially, biannually, in the hills above Bentonville at the Ole Applegate Place Festival.

The crafts fest features rows of artisan-filled tents stretched over the grounds of an enormous farm. Stalls brim with carved brooms, knitted sweaters and sacks of honey-roasted pecans.

Some 500 vendors participate in the spring, 800 in the fall, giving Ole Applegate the claim as biggest of the fairs. And in addition to crafts and food, there's live music, dancing and more.

In the aisles, couples from Oklahoma swoon over glass sculptures. Young moms from Iowa chatter about getting a head start on Christmas shopping. White-haired ladies from Kansas inspect handmade mirrors. And little kids nursing squares of fudge sit atop barrels of hay.

I bought a hand-turned rolling pin to bring back to Boston from a woodworker who lives farther up in the Ozarks (he'd driven some 120 miles to the fair). He said he and his wife had only gotten electricity about a decade ago, and his wife still doesn't like it.

Ole Applegate Place Arts & Crafts Festival.

A few stalls down, the thing to buy was yummy, cinnamon-y pumpkin butter. I couldn't resist.

And I couldn't leave the fair without sampling gator-on-a-stick, chunks of battered and fried alligator that taste a bit like shrimp. Mom, less adventurous in the food department, turned up her nose at that (as well as the corn dogs and fried Twinkies) and went instead for an ear of roasted corn.

Next morning, fully rested and jet-lag free, we struck out for War Eagle, known as the premier crafts fair in these parts -- it's grown from a group of elderly ladies displaying their weaving to feature more than 150 exhibitors in spring and 300 in fall.

Located about a half-hour west of Bentonville, War Eagle is home to a water-powered grist mill that still produces a variety of flours, cereals and freshly baked breads. There are actually two fairs here, a rather ordinary one along the War Eagle River and a completely extraordinary one on a hill across the bridge.

On the hill, under bright white tents and with speakers blasting country music, you'll find artisans such as Marianne Hanson, who makes colorful porcelain jewelry, and Pat Wilson, who stitches patchwork quilts. But perhaps the most amazing artist we saw all weekend was Bob Holloway, who had traveled from Kansas City, Mo., to display his multicolored pen and ink drawings. Holloway specializes in layering text and pictures, hiding the words of "The Raven," for instance, in a drawing of Edgar Allan Poe, or incorporating biblical verses into Moses' robe.

While in War Eagle, you can pig out on more corn dogs, soft serve, turkey legs and funnel cakes.

We left here to drive north into the mountains to check out quaint Eureka Springs.

The lovely town first became popular in the 1800s for its curative spring water. Steel baron Andrew Carnegie built a library in the town, and dozens of Victorian homes sprung up, their facades featuring filigree woodwork and pastel colors. Today Eureka Springs has the largest collection of Victorian architecture in the Midwest.

Since the 1930s, the town has also become a magnet for artists.

Dozens of crafts stores beckon from old stone buildings, and it's not uncommon to see a painter working on a canvas in the middle of his store. My favorite galleries were Zarks -- which features a collection of blue-hued pottery -- and Quicksilver, filled with delicate, modern jewelry.

Our day spent ogling crafts helped us work up an appetite (despite the earlier junk food splurge), so we stopped at Abuelo's Mexican Food Embassy in Rogers, which is on the way back to Bentonville. The restaurant sits along a bustling, neon-lit, fast-food strip. But Abuelo's is no ordinary taco dive. In fact, it's an unexpectedly chi-chi spot, featuring reproductions of Diego Rivera murals and a painted blue sky overarching the dining room. I gobbled down one beef and one chicken enchilada, both filled with richly spiced and meltingly tender meat.

We later topped off our binge with a nightcap of frozen chocolate-chip custard.

But there were more crafts fairs to hit. So we slept off the food for the night and then hit the road again. By noon, we had fallen in love with fused glass pendants and painted furniture at the sprawling Bella Vista fair.

"Your sister would love this," my mom said to me as she picked up a bracelet made from an antique silver spoon. I nodded from across the aisle, holding a bar of fragrant almond soap to my nose.

"So," my mom said, looking up and smiling mischievously. "How 'bout coming back here for my next birthday?"

If you go...

VERIZON READS
"HOMETOWN HEROES" contest
Imagine your life if you couldn't read - couldn't enjoy a book, read a newspaper, or understand lifesaving emergency instructions on a sign. That's a daily struggle for many people. Fortunately, there are people out there – volunteers who are dedicated to helping others learn the joy of reading and we'd like your help in finding them and giving them the recognition that they deserve.

Tell us about a volunteer in your community that you feel has worked hard to help others with literacy education. Ask them why they believe that literacy for all is important and what they are trying to do to make that a reality. Then, in 500 words or less, tell us why you think they should be considered for this honor. Fifteen Literacy Heroes from communities throughout Massachusetts will be chosen to receive a $1,000 grant to further a literacy effort in their community.

MAIL YOUR SUBMISSIONS TO:
LITERACY HEROES CONTEST
MASSACHUSETTS LITERACY FOUNDATION
ONE HERALD SQUARE, BOSTON, MA 02118
OR EMAIL: MLF@BOSTONHERALD.COM

- Entries must be received by May 8, 2006.
- All volunteers, including students, are eligible for consideration.
- Please include contact information for BOTH you and your nominee as well as the name of the school/organization if applicable.
- Essay writers of winning nominees will each receive a $50 gift certificate to Borders Books.

Verizon READS

This contest is provided through a partnership between the Massachusetts Literacy Foundation and Verizon Reads as part of Massachusetts Reads. Verizon residential telephone customers can contribute one dollar a month for literacy by checking the box on their local phone bill. For more information or to receive complimentary copies of the Massachusetts Reads literacy publication, call 617-619-6555.

Barbie comes to life on stage

Erin Elizabeth Coors, the actress just cast as Barbie, right, gets a sneak peek of her wardrobe by Tony-nominated costume designer Gregg Barnes.

Like little girls all over the world, Erin Elizabeth Coors grew up playing with Barbie dolls. Unlike other little girls, however, Coors also grew up to play Barbie. With her lead role in "Barbie Live in Fairytopia" - now at Boston's Wang Theatre - Coors will bring the world's best-known doll to life onstage for the first time ever.

"Growing up in Cincinnati, I was a huge Barbie fan. I have a whole collection of Barbie dolls at home," explained Coors by telephone last week from Chicago. "To be the first person ever to portray Barbie in a national tour is a once-in-a-lifetime experience. I'm not only excited to work with a very talented production team, but I am also very much looking forward to meeting other Barbie fans across the country."

In "Barbie Live in Fairytopia" — based on the 2005 direct-to-video release "Barbie Fairytopia" — Barbie appears as Elina, a beautiful fairy who longs to have wings and be transported to magical places. Traveling on the back of a colorful butterfly, she meets new people who test her courage and teach her the true meaning of friendship. Coors believes that Barbie fans will enjoy joining Barbie in Fairytopia.

"There's so much spectacle involved in this production, it is just fantastic. There are also 12 original songs, which help tell the story. Children and their families are having so much fun because the show is so beautiful. The younger members of our audience come all decked out in their own Elina garb. The know the story so well from the film version and it is clear that they are just delighted to experience it live."

Since her "birth" in 1959, Barbara Millicent Roberts (better known, of course, as "Barbie") has sometimes been seen as a model for gender equality thanks to a wide range of careers. In addition to her current role as stage performer, Barbie has served as a teenaged fashion model, fashion editor, tennis pro, ice skater, business executive, ballerina, doctor, teacher, veterinarian, Olympic swimmer, concert pianist, dentist, astronaut, presidential candidate, and American Idol winner. Touring as the character, Coors sees first-hand her character's impact.

"What Barbie does is let girls live out their dreams for their personal lives and their careers," says Coors, who graduated from Kent State University earlier this year with a Bachelor of Fine Arts in musical theater. "She means a great deal to young people. Just the other night, at the stage door, a little girl greeted me by saying 'You're really real, Barbie. You're really real.' It was amazing to see that kind of reaction and it reminded me that it is both a privilege and an honor to play this role."

"Barbie Live in Fairytopia" will be at the Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, through April 23. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org.

Movie review

Pierre (Antonio Banderas) and Morgan (Katva Virshilas) demonstrate the benefits of a good pre-dance stretch.

Take this 'Lead,' please

Take the Lead (C+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

"Take the Lead" made me want to change partners. A cute misstep, the film benefits hugely from the charisma and charm of leading man Antonio Banderas and is yet another take on the subgenre that has produced such memorable films as "Shall We Dance" (2004) and its 1996 Japanese source material and the adorable 2005 documentary "Mad Hot Ballroom." In fact, "Take the Lead" takes its, ahem, lead from "Mad Hot Ballroom."

The film tells the fictionalized, distressingly dumbed-down story of Pierre Dulaine, a real-life European dancer transplanted to New York City's mean streets who believes ballroom dance can improve the lives of inner-city children.

He's right, of course, and because we find such self-improvement stories inherently engrossing, we forgive most of the flagrant mistakes made by music-video director Liz Friedlander and TV-based screenwriter Dianne Houston.

Mistake number one is presenting the film's young people, students at a South Bronx junior high school, where the arts have taken a back seat to stepped-up security, as amazingly accomplished dancers to begin with, a stereotype at best.

Conspicuously unlike "Mad Hot Ballroom," this film's lame-brained idea is to suggest that inner-city kids can shake their moneymakers like "Fame"-ready Fly Girls and Boys (with hip-hop choreography courtesy of Rich and Tone Talauega). But when it comes to ballroom dancing, they're two left feet. It's idiotic.

Henry Higgins-like Dulaine begins his involvement in their lives after meeting the school principal Augustine James (Alfre Woodard) and volunteering to cover a detention session by instructing the students in dance. The session becomes a regular thing, and Dulaine persuades his students to train for an upcoming, hotly contested, citywide competition.

Among the students are Rock (Rob Brown of "Finding Forrester"), a hot-tempered, broad-shouldered young man whose gang-banger brother was killed and whose father is a drunk; and the beautiful LaRhette (Yaya DeCosta), who babysits her younger siblings and whose mother is a hooker (!). The comedian of the group is Eddie (talented Marcus T. Paulk of "Roll Bounce"), a would-be Romeo who tries to copy "Mr. D" 's suave moves.

Of course, a film as generic as this must have a rich and spoiled white girl (Lauren Collins) on hand, in this case a sweet, uncoordinated young woman studying for her cotillion.

Soon, the students are learning to tango, foxtrot, rhumba, waltz and merengue in between sessions of hip-hop-flavored dirty dancing. What you never see them do is study for anything else.

Holding this wet tissue together is Banderas, who demonstrated dancing cred on stage in "Nine" and is quite good opposite trained dancer Katya Virshilas ("Smallville"). To his credit, Banderas makes you want to know more about Dulaine (and considerably less about the cliched young people).

Considering how ridiculous so much of it is, no one should be surprised by the ludicrous "Rocky" meets "Flashdance" ending of "Take the Lead," featuring a suggestive tango threesome. Like much of the rest of the film, it leaves you wondering how a movie about dance can be so lame.

Rated PG-13. "Take the Lead" contains profanities and suggestive dancing and behavior.

Vote talk

Officials speak about override implications

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Over the next week, residents will likely be out in full force to educate their neighbors on the impending override vote. The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 6, at the Second Congregational Church.

On the line are two override figures — a $1.495 million operating budget override and a $725,000 operating budget override. Already, most residents have made up their minds about which figure, if any, they want to pass, and many people are not shy about sharing their opinions.

The Board of Selectmen is split on its view of which level of funding should pass. The board voted 3-2 to support the higher figure. Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he supports the $725,000 figure, while Rob Spofford said the town should pass the $1.495 million.

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset village is the town's working center. It is the place you go to meet someone for coffee and a croissant, have lunch, dine with friends in the evening, buy your newspaper and have your hair cut. You can shop for gifts, pick up something to wear and buy flowers in the village.

...situated between the Common to the north and the Cove to the east, it links the elements that make Cohasset a quintessential New England seacoast town.

You use the hardware store, dry cleaners, convenience store, bank and post office for your everyday needs. It is the functioning center of the town. Moreover, situated between the Common to the north and the Cove to the east, it links the elements that make Cohasset a quintessential New England seacoast town.

Antique wedding gowns on display

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There is no dress more special than the one worn by a bride on her wedding day. While the colors and styles have changed over the years, for centuries, women have chosen one gown to mark the occasion.

To keep the traditions of Cohasset weddings alive, the Cohasset Historical Society is gearing up to share its collection of wedding gowns dating all the way back to the 1800s in its latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings." The exhibit will open June 8, and there will be a "wedding luncheon" to celebrate the exhibit from noon to 2:30 p.m. on the day of the opening.

The luncheon is open to everyone and will be held at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island. Actress Judy Bernstein will present "Here Comes the American Bride," a look at historical wedding customs and traditions. There are 60 slots open for the luncheon, and the cost is $30 for Historical Society members and $40 for non-members. Those who attend will make their way over to Historical Society headquarters for the exhibit opening after the luncheon.

Proceeds from the luncheon will go toward helping the many historical endeavors of the society, including preservation of the wedding gowns

Keeping up with crossing closures

'Greenbush guys' provide update

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is in the throes of Greenbush construction all over town. While residents are getting used to keeping up with temporary detours during MBTA construction, the town's Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan have been keeping up with every project, each step of the way.

Brennan came before the Board of Selectmen Monday to give an update on where the town stands. He began in Scituate with a situation which is taking place on Lincoln Lane. Lincoln Lane will be bisected by the Greenbush tracks, and a Cohasset resident, whose address is 425 S. Main Street, accesses his home via Lincoln Lane. Lincoln Lane will not have a grade crossing, which means access to the S. Main Street home will be impeded. The MBTA feels it can build an extended driveway through Cohasset's Ledgewood Farm Drive to give the homeowner access to his property. There are also three Scituate residents who live on Lincoln Lane who would like to be able to exit their property through Ledgewood Farm Drive.

The Planning Boards for both Scituate and Cohasset will need to approve the plans, and abutters to the property will need to take part in the discussion as well. "Not only would the means of access travel across town borders, it would travel over county lines as Scituate is part of Plymouth County and Cohasset is part of Norfolk County. It is likely there could end up being two driveways built with a divider between each. The MBTA would be responsible for paying for the project. "We still have a mountain to climb. This is not over by any long-shot," said Brennan.

Town's Cook costs to be paid off over several years

Override can't be used for that debt

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With the death of the Cook Estate project, the town must now come up with $300,000 to pay off the costs incurred trying to make it work.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said all tolled, the town spent $500,000 of borrowed money on the project, $200,000 of which was deposit money and will be returned to the town. Therefore, the town has been left with $300,000 to pay back.

An additional $115,000 was spent out of the town's operating budget to cover services such as advice from Town Counsel which were already budgeted.

The town has not been required to pay back any of the borrowed funds as of yet, but Buckley said the first payment will be due in January 2007. He said the amounts of the payments are still unknown, but he estimates it will take between 3-5 years to pay off the debt.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said at this point, "I would assume the annual payments will have to come from the regular budget. Thankfully, our debt service budget (non-excluded) is actually going down next year, so at least some of the impact may be able to be absorbed in that way."

Costs associated with the project date back to 2003. At that point, the town was optimistic it could work with a private developer to build a project it wanted to see, which would provide affordable senior housing for the town's eldest residents. Cohasset is trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state and the Cook project could have helped the town meet its requirement.

Costs associated with the project date back to 2003.

Voters at the November 2003 fall Special Town Meeting authorized the town to spend $4.5 million for the purchase of the Cook property with the intention of making a profit when the town sold the property to a developer. In May 2004, the town issued a $100,000 temporary note to pay for anticipated project costs. The note fell under the umbrella of the $4.5 million appropriation as it would have been paid back at the closing of the property. Temporary notes allow the town to borrow funds for a limited time, usually one year, and pay only the interest on the funds, not the principal.

In 2005, the town borrowed an additional $200,000 which paid for engineering and consulting work done to help get the project off the ground. The $200,000 was added to the $100,000, which gave the town one $300,000 note to pay back.

The town will be voting on an override Saturday, May 6. If an override passes, it cannot go toward paying back the debt for the Cook project in fiscal 2007. When the budget was approved at Town Meeting, the town's line items were funded in three columns — one for a no-override budget, one for a $725,000 override, and one for a $1.495 million override, depending on which funding level passes. Costs for the Cook project were not included in that budget, and therefore override funds cannot be used to pay them back.

The Cook Estate, located on Sohier Street, is a roughly 19-acre parcel of land, that was owned by the late Jane Bancroft Cook. The town had been working with the heirs of her estate since 2003 to build senior housing on the site. The project was put out to bid, then wastewater issues forced a reduction in scope of the project. A second Request for Proposals was sent out for the smaller project, and two subsequent developers both pulled out due to tight permitting deadlines. The Weathervane Construction Corporation was the fourth developer to try to work with the town to develop the property. Now that the heirs of the estate are no longer working with the town, the fate of the property is in their hands.

Cook answers

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he received phone calls during the week regarding the board's emergency meeting, held Tuesday, April 18, to discuss the Cook Estate. He explained as of Friday, April 14, any extensions granted by the trustees of the Cook Estate had expired and if the town had wanted to try to go for one more extension, the board needed to meet and take a vote immediately. With Monday as a holiday, the board met Tuesday.

Dormitzer said in order for the town to have even approached the Cook trustees to try to go for another extension, it would have been required to put down $31,500. The board decided not to take the risk, and bring closure to the project.

Volunteers sought for cable committee

The town's contract with the Comcast cable company is almost up, which means discussion of contract renewal is currently on the table. Town Manager Bill Griffin said in many towns, there are active cable advisory committees which are charged with aiding in such matters. He said Cohasset used to have a Cable Advisory Committee, but it has since become defunct. He said having a Cable Advisory Committee would be a good idea for the town for a number of reasons.

Griffin drafted a charge for the committee, which the Board of Selectmen approved Monday. The committee should consist of between five and seven members, to be appointed by the Board of Selectmen for three-year terms. The length of membership for the first group of members will be staggered, to allow for a continually revolving membership.

Members of the committee should include individuals who are either actively involved in community programming and production; are a representative of the school department who is involved in production, local programming, and technology; is a citizen with background and training in telecommunications, information technology, etc.; or is a citizen at large, especially one which is a cable subscriber.

The committee shall be advisory in nature to the Board of Selectmen, and will aid with matters relating to any application for a cable license transfer, merger, assignment, or original issuance. It will conduct "ascertainment" proceedings needed to support renewal license negotiations. It will monitor compliance by the cable company with all provisions of the cable license and conditions, including conducting compliance hearings and meetings. The committee will also serve as a liaison between cable customers and the cable company on issues relating to quality of service, customer service, etc. Other duties will be determined from time to time by the Board of Selectmen.

Residents interested in serving on the Cable Advisory Committee should contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or send a letter of interest to Town Hall at 41 Highland Avenue.

Vote NO on the Override questions
- If passed, the increase in your taxes will be permanent.
- The increase will begin a new cycle of still higher overrides.
- Escalating taxes are driving out Cohasset's middle-income families and people on fixed incomes.
- Override supporters have failed to show a credible connection between spending $1.495 million and achieving quality education.

Override 'True or False'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Mariner continues to receive phone calls and e-mails, and has heard talk around town, from residents who still have questions about the override vote. Below are some "true or false" questions and answers to help alleviate the confusion. Anyone who has questions about the override vote may contact Town Manager Bill Griffin at (781) 383-4105 or via e-mail at wgriffin@townofcohasset.org, or Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh at (781) 383-6111 or via e-mail at dwalsh@cohassetk12.org.

1. Voters will cast three votes on May 6.
FALSE: Voters have two votes to cast May 6. They can vote either "yes" or "no" for the $1.495 million override and either "yes" or "no" for the $725,000.

2. If a voter does not want to pass an override figure, they should leave that question blank.
FALSE: Leaving a question blank means a vote is not counted either for or against an override figure. To vote against an override figure, a "no" vote must be cast.

3. Voters who would like to see the $1.495 million override pass should only vote for the $1.495 million figure.
FALSE: It will not hurt the higher override figure's chances of winning to vote for the lower one as well. As long as the higher number receives more "yes" votes than "no" votes, it will automatically win, per Prop. 2-1/2 rules.

4. It is possible for more voters to support the $725,000 override and still have the $1.495 million override take effect.
TRUE: Hypothetically, if only three residents came out to vote for the higher override figure and two of those votes were "yes" votes, and 1,000 residents voted for the lower override and all 1,000 voted yes, the majority of votes for both questions would be "yes" votes, and both would therefore pass. Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, the larger override figure will automatically win, even though many more votes in the affirmative were cast for the lower figure. As long as the higher override figure receives a majority of "yes" votes, it will win no matter what, no matter how many votes were cast.

5. If a resident wants only the lower override figure of $725,000 to pass, they should vote "yes" for that question and leave the other question blank.
FALSE: If a resident would like to see only the lower override figure pass, they should also vote "no" for the higher override figure. The only way the larger override figure would lose is if it receives more "no" votes than "yes" votes.

6. Cohasset will be voting on a pyramid override.
TRUE: A pyramid override asks voters to determine which, if any, of two or more funding options they are willing to approve. Voters may vote for or against each question independently. Any question is approved if a majority of the people voting on that question voted "yes." If more than one question is approved, the question with the highest dollar amount wins.

7. Cohasset has never had a pyramid override before.
FALSE: This year's override is not a new concept brought to the town by Town Manager Bill Griffin. In 1999 there was a $766,000 override that failed at the regular Town Election by a margin of 60-40 percent. Due to problems balancing the budget, the selectmen later called a Special Election for late May with three override questions on the ballot: one for $612,895, one for $509,554, and one for $380,000. The only figure to receive a majority vote (1,413-1,364) was the $380,000 figure.

8. Taxes will be increased permanently if the override passes.
TRUE: The town is looking to pass an operating budget override. Unlike debt exclusion overrides, which are typically passed to cover special projects such as sewer construction and school renovations, and for which taxes go away after the debt is paid off, operating budget override increases are permanent.

9. If an override passes this year, it guarantees there will not be another override next year.
FALSE: While nothing is set in stone, the School Committee has said it needs an increase of between 7 percent and 8 percent annually to keep the district moving forward. State aid has also been cut, which makes running the town as a whole very difficult. The town does not generate the kind of revenue necessary to make up for what has been lost, which means another override cannot be ruled out for next year.

10. Override elections are the same as candidate elections.
FALSE: With an override election, the override which receives the most votes is not automatically the winner, as is the case with candidate elections. The state's Prop. 2-1/2 rules dictate with a pyramid override, an override figure passes if it receives more "yes" votes than "no" votes. If two or more figures pass, the largest dollar amount always prevails.

Override election at-a-glance

What: Special election where voters decide whether or not to pass a $1.495 million Prop. 2-1/2 operating budget override or a $725,000 Prop. 2-1/2 operating budget override.

When: Saturday, May 6 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Where: Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., next to Town Hall (elections are usually held at Town Hall, but a scheduling conflict required the election be moved next door).

Outcome: If either override passes, it will be a permanent tax increase. If the $1.495 million override passes, the school department would add $1.1 million to its budget and the town would add $395,000 to its budget. If the $725,000 override passes, the school department would add $530,000 to its budget and the town would add $195,000 to its budget. Taxes for the owner of a home valued at $750,000 would increase their overall taxes by $330 with the $725,000 override, $249 of which is attributable to the override. That same homeowner would have a tax increase of $594 with the $1.495 million override, $513 of which is attributable to the override.

Override questions answered

1. Each voter may cast two votes — one for each of the two questions on the election ballot.
2. Both override questions will pass if they receive more "yes" votes than "no" votes. If both pass, the larger override figure will take effect, per Prop. 2-1/2 rules.
3. Votes for both questions are tallied separately. The "yes" votes for question one will only be compared to the "no" votes for question one and the "yes" votes for question two will be only compared to the "no" votes for question two. The total number of votes cast does not matter, it is the ratio of "yes" to "no" votes for each separate question.
4. It is possible for the smaller override figure to receive more "yes" votes and still lose. Prop. 2-1/2 rules dictate regardless of the number of votes cast, with a pyramid override, the larger figure automatically wins if it receives a majority of "yes" votes.
5. Passing an operating budget override is a permanent tax increase. The money which is added to the budget becomes part of the base from which the town adds 2-1/2 percent to its taxes next year.

How should I vote?

• Do you want the $1.495 million override figure to pass? If so, vote "yes" for both override questions. As long as the larger override figure receives a majority of "yes" votes, it will win as Prop. 2-1/2 rules dictate the larger override figure wins if both receive a simple majority. Voting "yes" for the smaller figure as well does not hurt the larger override's chances of winning. Voting for both will only help ensure if the larger override figure fails, the lower number still has a good chance of passing.

• Do you want only the $725,000 override to pass, but not the $1.495 million? If so, then vote "no" on the $1.495 million override and vote "yes" for the $725,000. Leaving the $1.495 million question blank means a vote is not counted for or against the figure. If a resident does not want to see the larger figure pass, the only way to counter the "yes" votes being cast is to vote "no."

• Do you want neither override to pass? If so, then vote "no" for both questions. Leaving the question blank is not the same as voting "no" in an override vote. The only way to prevent an override from passing is for the question to receive more "no" votes than "yes" votes.

Officials on both sides speak out on override implications going for the $725,000 override because he feels the town really does need it. However, "I definitely don't think $1.495 million is the right thing to do," he said, adding he believes the figure is excessive.

He said the school department presented a figure at the beginning of budget season, and that same figure was voted on by the School Committee just before Town Meeting. "It shows no moderation. Everything was asked for and nothing was cut back," he said. "I expected people to try to come to some middle ground. I would have supported something in the middle (of the $725,000 and $1.495 million) if I felt there had been a compromise," he said.

Dormitzer said in his opinion, there should be a town-wide discussion to decide what services are deemed most important across the board, and then how allocating funding to specific areas would reach those goals. From there, the town must determine what the costs will be over five years to meet those goals and maintain them. "It's not just about the money, it's about what you want and your quality of life," he said.

Dormitzer said with the way taxes are being increased, there are many families who are essentially the "bedrock" of this town, who have lived here for generations and made the town what it is, who now can no longer afford to live here. He said other residents came to Cohasset after World War II and are now of retirement age, and they too are "being driven out. We're going to lose the core part of the population who built this town," he said.

Dormitzer said to not give consideration to those residents shows a lack of generosity. "It minimizes the contributions of many families over many years," he said.

But Spofford sees the $1.495 million figure not as being excessive, but a necessity if the town values education and wants to continue to move the district forward. He said in the past, projects and improvements have been deferred and now educational improvements are being put off as well. He said the town cannot afford to keep putting things off on any level, and as an elected official, he will not stand by and watch the educational system in town be dismantled. "Moving forward with a diminished educational experience is far worse than deferring maintenance on any building. You can't put a dollar amount on that," he said.

Spofford said while there has been much support shown for the $725,000 figure, "It is still a step backwards." He said while the $1.495 million is a significant number, every item that will be purchased or program or position funded is a necessity.

Spofford said he does understand there are people in town who feel the higher override figure will put an undue tax burden on some residents. However, he said he feels his role is to be a leader in the community and try to find a balance between the increased tax burden and what is best for the common good. In light of that, he said he has made the tough choice to support the higher figure, because he does not feel it is in the best interest of the community to compromise the education of its children.

There are citizens groups on both ends of the spectrum as well. Members of the Committee to Support Cohasset would like to see the $1.495 million figure pass, while members of Enough are against the $1.495 million override.

Chairman of the Committee to Support Cohasset, Terry Green of Linden Drive, said "If no overrides pass, we will take additional steps backwards in the schools and town services. Most likely we will lose additional teachers, class sizes will increase and AP and elective classes at the middle and high school may be impacted. The only override that improves the current situation, reduces class sizes, adds back AP and electives previously cut is the $1,495 million."

On the other side of the issue, Anson Whealler, 619 Jerusalem Road, the spokesman for the political action committee dubbed "Enough," said he feels many residents are very concerned about the increase in taxes an override will cause, and some "are on pins and needles," when it comes to publicly stating their opinion, for fear of being seen as not supporting education. He said he has asked residents — many of which he knows do not support the higher override and are parents of school-age children — to put up signs in their front yards, and has been met with "I support you, but I can't have a sign."

He said it is very important for residents to understand the increases that would take place this year, "We'll pay forever," as operating budget overrides become part of the tax base permanently. When the town's taxes are increased by 2-1/2 percent next year, the override figure would become part of that base.

Whealler said the most important thing any resident can do is go to the polls with a clear understanding of what it will cost their family personally to pay for the increase in taxes that could ensue from a passed override. "What am I willing to give up?" is the question each person should ask themselves as they cast their vote, he said. It could be a morning coffee or a bagel, but a lot of people have already given those things up, he said. "Some people are ready to give up their homes and just move," he said.

The override election will take place Saturday, May 6 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., next to Town Hall. The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. No matter what a resident's personal stance on the override, everyone is being urged to use both of their votes and cast either a "yes" or "no" vote for both override figures.

Root beer stand floats through construction

Henry's opens for second season

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Spring has sprung and has brought with it the reopening of Henry's Root Beer Stand on Pleasant Street.

Now in its second year of business in downtown Cohasset, owners Kim and Bill Palmer are excited about beginning the season. The restaurant, located at the site of the former Pleasant Street Parfait, opened for business last week and will remain open until the first week of October.

There will be obstacles to overcome as the Greenbush rail line runs right next to the building and the grade crossing at Pleasant Street is currently being constructed, which has resulted in the street's closure. In addition, the village revitalization project is underway, which is causing even more construction in the area. However, the Palmers believe a little dust isn't enough to deter their patrons.

"We were going to wait until the construction was completed on Pleasant Street" to open, said Bill Palmer, but as construction continued into the restaurant's season, he and his wife decided to open anyway and work around the trucks.

"I think things will be great when it's all finished," said Palmer, adding the MBTA as well as Cashman Balfour Beatty, which is constructing the rail line, have been very accommodating. "We're looking for the light at the end of the tunnel," he said, which will include a new sidewalk with curbing and improvements to the town parking lot, which will no doubt help business.

Henry's Root Beer Stand in Cohasset is one of four in the area. The Palmer's own two restaurants in Taunton, and another is under construction in Quincy, which will open either this June or July. If the success of the first two stands is a gauge, the Palmer's Cohasset and Quincy endeavors will surely do well.

The original Henry's in Taunton has won the "best hamburger" in Taunton for the past four years, and was featured on The Phantom Gourmet in 2003 as a "hidden jewel." The restaurant was also featured on Chronicle as "One of the best eight places in New England to get a hamburger." Last year, the Phantom named Henry's root beer the "drink of the year."

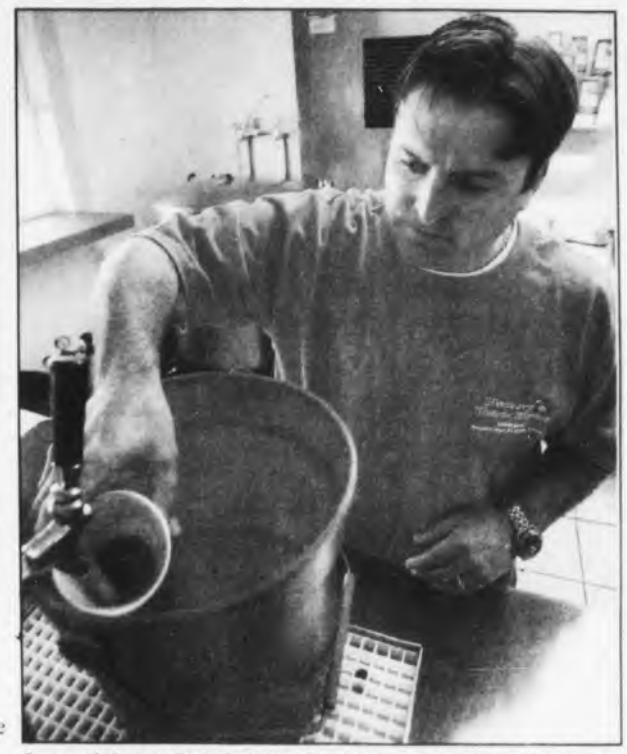
Bill Palmer, owner of Henry's Root Beer, stands behind the counter of his Cohasset restaurant which opened last year. Palmer and his wife Kim own three other root beer stands in southeastern Massachusetts.



Owner of Henry's Root Beer Stand, Bill Palmer, pours himself a glass of the restaurant's award-winning homemade root beer to be sure it is ready for the public. Fresh root beer is made at Henry's every day, and is periodically tasted to be sure it is up to par.

With Pleasant Street closed due to Greenbush line construction, signage has been erected pointing residents toward Henry's Root Beer Stand.

"We've been blessed with some good press," said Palmer, adding his staff deserves credit for the restaurant's success. "We have a lot of good people working for us," he said, which holds true for all the Henry's Root Beer Stands. He said the restaurant also prides itself on using only the best ingredients. "Everything we use is extremely high quality," from the French fries, to the hamburger meat, to the lobster, to the cooking oil. "It's the best you can get," he said.

Palmer said when scoping out the scene on the South Shore for a new location for his third restaurant, Cohasset was not immediately on his radar screen. He said they had been looking for another "A" site which would be a on a main road location with lots of traffic driving by. However, he saw the ad for the Pleasant Street building in a local newspaper and decided to come by and take a look. "I fell in love with it. It's a beautiful site," he said, adding even thought it might not have the traffic of a major road, he was "pleasantly surprised" at just how much business he did receive.

Palmer said he feels his restaurant fulfills a need in the village which no other business provides. There is no other place where families can go to get homemade root beer, a hamburger, hot dog or grilled cheese, and ice cream all at a low price. He said his restaurant is also a hit with some of the town's oldest residents, as they remember the days when finding homemade root beer was easy. "Now, we're the only ones left," he said.

To go along with the root beer, Henry's sells Gifford's of Maine award-winning ice cream. "They won the best vanilla in the country," last year, which goes perfectly with Henry's award-winning root beer. Palmer said the restaurant offers between 15 and 20 flavors, which he likes to change up during the season. "It's great ice cream," he said.

Until the dust settles, there will be signage to help residents navigate their way to Henry's Root Beer Stand. Construction on the Pleasant Street crossing is ongoing and the road is anticipated to reopen May 8. Palmer said looking on the bright side of things, business is being affected in a positive way, as it has become the go-to spot for lunch for those working on the projects in the village.

Henry's Root Beer Stand is open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week. The restaurant is located at 2 Pleasant St., across from the South Shore Art Center and the James Brook Crossing shops. For more information on the restaurant and to view its menu, please visit its Web site at www.henrys-rootbeer.com.

Wedding gowns show how times have changed in the society's collection. Executive administrator for the Historical Society Lynne DeGiacomo said there will be roughly 20 gowns on display, as well as veils, gloves, shoes, men's vests, photographs, and wedding certificates. "Anything wedding we have, we're going to try to put out," she said.

The gowns will be the main attraction of the exhibit. DeGiacomo said some of the dresses are part of the society's collection, while others have been loaned just for the exhibit. Some of the society's dresses have not been seen in more than 20 years, as they have been carefully tucked away in boxes in a climate-controlled environment.

Chair of the Historical Society's Costume and Textile department Martha Hurtig explained the dresses had been stored in acid-free boxes and packed with a lot of acid-free tissue paper, until brought out for this event. "That's about the best we can do," she said.

Some of the society's dresses have not been seen in more than 20 years, as they have been carefully tucked away in boxes in a climate-controlled environment.

Hurtig said when storing old fabrics, there are positives and negatives associated with hanging or boxing them. If gowns are hung, a lot of stress is placed on the shoulders. However, when a gown is folded, it creates creases. She explained the society uses a large amount of tissue paper between the layers of the dresses when they are folded to help inhibit creases from forming. She said when a few of the dresses were unpacked after a long time in their boxes, "Some of the fabrics had broken down where they were folded for a long time."

To get the dresses ready to be displayed, the Historical Society called in a professional fabric conservator to peruse the collection. She made recommendations as to what could and should be done to each dress to restore it and repair it to the best condition it could be. For some dresses, she recommended doing nothing, or the society would have risked losing the dress completely. However, the majority of the dresses were very good candidates for a thorough restoration.

There were essentially five levels of restoration recommended for the gowns. Those in the worst shape were left alone. Others could be restored in-house with the help of a conservator by using a vacuum and giving a gentle steaming. "It is a very time-consuming process," said DeGiacomo, as it can take as much as three hours to complete one dress and is a two-person job. However, the results in the end are well worth the time and effort.

Some dresses were sent off to Dependable Cleaners, which specializes in wedding gown cleaning and preservation. The company graciously performed the services for the society at a reduced rate. Those dresses which were in very bad shape, but not so much that they could not be repaired, were sent off to the University of Rhode Island's Department of Textiles.

"We've learned a lot about trying to conserve our textile collection," in trying to ready the wedding gowns for the exhibit, said DeGiacomo, adding the techniques will no doubt spill over from the wedding gowns to the other items in the society's extensive costume collection.

Some of the dresses in the society's collection date as far back as the 1860s. "The earlier they are, the more we'd like to preserve them," said DeGiacomo, but the process of restoration is a costly one. Over the years, the society has lost some gowns because the fabric was so old, it completely deteriorated, and the society would like to ensure that does not happen again.

To help with the society's restoration efforts, proceeds from the luncheon held prior to the exhibit's opening will be put toward restoration of other gowns in the society's collection. With the additional funds, DeGiacomo said dresses in the collection which were too costly to be repaired can be sent down to the University of Rhode Island for restoration. She hopes to be able to change the dresses in the exhibit half-way through the summer. "Getting these dresses conserved so they're ready for the long term is one of our goals," she said.

One dress the society would love to see restored is a very unusual wedding gown. "It is a beautiful turquoise gown circa 1865," said DeGiacomo, but at this time, the cost to repair the dress is as much as it would be to restore two or three other dresses. The society hopes that through funds raised by the lun-

Adopt-A-Gown

The Cohasset Historical Society is preparing for its summer exhibit of historical wedding gowns, and it needs the community's help.

As a steward of town history, the society's job is to present its collections for future generations to study and enjoy. Therefore, preservation of its collection is key, and with that responsibility comes the expense of caring for the items within the collection.

To help maintain some of the items in its large textile and costume collection, the society has formed a new "Adopt-A-Gown" program. As a participant in the program, residents may choose a gown they would like to help the society preserve by donating the cost for conservation work and storage supplies. Each gown needs to be treated by a professional conservator and also needs special archival supplies in which to store it in the future. These steps will help safeguard each gown for years to come.

Each adopted gown will display the name of the person who generously donated the means for its restoration during the exhibit. More importantly, those who donate will be playing a part in protecting a part of the town's history.

Listed below are historic wedding gowns that need conservation work before they can go on display at society headquarters this summer:

cheon, or through the museum's Adopt-A-Gown program (see sidebar), all the dresses in its collection will be restored.

While the society does have a few wedding dresses in bright blues, purples, and even one pumpkin-colored wool dress, most of the gowns in the society's collection are off-white. There are silk dresses with long trains which date back to the 1930s, dresses with intricate lace details which date back to the late 1800s, and one crocheted dress from the 1960s which has a matching crocheted hat from which the veil was attached. While the dresses are all different in style and fabric, one of the common threads between the oldest of the bunch is their size.

On their wedding days, women used to be much smaller than they are today for a variety of reasons. With a shorter life-expectancy, women were married at a younger age, and their diets weren't as substantial as they are today. Therefore the society has had a lot of trouble finding mannequins small enough to display their dresses. Even a size 12 girl mannequin has been too big for some of the dresses. Hurtig has put her husband on the job of trying to fashion smaller mannequins for the exhibit, and society member Steve Bobo has also been working to create small mannequins from fiberglass.

In addition to gowns, DeGiacomo said the society will bring out everything in its collection related to weddings to be put on display. The society has many pairs of shoes, gloves, veils, men's vests, photographs, and wedding certificates. She said the society also hopes to be able to host a children's program with a wedding theme of some sort, and hold an evening event with a local jeweler to display antique jewelry brides might have worn on their wedding day.

The Cohasset Historical Society will open its latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings," Thursday, June 8. A luncheon will be held from noon to 2:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers' Residence, located on Government Island off Border Street, before the exhibit's formal opening. There are 60 slots open for the luncheon and the price to attend is $30 for Historical Society members, and $40 for non-members. Proceeds from the event will be used to fund the society's efforts to continue restoring its gowns. The exhibit will run at the Historical Society, located in the Paul Pratt Building, 106 S. Main St., through the month of August, and will be open during Historical Society hours, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, please contact the society at (781) 383-1434 or via e-mail at cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

These antique wedding dresses are part of the Cohasset Historical Society's extensive costume collection. The gowns were worn in Cohasset weddings from 1868 to 1930, and will be on display at the society from June 8 through August.

Martha Hurtig, chair of the Historical Society's Costume and Textile department, fixes the collar of a wedding dress which dates back to 1905. The dress on the left is from 1868. Both will be on display during the society's upcoming antique wedding dress exhibit, which opens June 8.

Executive Administrator of the Cohasset Historical Society Lynne DeGiacomo, Martha Hurtig, chair of the society's Costume and Textile department, and Laura Abrams, curatorial assistant, have been working tirelessly to restore and repair the many antique weddings gowns in the society's collection for its upcoming exhibit "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings." The society has many gowns in its collection which are still in need of restoration, and residents are being asked to "Adopt-A-Gown," and help fund the cost of the restoration. The dress on the left is available for adoption, while the dress on the right has already been restored.

Choir director feels right at home

Loves tradition, history of region

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

"I feel this is not even a job, it's a passion."
— Joel Buford, choir director

Joel Buford, choir director, at Second Congregational Church.

"I feel like I have sort of an old soul. Or at least I'm someone who has always looked for someplace more traditional and historical than where I grew up," says Joel Buford.

This is one of a number of musings that the 25-year-old Buford offers about the rather unusual path his life has taken so far, one which has led him from his native Las Vegas to his current part-time position as Choir Director at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

"I wanted something extremely different as far as a career, lifestyle and home setting after being raised in Las Vegas, and studying music education at UNLV (University of Nevada, Las Vegas)," Buford recalled. "I looked into graduate school programs in a number of different cities, such as New York, Philadelphia and Seattle, and finally settled on Boston, and the vocal performance program they have at Boston University.

"I felt like I wanted to experience or be a part of history of some kind, and I found the atmosphere of Boston and the surrounding area to be an ideal fit. I love the colonial feel of this area of the country. It has a great aesthetic appeal to me, with the traditional New England scenery and foliage. I feel that it's an inspiration to the kind of creative work I want to pursue. I'm now studying opera at B.U., but my heart lies in Christian contemporary music," Buford says.

Buford has been Choir Director at the Second Congregational Church since September 2004. Working at the church mainly on Thursdays and Fridays, he rehearses weekly with the 20-member Adult Sanctuary Choir to prepare for the group's performances during Sunday Services and other special events and holidays planned throughout the year, sometimes singing with a local children's choir. His job also entails participating in Music Committee meetings to facilitate new ideas and innovations introduced by the church.

One of the special events was the Choir's performance at the service on Easter Sunday. The vocal group, which includes members from Cohasset as well as other surrounding towns, offered a program of special holiday selections backed by a three-piece ensemble including tympani, trumpet and organ.

This Easter presentation was an example of the sort of creative innovation that Buford has brought to his work as Choir Director at the church in the past year-and-a-half, and plans to continue to do so in the future. It also showed that the Director, for someone with such "an old soul," brings a notably youthful energy and vitality to his position.

Another instance was this past Christmas and the Choir's presentation of Handel's Messiah, which it performed with a 10-piece chamber orchestra.

"That was my first try with a new and different sort of musical presentation approach. People were skeptical about it at first, but then after the program went off as well as it did and was well received by the community, they just wanted more and more," Buford said.

Buford, who lives in Watertown, also currently works as a Professor of Voice for Non-Majors at Boston University, as Program Administrator with Urban Voices: a Choral Music Initiative in Boston at the Metropolitan Opera Guild, and as a soloist at St. Catherine's of Sienna Parish in Norwood. This follows years of previous experience as both a vocal teacher and professional while a Music Education student at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas from 1999 to 2003.

None of the vocalist's past or present positions or projects, however, seems as satisfying as his work with the Cohasset Choir.

"I feel this is not even a job, it's a passion. They're all great people who I work with in the choir at the church. And every time I leave here, I get a fulfillment in which all the worry and concern of the day seems to go away. I believe that my place is teaching music, and that that's my gift, giving music to people through me," Buford says.

Buford added that his future plans as Choir Director at the Cohasset church include more presentations with choir and orchestra, plus what he calls more profound productions, such as programs that will be African-American spiritual and/or inspirational based. He also said he'd like to start an evening concert series, particularly following what he termed as the overwhelming success of this past Christmas season's Messiah concerts.

Cohasset tradition

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we appreciate our readership and relish the fact we've become a tradition in the vast majority of households in town.

However, it's always bothered us that everyone isn't a subscriber. To that end, we're mailing the Cohasset Mariner to every household in town this week in the hope that we'll convince those who don't read the paper to give us a try.

This week, we asked for commentary from members of our Readers Advisory Network about the village (see page 18). The Readers Advisory Network is an effort to involve our readers in the paper and is open to anyone who wants to participate and has access to email. You can email me at mford@cnc.com to sign up.

We agree with most of the respondents that the village is an integral part of what makes Cohasset, Cohasset.

The merchants and businesses have shown amazing resilience over the years as plans for village revitalization were reworked and reworked again. They truly deserve our continued support. Downtowns are fragile enterprises. All across America, they have become virtual ghost towns, abandoned for more convenient shopping centers and malls along highways.

Cohasset, its residents, merchants and businesses should be applauded for their commitment to keeping the village a vital, living entity. This week we also tried to show the "village heartbeat" through our photographs. Mariner staff photographer Robin Chan provides us with a photo essay of village life (see page 33)

Cohasset is a great town and here at the Mariner, we pledge to continue to provide the coverage it deserves. Every week we publish all the news we can scout up and that wouldn't be possible without a lot teamwork that includes staff reporter Samantha Brown; sports editor Mark Goodman; staff photographer Robin Chan; cartoonist Jim Hamilton; Around Town columnist Jennifer Piepenbrink; correspondents, freelance photographers, columnists and other contributors. We're also grateful to tech support, our typesetters, and paginators.

But the most important part of our team is you, our readers. You provide us with the tidbits of information that compile Around Town, Happenings, social and club news. Many of our news tips come for you.

In short, you are the reason we're here. You're the reason we're still publishing after 28 years.

Let us know what you think.

We love what we do and consider it a privilege to keep you informed and be part of the continuing Mariner tradition.

— Mary Ford, editor

Right to free speech

TO THE EDITOR:

Some fanatic big spenders have stolen a "No Override" sign from my front yard. Saturday night five or more such signs were reported stolen from other households in town. This is objectionable dirty politics, which tarnishes to some degree the entire pro-override party.

In over four decades as a citizen of Cohasset — including sending all four of my children through the public school system — I have noticed that annual reckless spending on the schools has an appeal to monomaniacal partisans who are likely to become overzealous.

Free expression of opinion is a necessary element of the constitutional right to free speech. Suppression of opposing opinion is improper.

Still time for better sidewalks

TO THE EDITOR:

It is almost too late, but maybe....

Work is moving quickly in the Village this week. The road has been cold planed and pulverized, the beautiful new granite curbing delivered, specially sized and heat treated to give a rustic, less "sharp" edge, to be kind on the car tires, as well as our eyes. No razor sharp edge, like the other new curb you see.

The old concrete sidewalks — yes concrete, under the dirty cracked asphalt surface has probably all been removed by now. Next the base coat of asphalt will be put down and the granite curbs set to the new grades. Then the road will have the final coat, and the new asphalt sidewalk will be installed — Asphalt!

Only six inches of the new curb will be seen, and care must be taken to prevent the asphalt from being rolled onto the top. I think this is a shame. We voted at Town Meeting for concrete, but the budget says use asphalt. Many of the building owners would like to install brick, including myself — even at our expense.

Why concrete or brick? Not just for looks, but for longevity — asphalt will lift from the tree roots and crack the pavement, depressions in the pavement will occurs in many ways on hot summer days, forming an uneven surface. Patching the asphalt is like patching the streets — it results in cracks and more cracks.

Anything is possible in Cohasset — both right and wrong — can we try and do what's right with our sidewalks in the Village and install a proper surface? If I will pay for the concrete or brick surface in front of my property (35-39 South Main St.), could I please do it next week? And, if others want to do the work in front of their properties, can they do it?

If you think I am right, please support me and call your selectmen and ask them to allow me to try to do what is right for Cohasset. At least try. It can be done. Please feel free to call me if you want to help in this effort. Thank you,

'Something is wrong' with property taxes

COMMENTARY

ANSON WHEALLER

I have lived in Cohasset for a little over 20 years; not as long as some, a little longer than others, and certainly long enough to have learned something of how the taxation game is played here. Let me tell you what I have learned:

Each year we arrive at Town Meeting and are soon told to our dismay that there is Something Wrong, and it can only be fixed by a property tax increase. What may be wrong varies from year to year, but — believe me — the $olution is always the same: another override and higher taxes.

For many years I voted in favor of overrides, naively thinking that if we could just get back on an even keel with the current problem behind us, it would be a long time before another override would be necessary. Alas, that hasn't happened yet.

With all the hullabaloo about the override de jour, it's easy to mistake what's really wrong. Let me tell you what I think that is:

- When your annual property tax bill exceeds your annual mortgage payment, Something's Wrong.
- When your quarterly property tax bill approaches your annual state income tax, Something's Wrong.
- When your annual property tax bill exceeds your federal income tax, Something's Wrong.
- When your annual property tax bill even exceeds the sum of your state and federal income tax, Something's Wrong.
- And when our seniors are advised — even encouraged — to sell their homes a little piece at a time so that they can afford to stay in a town that they have worked hard all their lives to support and improve, Something's Terribly Wrong.

Property tax payments are due in our town on May 1. With the above history in mind, I plan to add a little something extra to mine every quarter from now on. I invite every taxpayer to join me in adding the word "Enough!" to the property tax check on the "Memo" line. This will be a reminder to every elected, appointed, and hired municipal official in Taxhasset that we expect them to double and then re-double their efforts to be good stewards of our hard-earned dollars before we give them another extra cent.

Overrides' effect on the school budget

COMMENTARY

DENISE WALSH

Please visit our web site at www.cohassetk12.org for more specific information or to view our budget video.

The following are the most frequently asked questions and answers regarding the school department budget for fiscal 07. Please visit our web site at www.cohassetk12.org for more specific information or to view our budget video.

(1) Q.: If neither override amount receives a majority of votes on May 6, 2006, what will be the impact on the school department budget for fiscal 07?

A.: If neither override amount receives a majority vote, the 3 percent increase prevails and $505,433 in cuts in the school department budget would be necessary to support increased fixed costs and contractual obligations.

(2) Q.: If $500,000 in cuts become necessary, will an increase in fees (athletics, bus fees, building use fees etc.) be considered to offset cuts?

A. Yes, since nearly 80 percent of the school department budget is salaries, anything that can be done to reduce staff cuts or layoffs, will be considered.

(3) Q.: What will the school department be able to accomplish with the passage of an override vote of $725,000 on May 6, 2006? Isn't a glass one-half full better than none at all?

A.: With the passage of a $725,000 override amount, the school department budget will receive a portion of that amount or an additional $530,000. This amount would enable the department to meet contractual obligations, increase fixed costs and out of district special education tuitions. However, with an additional $530,000 there will be NO new programs, NO additional high school electives, and NO new staff to reduce class size.

(4) Q.: How can I be assured that text books will be replaced as needed, additional electives will be offered at the high school, enrichment and athletic programs will continue to grow, layoffs will be avoided and contractual obligations and fixed costs will be met? (Refer to web site for specific budget details.)

A.: A fully funded school department budget that supports the district Strategic Plan is only possible with the passage of an override vote of $1.4 million for the town. If that override amount were to pass, the school department will be appropriated an additional $1.1 million.

(5) Q.: Why should I vote for both overrides if I want the larger one to pass?

A.: n a pyramid override, as the town has established, the highest override amount with a majority vote prevails.

(6) Q.: How are "offsets" (funding received beyond town appropriation), used to support the school department budget?

A.: Offsets are deducted from the school department budget as it is built. Anticipated tuition from kindergarten and preschool programs, Circuit Breaker Special Education reimbursement, Medicaid reimbursement, state and federal grants and athletic fees, all reduce the bottom line prior to certifying a town meeting budget request.

$1.495M override in our best interest

COMMENTARY

ROB SPOFFORD

Voting down this override doesn't eliminate the need for the services, educational materials and building upkeep that this override would fund — it simply defers funding those needs for another year.

For nearly a year now, as a member of the Board of Selectmen and a taxpayer, I have asked myself the same question I suspect we all are asking when considering Cohasset's town budget: Is it in the best interest of ALL town residents to seek and support a Prop. 2-1/2 override this year?

The unequivocal answer for me is YES, we must support an override and at the $1.495 million level.

As a fiscal conservative, I did not come to this decision easily. Personally, professionally and as an elected official I believe in careful, deliberate and prudent spending. The decision to seek an increase in taxes must be taken in the context of not only the potential burden to the taxpayers but the impact such a tax increase would have on the common good for everyone. It is in that light, after asking many difficult and probing questions of our town and school administrators throughout the budget process that I came to the conclusion that we must fully fund our town and schools in fiscal 2007, funding which requires an override. The goods and services funded by the $1.495 million override are not frills but rather basic essentials: textbooks, class offerings; properly funding essential town services and maintenance of our town's public buildings. Without this override, we will continue a negative trend of systemic failure and dismantling of services that will be felt for years.

Voting down this override doesn't eliminate the need for the services, educational materials and building upkeep that this override would fund — it simply defers funding those needs for another year. For our buildings, that means another year of unaddressed maintenance; for students, such "deferred maintenance" is far worse, as grade-level educational opportunities are lost forever when a student misses out in their current grade and moves forward with a diminished educational experience.

One need look no further than our current debt service to see the effects of past deferred maintenance in this community. Previous generations chose (and within their rights) not to fix our public buildings and sewers. Current taxpayers, left with choices of an even costlier nature, were asked to step up and make those hard choices and yes, add to the tax rate for the common good of all. With those votes came the obligation to maintain and protect these past investments, rather than retrace past steps allowing problems to fester and become much bigger issues in the future.

The town's situation is a direct reflection of the cuts in local and state aid, not mismanagement or greedy spendthrift administrators. I challenge anyone to provide specific ideas and areas where they can find true fat in these budgets. Opponents of this, and past overrides have and continue to say the job can be done better but provide no constructive specifics, without which such rational is just rhetoric designed to give someone a clear conscience when voting no.

This year, supporting this override supports the common good yet it should not be Cohasset's only response to cuts in state aid and raising costs. I remain committed to working with State and Federal officials to find solutions to the funding problems many small communities face. I will keep asking the hard questions about the budgets and will remain open to ideas and constructive suggestions of improvement. To do anything less would be to abdicate my responsibilities as an elected official — just as not supporting this override would be to abdicate my responsibilities this year.

I believe there is nothing more important than providing a quality education to our children and a level of town services that respects all resident. Collectively generations of Cohasset residents have built this community, collectively let us not dismantle the traditions and structures that have been entrusted to us in just one generation.

Look hard at the facts, remember the great education your children received, your children are receiving and the public services this town provides, and reach within yourself to keep Cohasset the way we have all come to appreciate.

Men know the real reason for road repair

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

It's a fact we all live with: no square inch of road surface is safe as long as men and jackhammers exist.

As I often tell the kids during my more lucid moments, there are two kinds of people in this world: men people and women people. Now, we all know men and women are different, but how many of us are actually trying to do something about it? I may have zero insight into what makes the female mind tick, but I'm privy to every thought percolating through a man's brain, and I feel obligated to shed light on both of these thoughts as a public service to women. Today's lesson is, Why Men Like To Dig Up Roads.

It's a fact we all live with: no square inch of road surface is safe as long as men and jackhammers exist. I imagine it drives women crazy not to know why this is. "What are they looking for under there?" they must wonder. "And if it's so important, why did they pave a road over it not three months ago?" These are perfectly reasonable questions, and for over a century men have conjured up what sound like reasonable explanations, usually along the lines of "pipe repair," "telecommunications upgrades," "sinkhole eradication" or some such rubbish. Well, you'll be happy to know that the truth makes a lot more sense: men dig up roads on the off chance they might find beer under there.

The whole thing started back in 1855, when Dr. John Gorrie built the first working refrigerator utilizing a compression system based on Faraday's experiments, and immediately stocked it with beer. No more than 10 minutes after the last bottle had settled on the shelf, an unforeseen problem arose in the form of Dr. Gorrie's visiting brother-in-law, Hughie.

"What's that steaming contraption?" Hughie asked.

"The couch?"

"No, that thing there."

"Oh that! Ha ha. Uh, that's nothing," said Gorrie. "Just another boring experiment I'm doing with liquefied ammonium vapours. Pay it no mind."

"It looks like that beer chiller I saw in my fever dream."

"Don't be silly. This prototype has no room for beer. The lettuce crisper alone is huge. But I have an 1857 model on the drawing board that looks very promising. Yes, yes. It's right over there."

Dr. Gorrie then struck his brother-in-law on the head with a cannon ball. Having put Hughie off the scent for the moment, Gorrie knew he needed to hide his beer in a cool, dry, inaccessible place while he quietly invented a second refrigerator for the basement. That night he buried his beer under a dirt road the town planned to pave with a newfangled mixture of gravel and tar the following afternoon. He calculated that under this insulating blanket of asphalt his beer would be perfectly preserved for 90 days. That autumn, Gorrie and a small crew of trusted laborers dug up the stash on the pretext of laying a trans-Atlantic cable. The new road was utterly destroyed in the process, but was quickly patched with hog's manure and phlegm – the same materials used today – and no one was the wiser. Meanwhile, the beer was full-bodied yet less filling, with just a hint of oak. A smashing success.

The practice caught on. Dr. Gorrie refused to let his buddies store their beer in his refrigerator ("It's one of only three in the world," he whined), so under all the soon-to-be-paved streets it went. Among men the phrase, "There's brews under them thar rues" spread like a prairie wildfire, and soon every stretch of new road was being claimed with painted lines, arrows and numbers identifying the prospector, along with recognizable terms like "water," "gas" and "time capsule" to give the whole ruse an air of legitimacy.

Flash forward to 2004, the last year for which numbers are available. Only about 23 percent of the nation's beer reserve is stored in insecure locations such as RVs and college dormitories. The rest is hidden in the coolest, driest places known to men. And under Main Street USA it will stay, for three to six months on average.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, on a road that consists of 47,000 keg-size patches. He is currently investigating possible links between man's stupidity and the fact that every airport on earth is perpetually under construction.

POLITICAL NOTES

Political forum welcomes Lincoln Bloomfield – The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will host a session of the Cohasset Political Forum on Saturday, May 6, 9:30 a.m., at Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The dynamics of the relationship between Islam and the West will be discussed. The committee will welcome professor Lincoln P. Bloomfield of Cohasset as the featured speaker. Bloomfield is an author and lecturer. He served as assistant Secretary of State and in the White House as director of global issues in the National Security Council. A round table discussion will follow Bloomfield's remarks. Admission is free and everyone is invited. Bring morning coffee and join the committee for some interesting conversation. For more information, visit the Web site at www.cohasset-dems.org or call chairwoman Agnes McCann at 383-0222.

Clean the garage for a good cause – As the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee prepares for its annual yard sale to benefit the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship Fund, a call goes out to all of Cohasset for the donation of salable items for this worthy cause. The Town Committee has awarded this scholarship, honoring Joseph F. Walsh III, to graduating Cohasset seniors since 1978. The yard sale will take place on Saturday, May 13, and all of the proceeds go to the scholarship. Committee chairwoman Agnes McCann said, "While we sponsor many political fundraising events during the year, every dollar spent at the Scholarship Yard Sale goes directly into the scholarship fund. This is a non-political event, and we have been very fortunate over the years to have the support of the entire community." Clean out the garage, check the basement, look in the attic and call 383-2490 or 383-9114 for delivery or pick-up information.

For more information about applying for the scholarship, graduating seniors and their families should contact the Guidance Department at the high school or call Agnes McCann at 383-0222.

Dance team for Celtics?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Perhaps they should try winning? The last time a championship Celtics banner went up in the Garden it was 1986.

I see where the Boston Celtics, which once employed the skills of Bill Russell, Larry Bird and Bob Cousy to fill the seats in Boston Garden, are thinking of adding a dance team to their repertory to draw more fans to the Fleet Center or whatever they're calling it these days.

(Editor's note – It's the TDNorth Garden, or it was Tuesday afternoon, anyway.)

If the dancers resemble the one who was depicted on page five of the Herald the other day and she wears the same outfit, then I may renew my season's tickets after all these years — which I suppose is the object of it all.

"You're just adding to the entertainment," the Herald quoted Marty Joyce, the holder of four season's tickets, as saying. "I think anything you can do to enhance the experience of going to a game is a good thing."

Perhaps they should try winning? The last time a championship Celtics banner went up in the Garden it was 1986. Right now just making the playoffs could be called enhancing the fan experience.

The Celts, I am told, are the last team in the NBA to add a dance team to what promoters call "their entertainment package." Would you believe it, there was a time when the basketball game was the whole package, except possibly for John Kiley, the Garden organist?

Back in the '70s, as I recall, the Celtics had three girls, dressed in fetching green uniforms, who used to help out with team promotions, both in and out of the Garden. But they didn't last more than a couple of years.

One night, when they were on the court involved in some promotion with members of the team, one of the trio was overheard saying to another, "Look at the wives. They're bull——!" Like I said, they didn't last long.

The Bruins are also contemplating a move that would enhance the game experience of the fans — a few of them, at least. Charley Jacobs, Jeremy's boy, the new hockey tsar in these parts, is already thinking of modernizing the Garden, which is only 10 or 12 years old.

The new addition would be something called "a supersuite," which I assume is a step up from the current suites where well-heeled fans can watch the game live on the ice or on television while they're being served by a uniformed waiter at a cost of not much more than a gallon of gas.

What can they do to a suite to make it a supersuite? Add a kitchen and a French chef? Add a bar and a personal bartender? Add a bedroom where you can sleep if you have spent too much time with your personal barkeep?

But don't get too excited over the supersuites. The only ones who can afford them are the players.

Great schools, services answer the question of 'Why Cohasset?'

COMMENTARY

LUCIA FLIBOTTE

The override vote is approaching and as the signs throughout our town illustrate, lines have been drawn between the Yes, Yes and the Vote No crowd. As I sat down to contemplate my letter to the editor, I came up with a number of different topics to write about but came to the conclusion that at this point in the game I thought brevity was the best approach. For the record, I am in favor of the $1.4 override and just to cover my basis with some of you, that stands for $1.495 MILLION. It's a big number but guess what, we have some serious issues to address at the schools and with our town services. I have come to this conclusion based on the numerous budget meetings I attended, my involvement with the Middle High School teachers, students and administration, and discussions with a number of town officials. But I do not want to rehash all of the arguments put forth to date, rather I would like to pose a simple question to all of us as we contemplate the future of our town and that question is – Why Cohasset?

For those of you who have recently moved here, you paid a premium to move into Cohasset. We have some of the most expensive real estate on the South Shore, not all of it is on the "Gold Coast". My guess is that when you were working with a realtor, you instructed him/her to limit your choices to the towns with a high quality school system. For those of us who have lived here for a longer while, we have certainly enjoyed one of the highest rates of appreciation on our houses over the past decade. It is true that our taxes have also increased over this same period but in return we have new schools, a new library, a new public works building, a renovated police/fire station and a new sewer system throughout most of the town. As a community, we have successfully undertaken all of these capital projects in a very short time span. Our taxes are not all due to our schools.

My guess is that when you were working with a realtor, you instructed him/her to limit your choices to the towns with a high quality school system.

But the question still remains, why do people pay some of the highest prices for a home and why do the rest of us pay the taxes that we pay to live in Cohasset? Local Realtor websites describe Cohasset as a quintessential small New England town with a town common so picturesque that it was featured in a number of Hollywood movies. They also cite our beautiful coastline, and of course our highly rated school system.

Well I agree with all of these descriptions but let us not lose site of reality and reality is we have an Avalon project on the horizon and the Greenbush line that both could prove disruptive to our small town flavor. I also recognize the beauty of our coastline but I am reminded that this beauty belies some serious issues including numerous beach closing last summer and yellow flags flying at the harbor. For those of you unfamiliar with the yellow flag at the harbor, it signals or warns us that the harbor water is unsafe for swimming. It still looks beautiful, but just don't use it. And finally our schools, we have three school buildings that we can all be proud of and up until last year, a well documented history of approving overrides for these schools. But there are serious concerns and issues that could affect the quality of the education our children will be receiving in the coming years.

The answer to Why Cohasset is our town is a great place to live and raise a family. We are faced with some serious financial concerns. There are alternatives out there and we have to start looking for the ones that do not include the dismantling of our schools. We also need to deliver higher levels of service to our elderly. We need to insure our public safety services are not compromised. All of this takes money. We need to spend less time focusing on the cell phone bills of the schools and more time on finding alternative or expanded revenue sources. We also need to band together as a community and petition our state and federal officials to reverse the decline instate and local aid. We need to demand stronger local aid support from these officials. Lets not pretend the cause and solution sits with dismantling our schools. The last thing we want to see as a community is for our schools get to the point where we need to place yellow warning flags in from of our school buildings. We need the $1.4 override for the schools, for the town and for our future.

School class sizes up, school fees are soaring

COMMENTARY

JIM PORTER

I have lived in Cohasset for almost 40 years, am a graduate of Cohasset High School, Class of '78, and have three children in the Cohasset schools. My children and I have enjoyed the benefit of being taught by Cohasset's superb teaching staff, but the budget cuts of the past few years have impeded even the most seasoned teacher's ability to teach. Necessities such as updated materials, up to date curriculum and workable class sizes have become a thing of the past and only an override can restore them.

In the 28 years since I graduated from high school, the state and federal governments, through Ed Reform, Special Education and No Child Left Behind legislation, have mandated how school systems will be run and yet have not provided adequate funding to that end. As a result, there are areas of education that are left untended until more money is available. For example, the budget to purchase new books for the Osgood and Deer Hill libraries is zero and has been zero for at least 7 years. At the high school, the average copyright date for library books is 1979. Music and health also have been eroded. At the Middle High School, chorus is taught only half the year and a teacher from Deer Hill shares teaching duties. At the elementary schools, students receive only three units of health education a year when they used to receive it once a week.

As less and less money becomes available and more and more is mandated by the government, the untended areas of education have extended beyond the specialist classes to the very core of academics. At the high school, we do not have enough courses for our students to take. This year, 35 students are in study hall because there are no courses available to them after completing their academic requirements. While study halls were a matter of course when I was in high school, the Department of Education now forbids them. Not only do we not have enough courses, we also lack courses that cover curriculum now tested on MCAS. Engineering is not taught in Cohasset, but the class of 2010 will be required to pass a Science/Technology/Engineering portion of the MCAS in order to graduate.

In many courses we do have, the class sizes are no longer manageable. In second grade, there are some classes with 27 students. When I was a student here, I may have had class sizes of 27, but the class was composed of students of similar abilities. Such grouping is now against the law at the elementary levels. Students are grouped heterogeneously and teachers must be able to teach to the entire spectrum of ability from the gifted to the learning disabled. In a class of 27 students, such a task is nearly impossible. At the high school, there are 8 academic courses and 7 physical education courses with class sizes over 30. In some instances, these increased class sizes result in students being denied classes. My sophomore son was bumped from an oversubscribed elective he had taken before and assigned to a gym class of 75 kids! That same son, although recommended for an Honors Chemistry course, was not allowed to take it because there was not enough room for him and was assigned to a College Prep level course instead.

It has been suggested that if the parents of Cohasset Public School students desire more for their children, then they alone should pay for the services their children receive. First and foremost, please be reminded that we are talking about public education and the parents do pay for those services in the form of a property tax. My parents paid it, my wife and I paid it for the first 10 years that we lived in Cohasset and did not have children in the schools, we have paid it for the second ten years that we have lived here and have had children in the schools, and we will continue to pay it when we no longer have children in the schools. We will pay it not only because it is the way in which our government has structured the cost of education, but also because it is our public duty to support public education.

Secondly, parents pay a number of user fees to the schools already. There is a $150 per student, per sport athletic user fee. My sophomore plays two sports and I pay $300 a year for him to do that. I also pay for his uniform. For lacrosse this year, the cost of that uniform was $60. In addition, the Lacrosse Boosters paid for the team helmets. Of course, the Boosters paid for them with my donation and the donation of other parents. Next year, my second son will also be playing at least two sports and my user fees will be $600. But, it is not just sports for which the parents pay fees. All sixth-grade parents must pay for their children to attend Camp Bournedale. All ninth grade parents must purchase a $100 graphing calculator. Parents of students taking Advanced Placement courses must purchase the textbooks. None of these fees were part of my education in Cohasset. Lastly, there are not enough user fees that could be inflicted upon the parents that would cover the need that the schools now face.

Please support the override for $1.4 million and allow the children of Cohasset the same opportunities afforded to me in the Cohasset schools. Although much has changed in the 28 years since I attended Cohasset High School, the value of an excellent education remains constant.

Sign thieves should be brought to justice

TO THE EDITOR:

Wednesday morning, while driving back from Scituate on Rte.3A, I noted that two "NO" override signs that had I had placed on private property, with the owners' permission, were missing.

I replaced the signs and filed an official complaint with the Cohasset Police. I am aware of five other "NO" signs stolen and also reported.

I have also observed many, many pro-override signs placed on public property such as lawn strips on between the streets and sidewalks; even at least one sign nailed to a telephone pole. It used to be that the Tree & Park Dept and/or Highway Dept. confiscated illegally positioned signs. The violator would have to retrieve the sign and adhere to Town By-Laws.

Stealing, trashing, defacing and otherwise abusing a property owner's rights is a felony. I hope some of these felons are apprehended and brought to court.

Dry-eyed support for a wind turbine

TO THE EDITOR:

Should Cohasset have a wind turbine? Yes, we should, especially if mostly funded by the government. Sure, it's our tax money, but better we should get some of it before other towns have got it all.

Anything that reduces our reliance on foreign oil should be encouraged. Anything that reduces the use of natural gas for electricity generation should be considered, because the electric utilities and homeowners increasingly are competing for ever-more costly natural gas as low cost sources become depleted. Anything that reduces the atmospheric pollution from burning fossil fuels (especially coal) should be considered.

Wind, solar, biomass and other renewables, even in aggregate, can't possibly eliminate our dangerous dependence on foreign oil, or the nation's massive reliance on coal for electricity generation. So renewables aren't a substitute for nuclear energy, which is essential to reducing oil imports, as well as to reducing the atmospheric pollution from burning fossil fuels.

Although not as picturesque as the old Dutch grain-grinding windmills, the wonderfully engineered modern wind turbines are an interesting and not unattractive addition to the landscape. Of course their output is inconstant but that is of little consequence as long as their output is miniscule compared to the total system generation. As long as their economics is not distorted by excessive subsidization, direct or indirect, there seems to be no significant downside.

No downside, as long as idealistic enthusiasm for renewables does not blind us to the necessity to face up to the larger issues and to the hard decisions that have to be made to meet our energy needs while reducing dependence on foreign oil and reducing pollution from fossil fuels.

Road race is a team effort

TO THE EDITOR:

On Sunday April 2, 2006 the 30th Cohasset Road Race by the Sea was one of the most successful in recent memory with over 977 runners registered for the race. The Cohasset Rotary Club would like to thank the citizens of Cohasset for their patience with the traffic disruptions during the race.

The weather for the 2nd annual Fran Coffey Memorial Walk was nearly perfect for the over 200 walkers who participated to help raise funds for two special charities in memory of long time Cohasset Road Race by the Sea supporter Francis Coffey.

We always receive many compliments from the out of town runners and walkers on how friendly and helpful people are, and how truly beautiful the town of Cohasset is.

Without the help and support of so many wonderful volunteers, town officials, local business sponsors and the residents of Cohasset, we would not be able to hold such a successful event, and raise funds for the many local and international charities Cohasset Rotary assists.

We appreciate the efforts of all those involved and salute you for helping Cohasset Rotary Club members in our efforts to uphold the Rotary motto of "Service Above Self".

Tax rate is already among highest

COMMENTARY

RICHARD BROOKS

Our fellow citizens, our seniors, indeed now Cohasset's middle class, need your help in order not to be forced out of Cohasset. Most responsible town officials are counting on your help to preserve our town and avoid a financial disaster. Let me elaborate:

1. Two of our most respected selectmen, including the chairman, who understand the adverse impact that a huge, record-smashing, "wish list" tax override will have on Cohasset and its residents for many years to come, do not support this override. It poses financial mismanagement.

Incredibly, this $1.5 million proposed override is 475 percent; yes 475 percent larger than the average override passed in Cohasset since 1989 — a 17-year period. It is 375 percent larger than the 2004 last override.

2. Cohasset's tax rate is already one of the highest in the State. Spending for town services, which even now are underutilized, is already one of the highest per resident in the state. Spending per student in our schools is already one of the highest in the state. Spending for interest on town departments is also currently one of the highest in the state per resident, as is the debt amount itself. Why are the "architects" of this irresponsible override so insensitive to the hardship they could bring to our 1500 seniors, indeed an override so large it now assaults our middle class residents? Is it because they just don't care-or "feel good" intentions absent financial common sense? They want YOU to pay THEIR wish list. Well, many of us are not buying it-nor paying for it.

3. Are funds requested by the huge $1.5 million override truly essential and needed? Absolutely not. Over 50 percent of that money is for "wish list' items, including the hiring of about 20 more employees. If passed, that huge override will absolutely require additional, large overrides for years to come. That's simple arithmetic. And, as usual, few if any of those new hires would be Cohasset residents.

4. If the override passes, the Cohasset tax rate will move well into the confiscatory category. The already large number of seniors' homes in Cohasset up for sale will increase, with middle class residents joining the exit as well-it could become a buyers market but with a lack of buyers. The already decreasing home market values will continue to decline-smart people will not longer buy in a town with confiscatory taxes, an out of touch, fiscally insensitive school committee and a town unwilling to put its financial affairs back in order.

5. MCAS test scores for Cohasset students are in a five-year downward trend. Past experience has shown that throwing money at this problem, much of which does not land in the classroom, will not reverse the trend, as money is not the underlying problem. The "benchmark" data clearly shows this truism.

6. It's now up to the responsible voters to demand good management practices and fiscal prudence for our town. Don't buy the "its for the kids" emotional propaganda. Any person with any financial awareness and experience, can clearly see that passage of a $1.5 million tax increase would be a financial disaster for the town, for its homeowners, for our large population of seniors and especially for our kids who will continue to lose ground as the real educational problem continues unaddressed. Any concern for the kids who may, with their family, be forced out of town?

All of the officials, seniors, long-term residents-who share the best interests of the entire town, as first priority-need your "NO" votes to insure a vocal minority do not take the town into the financial abyss that they have selfishly brought to our doorstep.

Please take 15 minutes on Saturday, May 6, to go to the polls and join the majority to cast your "NO" vote on this unnecessary, huge tax increase. We each have to live within our means, and Cohasset must do the same. Consider your important vote as an investment to help save the town and your home-with a dividend of saving yourself, over the next few years, about $1000, per minute for those 15 minutes, with an additional, critical dividend of preventing a string of similar, huge overrides for several years to come.

As a reminder, to vote "NO" on an override, it's important to physically vote "NO" in the "NO" box. If you leave an override question blank, that can be equivalent to a "yes" vote. Strange but true — so be careful and explicit.

HEALTH NOTES

Lawn care harbors ill health for water bodies

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

It's not surprising that the Board of Health has not written an article on lawn care recently. The reason is, of course, that there has been increasing activity on the part of many citizens, organizations and various committees which have undertaken several very fruitful initiatives relating to environmentally sound lawn care.

Turf management is not normally in the mainstream of health related issues. One reason the Board had an early interest is the relationship between turf management and clean, untainted groundwater. Good lawn management can appreciably improve the quality of groundwater resources and prevent much damage to nearby brooks, ponds and streams to which groundwater may travel. However, the Board is far more interested in the efficient and sanitary operation of the Town's wastewater processing systems, particularly homeowner's septic systems. We are happy to report that owing to the diligence of Joe Godzik, the Health Officer, and Tara Tradd the Health Inspector, the Town is making steady progress in updating and modernizing our on site wastewater processing systems all over Town.

...the water polluting our harbor comes from storm drains and outfalls from Cohasset and nearby towns.

We are happy, therefore, to relinquish the Standard of improving turf management to one of the several Town supported initiatives like the Greenspace program, characterized by an informational mailing sent to all homes this spring. If you would like a copy, call the Board of Health for one. In addition, the Water Resource Protection Committee has been particularly active and placed several columns in this and other publications which many in town read. Further, the Town's garden clubs have been extremely effective in promoting the appropriate use of fertilizers and turf management practices.

But, all of this is mainly preaching to the choir. There are about 200 aficionados belonging to garden clubs, and, perhaps an equal number of homeowners conscientious about use of appropriate lawn care and turf management. A weak wand to cope with, perhaps twice, perhaps four times that number of lawn cutters, chemical applicators, landscape specialists, mulch manicurists, etc. who descend on our town every day. And it is not these fellows intent to stint on the best, most effective (and expensive) lawn care materials available. Nor will they hold back by leaving grass long or decreasing frequency of cutting; also, most find a nice hidden location to place their cuttings so we can derive the most efficient transfer of dead grass nutrients into our ground and surface water runoff. As a result we have our harbors full of pollutants, and our other water bodies full of algae. Watch this June; will the algae bloom in Little Harbor and the Gulf is more and longer lasting than last year? You bet!

The BoH has blunted the sharp edge of its intent on lawn care, partly because of its rela-

Why I say 'no' to overrides

TO THE EDITOR:

Throughout this budget process I have had many questions. Some of them are:

- Why did our School Committee and Superintendent knowingly undercharge the new non-mandated K program and take $200,000 away from the classroom money this year? This tuition is set the same in the '07 budget and will either be taking away more money from the classroom next year because of a higher student population or if increased will decrease the amount of money the schools need in an override.
- Why are we paying $360 a day to transport just one student to Manchester-by-the Sea?
- Why did it take the Superintendent one year to change the high cost cell phone plan when it could have been done immediately through a phone call? The extra $10,000 savings could have been given to the classroom needs this year rather than the cell phone company
- This year we have 8 offsets (money coming out of the bottom line of the budget) identified. For '07 there are only 3 offsets identified — where are the others and how do they affect the bottom line of the '07 Budget?
- Why did none of this year's $205,000 Chap. 70 State Supplemental Educational Funding Grant go to desperately needed new textbooks, library books or programs for our children? It has been sitting in a Revolving Fund outside of the budget since it was received last fall.

These are just a few of the reasons why we should say "NO" to this override.

Need 'whole truth' about budgets

TO THE EDITOR:

I have lived in Cohasset since 1968. Many have accused me of being anti-education because I have always questioned the school budgets. To question a school budget does not mean that you are anti-education. It does mean that one doesn't think that the School Committee or the superintendent of schools is telling the taxpayers the whole truth.

At this year's Town Meeting I attempted to amend the school budget and my amendment was defeated. At that time my statements were interrupted by a person, who attempted to deny me my constitutional rights of free speech and the ability to question the Town's elected officials.

This is a legislative body that was in session and those in attendance have the right to speak and question. I asked the School Committee and the superintendent why we hadn't been told about the grant that they had received from the state for $205,000. All they said was that they had received a grant and it was more like $207,000.

After Town Meeting it was stated in the newspaper that the superintendent wanted to use the $207,000 to purchase an emergency generator for the Osgood School. We were asked at that meeting to approve a raise for the school staff. It was somewhat like pulling teeth to get a number, $238,000 first-year cost, out of the superintendent and then neither she nor the School Committee ever fully explained what was in the contract.

The Town Meeting in past years approved an ordinance that required all contracts to be presented to the Advisory Board 30 days before Town Meeting, I guess the School Committee is exempt from Town Ordinances. The School Committee failed to inform the electorate why they would not consider increasing the Pre-K costs to cover the full cost of the program. Estimates have been in this newspaper that say that the Town could gain another $250,000 per year.

It is time for the voters of Cohasset to say that they want their elected officials to tell us the whole truth about the budgets. It is time for the voters of Cohasset to demand accountability. It is time to say NO/NO to both override questions.

Independent view needed

TO THE EDITOR:

Regardless of where you stand on the override issue, Ralph Dormitzer certainly provided a well-researched and thorough analysis of the financial problems our community faces [at Town Meeting].

Tom Callahan, in his eloquent letter to the editor, provided a noble approach to dealing with them. I commend these gentlemen for there proactive reaction to our complex needs.

In my own thoughts I am often drawn to a statement proffered by Burt Pratt. When presented with a particularly perplexing problem, Burt responded, " In this situation I believe it would be valuable to get a man with a briefcase to come down from Boston to advise us".

Perhaps, after the override election and regardless of the outcome, as there will certainly be no winner, it is time to heed Burt's advice and budget for that "man with a briefcase" to take an independent review of our complex dilemma.

What has happened to Route 3A?

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Planning Board Members:

Lately I have been thinking a lot about Route 3A. I have been thinking about Route 3A mostly while I sit in traffic on it, trying to access it, or cross it. What had happened to 3A? Stories of 3A traffic are now just short of becoming legendary.

The highway we once knew has become a bumper to bumper channel of traffic through town. Traffic speed limit signs of 35 mph and 50 mph stand in mocking reminder of the roadway that now only exists is memory, or at 2 a.m. I don't think there is a need to list here the litany of traffic issues which have developed on 3A in the last 30 years. We are all living them.

The reason for this letter is to raise the issue of what will the future bring and how will it be managed. It seems to me that it is time for the town to address Mass Highway ASAP to being the lengthy design process that would result in a highway that is more highway and less parking lot. I am not sure what the time frame is for major redesign of a road of this caliber but I don't think I would be too far off suggesting 10-15 years.

A wait and see attitude may be pushed by state transportation authorities, anxious to see what impact the train will have. While Greenbush may take some vehicles off Route 3, they still exist on Route 3A to get to the stations. The planning and design and all the lengthy processes that would be required to accomplish a redesign will gobble the calendar. The longer it is put off the more choked 3A will become for the commuter and it will become a public safety issue for police, fire and ambulance responses. I believe action must begin and must begin at this level. The overall approach may become more regional as it moves forward because 3A is not just a Cohasset issue. All towns along 3A contribute to its volume.

What makes Cohasset Village special?

"It is no longer true that 'All Roads Lead to Rome!' The modern version is that all detours lead to Cohasset Village! Might as well shop there while your car is being repaired – we have a great bunch of shopkeepers!"
— Dick Brooks

"...the small-town feel and friendships with merchants and employees."
— Jack Buckley

"The people that work in the village of course! All of those merchants who make our days brighter with their pleasant smiles and charming stores."
— Kelli Calhoun

"Only thing that's special about the village is that it is the space between the delightful Common and the magnificent new Red Lion Inn. The eclectic collection of nondescript buildings isn't quaint, isn't clearly representative of any historic period, isn't impressive, and will look even less impressive with asphalt sidewalks, especially after they start to break down."
— Murray Campbell

"I am not sure this is the best time to ask that question. What I thought made the village special is presently being blasted open and ripped apart. The curves and slope of our seaside village that took billions of years to evolve are being demolished within seconds of a blasting horn, the rat-tat-tat of a jack hammer or the constant beeping of trucks backing up as they prepare to cart away the character and history of our village.

"Yet, if you can peer through the clouds of dust and dirt and noise for just a moment, you might see the special part of the village that still remains is the people, the atmosphere of being home, the sense of being a part of this community we call Cohasset. The church steeples stand sentinel over our picturesque common. The historic homes around the village stay in keeping with a time when five children were the norm in a three-bedroom house and the 'great room' was playing on the town common or someone's backyard.

"Even that crack in the sidewalk you might trip over today could have been the same one a grandfather tripped over as a kid. The shopkeepers are still faithful to the village, holding out against the odds and expanding malls and Internet. Friends, who haven't seen each other all winter, greet outside the bank with a hug, some smiles and a long chat. Children zip in and out on bikes, weaving the thread of our village together. Dogs slurp water from the pump outside the hardware store, just as one would imagine horses did some time ago. If you close your eyes, you might even imagine a Model T Ford with running boards parked on an angle next to your Ford Explorer of today.

"It is the aura of our village that draws one to our town. It is the magnet that pulls at some nostalgia, somewhere within even the most upwardly mobile settlers. Visitors come for the charm; children come back home to roost to give their children a piece of what they grew up with. So even though, right now, the village is a mess, the charm and warmth is only tarnished and hopefully will shine again soon."
— Barbara Canney

"Charm, intimacy, and a whiff of salt air..."
— The Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull

" Much of what I prize about our Village is its simplicity, its unpretentious acceptance of itself. What I fear is 'gentrification.'

"Don't get me wrong: I will welcome better sidewalks; I love not to see telephone poles and droopy wires; I admire storefronts painted with imagination and style, their front steps swept, doorknobs shining. I love the flowery containers that bloom in the summer, each one different, NOT COORDINATED!

"And that's the point:

"WHAT I FEAR IS A UNIFORM LOOK OF 'Upscale'. We mustn't go that route! Cohasset Village is a free spirit. Clean it up, make it as prosperous as it can be, but please, PLEASE - no 'Nantucket Cute'!

"I loved the Village in 1936, I love it in 2006. Stroke it but don't change it too much. This rare, unassuming little Center is one of the reasons we live in Cohasset."
— Nancy Garrison

"Certainly our picturesque common, the melodious Carillon concerts, but more importantly, our great residents you can meet on any given jaunt about town."
— Steve Langham

"The Village is special because slowly it grows to provide services beyond gas and coffee. Thank you merchants. Good luck and keep up the good work.

"More importantly, we have the Cohasset Hardware and Liquors and Goodale Insurance welcoming and promoting diversity. Bless us all!"
— Allison Moskow

"I love Cohasset Village mostly because of the small-town feeling where it is never over crowded and you almost always bump into a friend or neighbor. I also like that most of the shops are 'mom & pop' type owned by individuals and are not franchises."
— Millie Oswald

"Cohasset Village is special because it truly is a village, the sort of place to which you and your young children can ride your bikes safely on an early summer evening for chocolate eclairs at French Memories."
— Andrew Quigley

"I truly believe God sent me to Cohasset Village some 35 years ago to continue the charmed life he ordained for me. Hallelujah! As a stranger to Cohasset I moved into my first apartment at Main Street and Sohier and have lived in the Village ever since and established my design business on Depot Court. It has been an exhilarating experience both living and working in what is a 'little jewel' within a great little town unlike anywhere else in this great country.

"It is a bit of the 'old world' of America that I remember. Taking a walk around the town and the harbor anytime you feel like it to enjoy the peace and quiet is almost unknown today anyplace else. The natural beauty is unrivalled. The friendships made because of being part of the village community are a real treasure. Living and working in the Village all these years has certainly made me feel I have lived a charmed life. I would like to grow old here in the Village. I love it and why not, where else can you get a fresh French muffin in the morning, a seaside lunch, a bottle of fine wine, and have dinner at one of several great restaurants all in walking distance? Perhaps in some grand resort, but here in the village it's all here for us everyday of the year. It's looking better all the time with the restoration of the historic Wilson house, new sidewalks, and trees, new shops, and all the revitalization plans finally being put into operation. There are great times ahead for the Village for all of us lucky enough to call Cohasset our home."

'Filled with the history of the town'

"I remember the Central Market, the A&P store and the First National Store, the buildings remain, but the uses differ."
— Wayne Sawchuk

"Cohasset Village is special because of its location nestled between our beautiful Common, with its Churches and colonial homes and our picturesque Harbor, filled with the history of our town and our ancestors.

"Our Village has undergone tremendous change over the centuries, changing from a bustling commerce center transporting goods to and from the train station to the harbor and catering to the wishes of the wealthy summer residents as well as providing everything for the year 'round residents as well.

"I remember the Central Market, the A&P store and the First National Store, the buildings remain, but the uses differ.

"We had a Ford and Buick dealership (Citgo Station and Art Center locations) as well as two gas stations, a coal yard, lumberyard, breakfast diner (former A&P now real estate office), two drug stores — Ralph's on the corner and Delory Drug next to Tedeschi's (the former First National).

"Before all this we had a seven-story building across from the Post Office belonging to the Hanlon's theatrical company, and three huge barns and horse stables that provided the engines of the past, to pull the fire engines, school 'barges', wagons and carriages of the day.

"The 1704 Red Lion Inn is still here — over 300 years old, and extensively renovated in 1999-2000 — although keeping many of its historic features.

"Today, we continue to change with the times, and should embrace new uses, like mixed business and residential, to provide the investment to keep this precious asset in good condition for our present and future generations. Let's not abandon our Village — support our local merchants and residents."
—Wayne Sawchuk

Cohasset residents are clamoring to know how she did it. Patricia reports the "secret" is the accountability, coaching and comprehensive system provided by her Fitness Together personal trainer. "At age 46, I have never felt better," says Sheerin. "The focused, personalized program designed specifically for me by my FT trainer has really been the answer to achieving my weight loss, fitness and appearance goals."

Following this personalized program, Patricia reports not only losing 14.9 lbs of fat in 9 weeks (reducing her body-fat by 10.5%), but also increasing her strength without adding any bulky muscle – in fact she's leaner and tighter than ever before, dropping two full dress sizes. Her energy and stamina have doubled and she is getting more attention and "looks" than she has in years – dramatically boosting her self image and self confidence.

When pressed for specific details on Patricia's "secret," she revealed there is an official guide available with powerful tips and strategies for men and women interested in achieving the level of success she has - just in time for the summer and bathing suit season.

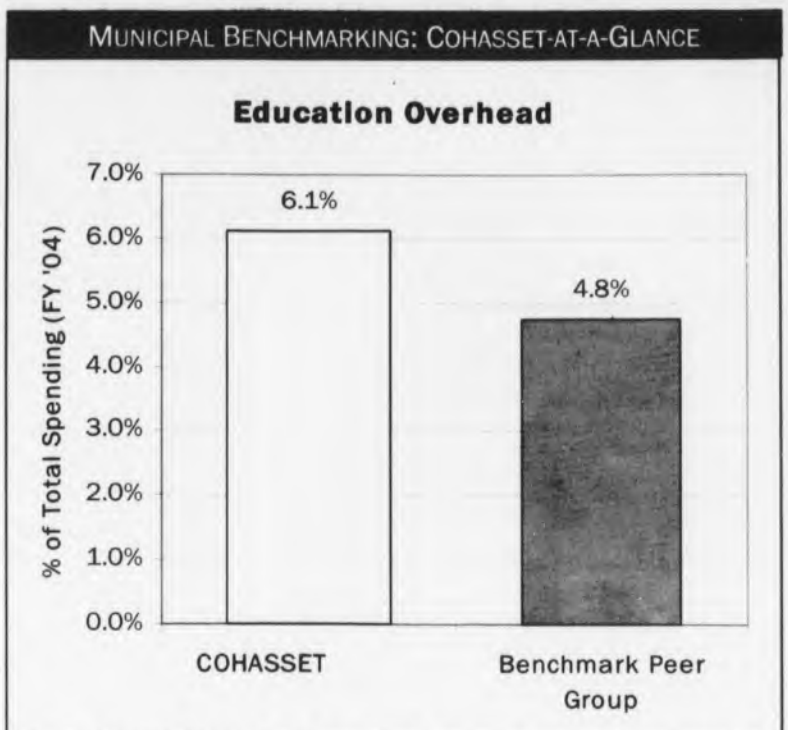
How does Cohasset measure up?



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts. Education Overhead includes district and school administration and supervisory costs.

This chart shows the percent of Cohasset's 2004 education spending that went to cover administrative and supervisory costs. The chart also provides the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By looking at administrative and supervisory costs, one can get a sense for the overhead used to operate the school district as compared to other similar communities.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

HEALTH NOTES

tionship to the stormwater problem with which the Town is afflicted. The reason for the harbor pollution is not the wastewater treatment plant which discharges water from its pipes of near drinking quality. (but, please don't experiment by drinking it, because sometimes - very infrequently- they make a mistake) No, the water polluting our harbor comes from storm drains and outfalls from Cohasset and nearby towns which are neither cleaned sufficiently often nor maintained sufficiently well nor modernized as they should be. This is water fertilized by the unnecessary nutrients from lawn chemicals collecting in the storm drain system until it can grow bacteria of various types, which is then dispensed into our harbors and estuaries at low tide.

To help alleviate the problem of contaminated stormwater, the Board has worked diligently on a Townwide stormwater management plan (in its third year) and has made considerable progress. This spring the Board of Health with the help of the Center for Student Coastal Research, will be conducting an assessment and analysis of various locations in town from which the majority of stormwater from the center of town comes, to enter the upper reaches of Cohasset Cove. This activity, using a grant sponsored by the Coastal Zone Management, will sample water during heavy rain events in May. At long last, we will have some real information about what and how pollution is entering our upper harbor rather than piecemeal anecdotes.

Who knows, maybe all the stuff lawns are dumping into the harbor may be good for the water. But don't count on it.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Thanks for all the support

TO THE EDITOR:

I just wanted to send out a quick thank you to the many residents, businesses and very special friends who have all supported our fundraising efforts to benefit the Barr Foundation for Innovative Cancer Research at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Together, we've generated over $10,600 in 2006 donations for this cause, and close to $30,000 in less than three years. That's a great effort by a lot of people, and I wanted to be sure those who have helped know they are truly appreciated.

If you'd like to see the Honor Roll listing donors and their messages, just go to www.dfmarathon.kintera.org, select "support a runner," and enter my name. And, if you haven't already, please do make a donation to this urgent effort as there is so much more work to be done. If you prefer, you may send me your donation made out to DFMC, and I will forward it to the right people and have you added to the scrolling listing.

But again, thanks for all the support, given in so many ways.

Lincoln Lane, Beechwood and other railroad crossings

looking pretty good. While construction of the grade crossing took three weeks longer than expected last October, a substantial amount of the project is complete. "The bungalow is there," said Brennan of the small building that will house the electronics for the gates at the crossing. He added there is still some drainage work to be done at the crossing as it seems to have been set too high, and is resulting in excess water pooling up — which froze during the winter months. "They will grind the street down to correct it," Brennan said.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer asked Brennan whether the MBTA will be removing the concrete from the middle of the median strip at the Beechwood Street crossing. The town had opted to have a plantable median strip installed and residents volunteered to adopt the island and keep it beautiful with flowers and greenery throughout the year. "They owe us the removal of concrete," said Dormitzer. Brennan said the MBTA is aware of the problem with the medians and will likely remove their middles and grind down the street for drainage purposes at the same time.

Castle Road and Sestito Lane will also soon be under construction. Both are unique because they will have private train crossings. There will be a signal bungalow between the two crossings which will govern both crossings. There are wetlands involved with both crossings, which requires work to begin after May 1, which allows time for wetland critters to spawn and migrate.

Blasting and rock removal is currently taking place at Spring and Pond Streets. The work will continue with minor traffic interruptions, and once Pleasant Street is reopened, the intersection will be closed to finish out the project. "We cannot have consecutive crossings closed," said Brennan.

Utility work and the track are done at Pleasant Street, which will be the only four-quad gate crossing in town. Road work is underway on both sides of the crossing, and it is expected the road will be open by May 8. Smith Place will probably close shortly after, and will not be reopened. "Smith Place will close forever once drainage work starts," said Brennan.

In conjunction with the Pleasant Street crossing, Brennan said there are still issues with the Town Parking lot. "They owe us 20 parking spots," said Brennan, as the MBTA's planned parking spaces are smaller than the dimensions for parking spaces in the town's bylaws, and the town wants the lot's spaces to conform to its bylaws. "They don't have any answers," said Brennan of the MBTA, adding one of the few solutions would be to blast the ledge behind the Teen Garage, located next to the Red Lion Inn, and make more parking. However, he said the town has been given an estimate of $180,000 to remove the ledge, and the MBTA has said it will not spend any more money on this aspect of the project. "We need to fish or cut bait. They're not interested in working with us," said Brennan.

When work begins on the parking lot, Brennan said only one-third will be closed at a time. "At no time will there be less than two-thirds of the lot available," he said. He added the MBTA will not be able to start much by way of construction in the lot before June. He said by then, parking will be allowed back on the street which will help mitigate the situation.

Dormitzer asked whether the MBTA had any plans to keep a portion of the old railroad turntable uncovered permanently as a historical feature. Brennan said although that was discussed, the town has been told it is beyond the scope of the project.

Sohier Street is currently open, but that opening is only temporary. As a courtesy to the South Shore Music Circus, the road will remain open until the end of its season. In late September, the road will close again for the final road widening and utility pole relocation, and will then be complete.

Work on Rocky Lane is going well. Brennan said the bridge deck is on and the structural work continues. This is the only bridge in town, which makes it a special project. He said it is anticipated to be complete by August.

Drainage for King Street is just about complete. Brennan said while work had been going along quickly for the street, workers were relocated to Sohier Street due to the need to open it before the Music Circus season. King Street work will resume soon, and road closures will be minimal. Traffic will not be completely impeded.

North Main Street (near Woodside Cemetery) closed this week upon the reopening of Hull Street. The detour has reversed and access to the town is now via Hull Street to Forest Ave, Lower King Street, or Sohier Street.

"North Main Street looks like a two-month closure," said Brennan. He said the crossing is one of the longer crossings in town, and stretches from about 150 to 180 feet. "I say two months, but give it three," he said. He said while that area of town may have looked wet recently, there are drainage plans for the area which should help improve the situation.

For more information on Greenbush construction, please contact Tom Gruber, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Affairs, or Mark Brennan, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Engineering, at (781) 383-3094. Gruber can be reached via e-mail at cgbaffairs@townofcohasset.org, and Brennan can be reached via e-mail at cgbengineering@townofcohasset.org.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Economic impact of teachers' contract

At Monday's Board of Selectmen's meeting, Selectman Gary Vanderweil suggested Director of Finance Michael Buckley develop an economic impact study regarding the new stipulations of the teachers' contract, which was settled the last week of March. He said the town usually presents an overall summary of benefits and costs when new contracts are negotiated, such as with the fire and police departments, and said it would be interesting to have the same kind of information available for the teachers' contract. "It would be interesting for me to see what the package is," he said, adding it would be good if the board could have the rundown before the override vote is taken May 6.

Tax revenue from parking changes

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said now that the town has agreed to lessen parking space requirements for businesses on Rte. 3A, he would imagine the property automatically becomes more valuable. He said with less parking, the buildings can be expanded, and that would lead to the town's being able to increase taxes for the buildings. Vanderweil asked Town Manager Bill Griffin to speak to the assessors to determine how soon the buildings can be assessed with their new value, and how soon the additional revenue could be added to the towns coffers. "When can we feel the economic benefit?" he asked.

Marathon runners share their stories

Last week, the Mariner asked Cohasset residents to share their stories from last Monday's 110th Boston Marathon.

Below are the testimonials of two locals and their experiences during the 26.2-mile run. The first is from Laura Vigneau:

I have the dubious distinction of being the slowest Cohasset finisher, primarily because I was under-trained and had injured my hip during my final 20-mile run three weeks before the marathon.

However, I really wanted to finish this race because I was running for Dana Farber, and my 5-year old daughter, Lydia, was my patient partner. Lydia went through over 25 months of treatment for leukemia at Dana Farber's Jimmy Fund, so I really wanted to do something to celebrate her end of treatment a few months ago.

Although my hip hurt pretty much from that first step in Hopkinton, it was all worth it when I got to the 25-mile mark and saw Lydia (and her younger sister Lieren) with great big smiles, homemade signs and big cheers!! Lydia did defer the chance to finish with me. I can't say I blame her, but just seeing her there reminded me that miracles can and do happen.

Lydia and I became part of Dana Farber's "Living Proof" team, proving that people can and do survive cancer, and support of research will help even more patients become survivors.

Vigneau says donations are still being collected through the Dana Farber Marathon web site: http://dfmarathon.kintera.org/faf/home/default.asp?ievent=113292. Anyone interested in making a donation can choose "Support a Runner" and use a runner's name to make a donation.

Ken Gritzan also shared his story:

Concerning the race; I mean, run (who am I racing against?), it was long. An obvious point, sure, but at least it wasn't hot and long, boring and long, unemotional and long.

The weather was almost too cool, but just right for us "back-of-the-packers." Around the 5-mile mark, I got a cheer from a fellow Falmouth runner - a really nice surprise there. Then there was Wellesley and all those girls; I couldn't stop for a hug, but at least 100 high fives got me moving strong again.

And as for Heartbreak Hill, who in their right mind calls four hills just one hill? Finally, I reached Boston and still, at such a late hour, people to cheer us on - outstanding!

After crossing the finish, I realized the Kenyans would have to do that another one-and-a-half times to equal my time on the road. I'd like to see them do that!

I then made the short walk to the car and soon home to my son. Through all those miles, I couldn't wait to see him.

Cohasset's Wendy Kennedy wrote in about her husband, Richard:

Since 1985, he has run every year, the only exception being 1989, owing to the fact our son T.J. was born the day of the race.

Of special note is the fact that he manages to squeeze in his training runs between his work as co-owner of Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy, his

With his team holding a 6-2 record and coming off a strong win over Holliston on Wednesday, Cohasset High boys lacrosse coach Stew Curran has little to complain about, with one exception.

The Skippers' frequent penalties have, at times, gotten them in some hot water.

At no point was that more evident than Saturday's 7-5 loss to Dover-Sherborn. In that game - a rematch of last year's Division 3 state semifinal, won by Cohasset - the Skippers committed nine-and-a-half minutes worth of penalties. D-S took full advantage, scoring three goals with the man-up advantage.

"We need to be a little more conscious of positioning and moving our feet, rather than just playing with our sticks," Curran said. "We tend to press the ball-carrier more than most teams, which has its advantages and disadvantages. There are very few teams that attack down the middle against us, but, conversely, we get a lot of penalties because of that style of defense."

Curran said his players realize this is an area for improvement, and have been working hard lately toward correcting it.

Penalties were an issue Wednesday night in Holliston, but the Skippers were able to overcome that in an overall impressive 14-9 win over a good Division 2 squad. Cohasset was on the short end of a 4-2 score after one period, but dominated the second, scoring eight of that period's nine goals to take a 10-5 lead into the halftime break.

Senior Aidan Buick put an exclamation point on that second period with a highlight reel goal, described by Curran as a "25-yard laser" into the top corner with four seconds remaining. It was one of Buick's four goals on the day, to go with three assists.

Sophomore Mark Flibotte also had four scores, giving him 11 in the team's last three games. Playing perhaps his best game of the year was junior

A tale of two teams

CHS softball split against Hull, Carver

"Two different teams showed up yesterday and today."

With those words Wednesday night, Cohasset High softball coach Deb Bostwick summed up her team's last two games, a 14-2 loss in Hull on Tuesday and a come-from-behind 8-7 win at home over Carver on Wednesday.

Against Carver, the Skippers scored five runs in the bottom of the seventh to win, capped by freshman Carly Zappolo's two-run walkoff double that completed a 3-for-4 day for the left fielder.

Fellow freshman Carly Salerno started the rally with an infield hit and went to second on a Crusaders passed ball. Junior pitcher Virginia Spofford followed with an RBI single to right, and the rally was underway.

Freshman catcher Kristin Monaco and junior right fielder Laura Campedelli both walked to load the bases. Senior captain Erin Liddell then hit a shot to center field for a double, scoring pinch runner Emily Nash and Monaco.

Junior center fielder Alida Tangherlini reached on an error to reload the bases, setting the stage for Zappolo's dramatic hit. All of this came with one out in the inning.

On the mound, Spofford rebounded from a tough outing the previous day, allowing eight hits and three walks for a complete game win. With junior ace Christina Pinkus out with a slight stress fracture on the thumb of her pitching hand, Spofford has assumed most of the pitching duties for Cohasset, and picked up her first win of the year against Carver. She also went 2-for-4 at the plate on Wednesday.

The junior's best pitching came in the top of the seventh to hold the score at 7-3. With runners on second and third and no one out, Spofford induced a pop-up to senior captain Katie James at second base for the first out. The next batter hit a line drive to Tangherlini for the second out,

The Coastal Stars Peewee C-1 team, winners of last weekend's B bracket championship.

Peewee C-1's are champions

The Coastal Stars Peewee C-1 team (20-6-4) beat Westwood 3-0 on Sunday to win the Peewee C, B-bracket Championship.

The Stars, as they have all year, did it with a total team effort. Kevin Quinn posted his eighth shutout of the season, making some great saves when needed, including one off the face mask at the end of the game.

Quinn got strong support from the defensive group of Willy Brown, Elizabeth Leong, Sean Kenneally and Nick Craig. This group has played extremely well, limiting the number of quality chances for opponents.

The first goal was scored off a rather lucky bounce when Jamie Faber's centering pass hit a skate and went in for the 1-0 lead. This was no surprise, though, as Faber is the teams leading scorer and continued to make things happen Sunday with line mates Brandon Terrio and Tucker Welch, who both provided the team with great back-checking along with their offensive play.

The second goal came off a nice hustle play when Brian Craig put in a Charlie Coffman rebound from a very tough angle that just squeezed inside the far post. The Line of Craig, Coffman and ultimate team player Sarah Evans kept the pressure on Westwood all afternoon.

Westwood was not going quietly though, getting outstanding goaltending and a persistent offensive attack from the entire team. Faber gave the Stars a little breathing room in the third period when he netted the third goal with help from line mates Joe Kiley and Evan Yeager.

Yeager set the tone early when he delivered a solid open ice check in the first minute of the game, while Kiley continued to provide the hustle and work ethic that makes him one of the team leaders.

As they have all season, the Stars C-1 team played as a team with great hustle, enthusiasm and sportsmanship, which makes them true champions. Congratulations.

and with the Crusaders' runner at second straying a little too far off the bag, Tangherlini gunned a throw in to James for the 8-4 double play to end the inning.

The Skippers scored their other three runs in the third to cut what had been a 5-0 Crusaders lead to a two-run deficit. Liddell started the inning with a double, as Tangherlini and Zappolo followed with RBI doubles. Sophomore third baseman Anna Haggerty knocked in Zappolo with a single for the third run.

It was a great way for the Skippers to bounce back from the loss to Hull. Bostwick said the game could be summed up by the fact that the Skippers committed six errors and left eight runners on base.

Campedelli was the bright spot of the day for Cohasset with a 2-for-3 performance at the plate. Haggerty and Salerno knocked in the Skippers' runs, both on run-scoring fielder's choices.

Cohasset took a 3-2 record (2-2 in the South Shore League) into yesterday's road game at Norwell. The girls will host Scituate Saturday at 1 p.m., followed by road games Tuesday at Sacred Heart and Wednesday at Mashpee, both at 4:30 p.m.

CHS girls tennis earns big win over Hingham

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High girls tennis team shook off a two-week layoff between matches to earn a 4-1 win in Hingham over the Harborwomen on Wednesday.

Seniors Chelsea Grossman, Susan Curry and sophomore Sally Meehan all won in singles, with Meg Anderson and Elizabeth Landon earning victory at first doubles.

Curry had one of her best matches of the season, winning 6-0, 6-2. Meehan got off a slow start and found herself down 2-3 in the first set, but came back to win 10 of the next 11 games to take home a 6-3, 6-1 win.

Anderson and Landon looked strong in a 6-4, 6-3 win over a tough Hingham first doubles team. The Cohasset duo built a big lead in the second set, and fought off a Hingham comeback to finish off the match.

"They did a great job closing it out," said Skippers head coach Gigi Meehan afterward. "Elizabeth served it out beautifully, and Meg was on fire at the net."

At first singles, Grossman was in a hole after losing the first set in a tiebreaker. Her opponent adjusted to the windy conditions by hitting a lot of slice shots low to the ground, and Meehan said that was the biggest factor in the first set.

"Chelsea didn't play the elements well at the beginning, and the other girl capitalized on that," said the coach. "Once Chelsea figured that out, she was fine."

Indeed she was, as Grossman dominated the next two sets, losing just one game in the process.

At second doubles, senior Emilie Shea and junior Charlotte Landon came back from a difficult 1-6 first set to play a much stronger second. Although Hingham still won that set, 6-4, Meehan was encouraged by what she saw from her second doubles tandem.

"They played a great second set. This was their first time playing together, and it was evident in that first set," she said. "But I think they will be a force if they continue to play together."

The two teams also continued what will be a season-long JV competition. Hingham has 40 girls in the program and Cohasset 34, and with both coaches employing a "no cut" philosophy, both have big enough numbers to have a separate JV team.

The JV competition, consisting entirely of doubles matches, will be decided by whichever team has won the most games at the end of the season. There also happens to be a little side wager involved, as the winning squad will be treated to pizza from the losing town's top pizza establishment.

Cohasset is currently ahead in the JV contest, and Meehan seemed confident on Wednesday that her girls will be having some free food from Crow Point Pizza in Hingham in the near future.

Meehan also expressed her gratitude toward Ann Thomae, a chemistry teacher at Cohasset High School, for volunteering to coach the JV team while she and assistant coach Kathy Prevett focus on the varsity.

"I love that we have 34 girls in the program and that they can get that level of instruction," Meehan said.

After yesterday's match against rival Norwell, the Skippers travel to Duxbury on Tuesday and Mashpee on Wednesday.

Cohasset's Chris Ofsthun fouls off this pitch before grounding into a fielder's choice that drove in a run during the fourth inning of Saturday's 14-13 loss to Archbishop Williams.

Not so fast

Things even out for the local 9 after a strong start

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Should the Cohasset High baseball team miss out on the state tournament by one game, they could very well look back with regret at Tuesday's game against Hull.

The Skippers were up 11-3 after three innings. Given the way they had pitched and played defense through most of their early schedule, they had to feel good about winning the game after jumping out to that lead.

But the Pirates chipped away for the next few innings. A couple runs here, a few runs there, and Cohasset wound up walking off the field with a 12-11 loss, the Skippers' third in as many games.

The Skippers got back on the winning track Wednesday with a 16-6 win over Avon. The visitors helped Cohasset's cause by walking 11 batters, including eight in the bottom of the fourth that led to six Skippers runs.

The beneficiary of that run support was sophomore pitcher Sam DeGiacomo. In his first start of the year on the mound, DeGiacomo gave up six runs on seven hits in the first two innings, but shut out Avon over the final five, allowing just three hits in that span.

Most importantly, DeGiacomo went the distance. With this being Cohasset's fourth game in six days - and another on the schedule yesterday against Norwell - the team needed innings out of DeGiacomo, and he was able to provide them.

"It was really important that we got a complete game effort today," said head coach Al Gallotta. "Once he got in a groove, he was really tough. His last five innings were outstanding."

Prior to the win over Avon, which improved Cohasset's record to 4-4, Cohasset had allowed 35 runs in its three-game losing streak against Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop Williams and Hull. Errors played a big part in that, as nine miscues combined against Spellman and Archies led to nine unearned runs in those games.

"If we can hit the way we've been hitting lately, and we can revert back to the way we were pitching, I'm still really confident."
Skippers coach Al Gallotta

Second baseman Fletcher Smalzel helps give the ump the out call before ending the fifth inning on a close play at first to preserve the Skippers' short-lived 9-8 lead.

The slumping pitching and defense offset some good performances at the plate from seniors Brian Straughn and Chris Bryan, juniors Fletcher Smalzel and Corbin Faber, and sophomores Alex Goetz, Pat Doonan and Kyle Pinkus. All of those players have had at least one multi-hit game in the last week.

"I would describe us as a decent hitting team. We're going to score some runs," Gallotta said. "But when you give up 12, 14 and nine runs, it's going to be difficult to win ballgames."

The coach remains optimistic, however, mainly because of what he sees as the parity in the South Shore League this season.

"The league has never been this balanced in my time here," Gallotta said. "It's a real interesting situation right now. If a team seizes the moment and wins three or four in a row, with everyone knocking each other off, that team could win the league."

Cohasset has the chance to be that team. Following yesterday's game with Norwell, host Mashpee on Monday and travel to Abington on Thursday. All three are league games.

"If we can hit the way we've been hitting lately, and we can revert back to the way we were pitching, I'm still really confident," said Gallotta.

The coach believes his players share in that confidence.

"We know we can beat anyone on our schedule on any given day," Gallotta said. "To be perfectly honest, that couldn't be said for years past. We've had some good players in the program, but we didn't have the depth we have this season. I truly believe we can compete with anyone."

JV lady laxers rout Bourne

Cohasset's junior varsity girls lacrosse team shook off its vacation rust on Tuesday by routing Bourne 14-0.

The homestanding Skippers scored seven goals in each half in a game that essentially was over less than five minutes into the game.

Katie Gaumer — who has been the leading scorer for the JV's through the first four games — led the team again with three goals and an assist, while freshman classmate Caitlin Mahoney added three goals of her own. Grace Steele picked up two goals and an assist, Kayla Farren and Jen Silvia both added two scores and Madeline Leahy and Paige Strecker both accounted for a goal and an assist.

Aisling Guinee backstopped the team and stopped seven Bourne shots to pick up the shutout. She was helped by strong defensive play from Amanda Hurd and Natalie Hunt.

The win improved the JV team's record to 3-1, with Norwell on tap at Deer Hill School on Thursday, April 27.

duties as president of the Angel Fund (a non-profit organization he co-founded, which raises money and awareness for research and treatment of A.L.S. - better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease) and all that comes with being the father of four busy kids.

The Boston Marathon is very near to my husband's heart, as his father brought him to watch this event each year. He sees each year's race as a chance to pay tribute to his dad, Christopher (who passed away from A.L.S. in 1989) and his brother Jimmy (who likewise passed away from A.L.S. in 1997) as well as a fund-raising event.

Over the past three years, he has led a total of 52 runners, who have raised a total of $120,000 through this one event.

In an interview with the Mariner on Wednesday, Richard Kennedy said the highlight of his marathon this year was seeing his daughter Lindsey, a freshman at Boston College, and many of her friends cheering him on at the 24-mile mark.

"In 21 years, seeing her there was my most memorable marathon moment," he said.

Interestingly enough, Kennedy says his father was not a runner himself.

"We're not sure why he was so obsessed with it, but we thank him for it," Kennedy said. "It's become our obsession."

Kennedy said he is friends with Red Sox pitcher Mike Timlin, whose wife, Dawn, joined fellow Sox wives Kathryn Nixon and Shonda Schilling as marathon runners on the Angel Fund team. For every appearance he makes on the mound, Mike Timlin donates $500 to the fund.

A runner at North Quincy High School and then Northeastern University, Kennedy has run marathons in Lowell, Hartford, Providence and Toronto, just to name a few. His first actually came as part of the Cape Cod Ironman triathlon in 1983.

Kennedy, 46, says he has no plans to stop running the Boston Marathon anytime soon.

"I've already told my kids, 'If I live to be 80, you're going to be embarrassed, because you're going to be standing there until 6 o'clock waiting for me at mile-24,'" he said.

YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

Girls youth lacrosse teams take four of five in Norwell

It was the best of halves, it was the worst of halves. But for the Cohasset 11-U Blue team, the tale of two halves against Norwell turned into the first loss of the season, and the first time in five seasons that a Cohasset girls youth squad had ever lost to a team from Norwell.

The Blue 11-U girls (grades 3 and 4) opened like they would keep that streak alive, answering Norwell's first goal with five scores. Charlotte Allard, Molly Fitzgerald, Jackie Driscoll, Kathryn Dunn and Lindsay Martinez powered the scoring surge, with Peyton MacNaught and Eliza Murphy adding assists.

But the game turned around in the second half, with Norwell controlling possession by winning the draws and beating Cohasset to the ground balls. Annie McElgunn – who switched from midfield to goalie for the second half – kept the Blue team in the game, as Norwell scored six consecutive goals to take the lead. MacNaught finally broke that streak after stealing a clearing pass and blasting the ball home, but time ran out and the home team held on for a 7-6 win. Cohasset Blue 11-U's record on the season dropped to 2-1.

For the rest of the April 23 games at Norwell – all involving older teams that were shorthanded due to kids being away on vacation — it was all Cohasset.

The Blue 15-U team (grades 7 and 8) traded goals with the Norwell 1 team early, but after breaking the 2-2 tie midway through the first half, Cohasset controlled the action for the rest of the day, powering to a 5-3 halftime lead and a 10-4 win.

Hannah Burgess scored three goals, Amy Meikleham scored twice and added an assist, and Isabelle Franklin notched two goals. Kaleigh Teague added a goal and an assist, Olivia Sullivan scored on a rambling direct-free position run, Kelsey Erler blasted home a fast break and Paige DeSisto picked up an assist in a game that could have featured twice as many goals had Cohasset not resembled the Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight throughout a dominating second half.

Molly McElgunn and Thomson Jaffe managed nine saves in the net, most of them coming from McElgunn in the second half.

The Cohasset Blue 13-U squad (grades 5 and 6) was up next, and was in for more of a dogfight. Danielle Healy answered Norwell's first two scores of the day, first converting a feed from Hope Kissick, then stealing a clearing pass and slamming it home.

Whitney Jaffe answered Norwell's third goal of the game by finishing a feed from Taylor Kennedy, who picked up her first career point by scooping a loose ball, running the length of the field and making a perfect pass to a wide-open Jaffe. A Kissick-to-Jaffe connection gave Cohasset its first lead, and Maria Buckley's first-ever goal closed out the first half with the Blue team on top 5-3.

The real story of the game, however, was in the Cohasset net, where Stephanie Brierly made six first-half saves, and routinely frustrated Norwell. Her five second-half saves were both difficult and timely, and she never allowed Norwell to get back into the contest.

Carly Oddleifson, taking draws for the first time in her short lacrosse career, dominated the face-offs in the second half, and picked up a goal and an assist in the process. Moira Donohue's two goals equaled her total for all of 2005, Christina Healy added a solo score and Isabella Flibotte notched her first career goal to give Cohasset all it needed to come away with a 10-7 victory.

Next on the field, the Cohasset White 15-U team – carrying a lot of Blue team players to make up for the vacation shortfall – took on a Norwell 2 team that was so shorthanded it needed to borrow players in order to take the field.

The game was never close, with Cohasset jumping to a 6-1 lead and cruising to a 12-4 rout. Kaci Kucinski led the way with three goals, while Meikleham's two goals and one assist gave her 50 points total for her youth career, making her just the fifth Cohasset girls youth lacrosse player to hit the half-century mark.

Thomson Jaffe, who has played almost exclusively as a goalie during five years of youth ball, scored the first two goals of her career, with Franklin adding two scores and single tallies coming from the sticks of Burgess, Chelsea Silvia and Lindsay MacNaught.

Polly Murray and Jessica Fusco picked up assists on the day, and half of Norwell's scores came from borrowed Cohasset players Olivia Murphy and Paige DeSisto. Kathleen Kelly and Kate Hillman also played non-stop – and particularly hard — on behalf of Norwell for the day.

Molly McElgunn split halves in the goal with Franklin; the pair made two saves on the day.

The last game of the day featured a shorthanded Cohasset White 13-U squad, which could only field a full team thanks to several Blue team players doubling up.

After Norwell took a 2-1 lead, Whitney Jaffe scored a natural hat trick, and Cohasset held on to lead 4-3 at the break. Norwell answered Nicole Hajjar's first goal of the season with two scores to tie the game at 5-all before Anna Seraikas – who earned an assist on one of Jaffe's earlier scores — registered her first-ever goal on a direct-free position to give Cohasset a lead it would never relinquish.

Donohue scored two of the next three goals in the game – she finished with three scores in this game to go with her two from the first contest – and Jaffe answered Norwell's final attempt to get back into it, as Cohasset closed a seesaw 9-6 victory.

Brierly came through between the pipes with another stellar performance, stopping seven Norwell shots to earn her second victory of the day.

All six Cohasset youth teams will play at Deer Hill School on Sunday April 30, squaring off against teams from Sandwich and Hull. For schedule details or more information on Cohasset youth lacrosse, go to www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

Boys youth report

The U-15 Blue boys team continued its winning ways with an 8–3 victory over a significantly less experienced Marshfield squad this past Sunday.

Though the boys suffered a severe case of the "dropsies" for most of the game that prevented the score from being in the double-digits; superior ground ball play and superb play in the net by "rookie" goaltender Derek Youngman produced a 5–0 lead after the first quarter and Marshfield never really challenged after that.

Dean Driscoll continued his strong play with two goals and an assist, followed by single tallies from Ian Porter, John McGoldrick, Luke Ernst, Nick Lieberman, and Jack Carrier. The defense also continued their dominance in the "close-D," led by Chris Brown, who broke up several potential scoring threats while also taking some offensive shifts throughout the contest. Wil Lynner, Mark Seraikas, and Jack Nelson also pitched in to keep any potential threat under control stripping the ball whenever it came over half-field.

The highlight of the game came from Olly Forrer (1G/1A) when he notched his single tally after grabbing a ground ball, faking to his right, then spinning around in traffic to bury the rock topside while shooting from his left side – even the referee was impressed!

The U-15 White squad beat Norwell at home Sunday to extend its undefeated streak to three games.

In the 7–3 win, solid defense by Taylor McQuade, Dave Hernon, and volunteer fill-in Pete McKenna kept serious threats at bay. Goalie Jack Murphy, with 15 saves, maintained his excellent stopping ratio. With only two players as subs, attack men filled in at the middy position and all demonstrated good field position and transition skills.

The offense set up nicely, moving the ball to open players from the top, side and behind the net. The Norwell coaching staff even commented favorably on U-15 White's ball movement capabilities. The game went into half time with a 6 – 2 lead and kept the pressure on the remainder of the game. Tom Flibotte (3G, 2A), Geoff Evans (1A), Ian Quinlan (3G), and Jake Kissick (1G), made up the team's scoring. An excellent effort was put forth by all, ranging from face-offs and ground balls to clearing and riding. The team is truly in mid-season form and looking forward to the next opponent.

The U-15 Grey picked up its first loss of the season on Sunday, 13-8, against a bigger and deeper Scituate team. With Cohasset's ranks somewhat depleted on the last day of vacation week, Scituate took quick advantage and dominated the first quarter, netting four unanswered goals. Cohasset had a couple of good scoring chances late in the quarter, but was thwarted by strong Scituate goaltending.

Scituate opened the second quarter in the same fashion, netting two more goals, before Will Wise was able to answer with an unassisted goal. Scituate scored once more, and then Chris Wilson closed out the scoring in the first half with an unassisted goal, and Scituate led 7-2 at the half.

Cohasset showed more confidence in the second half, and played Scituate even in both the third and fourth quarters, but was unable to claw back from the five goal deficit at the half. Scituate opened the scoring in the third quarter, but Cohasset answered with two goals by Wise, the first assisted by Max Shipp and the second unassisted. Scituate came back with another goal to close the third quarter still leading by five goals, 9-4.

Cohasset opened the fourth quarter with a Wise goal, assisted by Shipp, but Scituate responded with four unanswered goals to effectively put the game out of reach. Cohasset persevered, however, and netted the final three goals of the game to again close within five, for a final score of 13-8. Wise struck for two goals, one assisted by Graham Stevenson, and Shipp added the final, with an assist from Wise.

Cohasset's defense corps of Tom Pecca, Scott Wilson, Will Evans (moved from his usual midfield position) and goalie Eric Wasel played with determination throughout the game, and were a key part of reversing the momentum of the first half and playing Scituate even during the second half.

The U-13 Grey was outnumbered by a large Scituate squad, but nonetheless fought to a 6-5 loss on their home field. Kyle Healy kept the Cohasset boys close with numerous saves.

The Grey team outshot their counterparts and found the post no less than four times. John Collins, Danny Czerkawski, Jamie Timothy and Patrick Kearney all provided tallies for Cohasset. The midfield lines were gassed all afternoon, playing with limited subs. Kyle Livingstone, Alex Evans and Blair McGowan gave outstanding efforts on both ends of the field. Brennan Bukowski and Gus Helboch provided strong contributions at attack and the defense anchored by Geoff Swain and Jimmy Lydon did a great job as well.

The U-13 Blue squad took the field after the vacation week obviously looking to burn some pent up energy as they posted their first shutout of the season, 9–0, against a Marshfield team that just couldn't seem to find their rhythm.

Though the teams played even through the first quarter with Cohasset posting the only goal of the period, Cohasset broke it wide open in the second quarter to end the half up 6–0. Though the roster was still a little depleted and Cohasset was without its regular goalie, Blake Erler stepped up into the pipes and played magnificently, stopping every shot that came his way.

Derek Froio and Dan Barnes were impenetrable on defense while Dean McNary (2G/1A) contributed at both ends. John Mills (1G/1A), Hunter Forrer (1G) and Rob Mahoney (1G) also played dual roles helping out in all positions while Alex Kent and Sasha Nakashima showed steady improvement in the their first year of play.

Mitch McNary (3G/2A) had another strong game by repeatedly stripping the ball on defense and then leading several fast breaks for scores.

The highlight of the game came on a text book offensive strike – a clearing pass from Mitch McNary to Mills, who sent a quick feed to Dean who was advancing to the X position behind the cage, and then a laser-like feed to a cutting Andrew Fontaine who notched his first goal of the season on a perfect "one-timer" that the goalie never even saw until it was too late.

Though it was a lopsided victory, watching these guys play each week reminds one of the PGA slogan – "These Guys Are Good."

The U-13 White team returned from its spring break playing local rival Norwell. Both squads had to battle cold, wet and windy conditions at Milliken, as well as small rosters due to the vacation week. The Cohasset boys played well, managing to play a highly competitive game with only one player coming off the bench.

Cohasset played from behind the whole game, staging a late fourth quarter rally that fell one goal short. In the end, Norwell ended up on top 6-5. The Cohasset midfielders played a particularly noteworthy game, given the lack of substitutes. Charlie Neaves, David Hill, Nick Tangherlini, and Brendan Queenan all played hard and competitive all afternoon.

The attack of Chris Lunde, Adrian Dunne and Ryan MacCarthy teamed with the midfield to produce a number of fine offensive moments. The defense, lead by goaltender Chris Murphy, hung tough, battling hard to produce stops and transitions to the offensive side of the field. Matt Swanborg, Ryan McGovern, Coleman Hernon and Colin Bell all worked together to limit the number of quality chances Norwell had.

Cohasset goals came from Tangherlini (3), Neaves and Lunde, with assists for McGovern and Neaves.

The U-11 Blue team showed great teamsmanship this weekend against Marshfield with a win, Cohasset 6, Marshfield 2.

The first quarter saw four goals, starting from a face-off and pass to Colin Whelan and a feed to Jack Conti for the first score of the day. Whelan then scored unassisted. Max Montgomery made a great goal after bringing the ball around the back of the crease. He also was key to keeping the ball on offense with a number of interceptions and ground balls.

In the second half Marshfield was stronger overall. Henry Brown played goalie and he made seven saves for the first half. The Marshfield offense penetrated the box and began to shoot, but Cohasset's defense was strong, with Matt Arnold making four defensive stops and Sam Murphy denying close access.

Cohasset fans also saw excellent hustle by Jeff Powers, Patrick Holway and Matts Nelson in the midfield. Martin Buckley won two face-offs and had one goal assisted by a Tommy Powers, who also showed strong play throughout the game. In all, some real team play and a good outcome for a cold, rainy April Sunday.

Despite the foul weather, the White U-11 boys came tearing onto the field. Unfortunately, Norwell White was shorthanded. Cohasset loaned our guest team a middle field line for each of the four quarters.

First quarter action began with a goal by Mark McKenna by virtue of an assist from Jack Stanganelli on the defensive unit. A first defense-to-attack pass for the team. The second goal by Cohasset was from Cole Kissick, with an assist from Charlie Steele, the team's most productive feeder of the season. Jack Leffel made a solo score to put the team ahead 3-0.

McKenna scored with a great assist from Mark Brown to go up by four. Adam Benson blasted in a goal on a feed from Ryan McKeon from behind the cage. Kissick added another point with an unassisted goal to end the first quarter 6-0. The defense held their ground with Benson in net for the first time this season.

The second quarter began with a goal by McKenna followed by a score from Steele to bring a halftime score of 8-2. A travel delay for brothers Will and Curtis Golden did not slow them from their quick and physical games.

The third quarter began with a goal by McKeon on an assist by Adam Benson. Charlie Michalowski scored with an assist from McKeon. Adam Benson again scored by an assist again from McKeon. Curtis Golden then scored with an assist from Mark McKenna. Every goal in the third quarter was earned under the Two Pass Rule which requires the offensive team to make two consecutive and completed passes before the shot on the cage.

During the final quarter, Cohasset White U-11 changed the game. Defense and attack players traded positions and we moved to the Three Pass Rule. The boys really enjoyed the rotation and the game ended at 12-2.

Special mention is deserved for Derek Benson who faithfully held the goalie position for the entire game and blocked every shot from Norwell. Stanganelli, Jack McElgunn and Tommy O'Brien ran a strong defensive unit that continues to dominate opponents this season.

Most importantly, the boys turned a dreary April afternoon into a terrific athletic day. The best part of this game was the imposition of the Pass Rule. The best college teams complete many passes before scoring and the boys were challenged to do that today. The boys only practice once before each game, so parents, please buy a stick and play some catch during the week.

Great play and even better sportsmanship was demonstrated by the team. Congrats to them.

middy Dan Trendowicz, who finished with two goals and an assist in an all-around strong performance.

"He was really instrumental in our win today," said Curran of Trendowicz. "He was controlling ground balls, pushing it upfield, and was just a real steadying influence in the midfield."

Juniors Chris Davis and Jeff Brown also had big goals in the second period, with Brown's score coming in a man-down situation on a long run down the field.

"He never ceases to amaze me," Curran said of his junior defenseman.

The coach said his team could have won by twice the amount they did had not been for some amazing saves from Holliston goalie Jim Gately, last year's Tri-Valley League MVP.

The Skippers also picked up a win on Monday, defeating Norwell, 14-5. The Clippers are arguably the league's most improved team, but Cohasset won with a dominant second half in which they outscored Norwell 8-0.

A big part of that was senior goalie Ben Libby, who made 14 stops in net for the win. Buick scored a game-high five goals, while Flibotte added four goals and three assists. Davis and Trendowicz added two goals apiece.

The third period was an especially good one for Cohasset, thanks to the good play of Flibotte and key goals from Buick and sophomore P.J. McCaw.

The Skippers travel to Norwell this afternoon for a rematch, and host Plymouth on Monday and Marshfield Tuesday. All games are scheduled to begin at 4 p.m.

Please dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope to class, and wear running shoes.

Students, teacher share their love of art

Deer Hill's Ann Berman loves teaching art to children. Yet in many ways, says Berman, she is the one on the learning curve as she watches students explore, create, and interpret the art around them.

Giving children the tools they need, with a generous dose of encouragement and inspiration, is what Berman considers key in fostering artistic expression and appreciation.

During her recent "Favorites" art show at the Deer Hill school, where young artists displayed their favorite piece of work, Berman asked students what they loved most about the world of art.

"What I love about art is that absolutely nothing is the same. Every piece of artwork you see has something that makes it unique." —Caroline Lengyel

"What I love about art is having sketchbooks because you get to draw whatever you want." — Sawyer Wakefield

"One thing I like about art is clay. I like when the cool mixture touches your hands. Also I like that Ms. Berman give us not just an art class but gives us freedom." — Emma Smith

"Art connects me to my family. My grandmother's mom loved to draw and I have a ton of drawings that she made. But since she died I remember her by her pictures. She passed it on to my grandmother and me. That is why I love art." — Christian Bumstead

"The reason I love art is because making clay or drawing or anything is not about how good it looks, it's how much feeling or thought goes into it. I love art." — Evan Ackley

"Do whatever you want with anything you want. Have fun with art. What's stopping you?" — Molly Fitzgerald

"Art comes from inside. It's your emotions on paper or canvas. Art is you. Art is your imagination gone wild." — Abby Bray

Maddie Curley is proud of her work of art that focuses on design and color patterns.

Fourth grader Mickey Barry puts the finishing touches on an art project he created under the direction of art teacher Ann Berman.

"My favorite thing about art is using bright colors to make art stand out. Color really catches my attention and makes art look great." — Rachel Littauer

"When I'm bored I get my sketchbook and draw things. I love art." — Shantel Florence

"Art is a way to express your feelings with no boundaries, no limits, no right or wrong way. To one person it can be a masterpiece and to another it can be nothing, but to you it means everything because it comes from your heart." — Gabrielle Rioux

"The soul is the pen and the art is the paper." — Charlotte Barszewski

Deer Hill art teacher Ann Berman inspires fourth grader Maggie Ernst by showing animal photos at the start of an art project.

Here we are again after a brief layaway, back in school and ready to complete the home stretch of what has already been a trying and arduous year. Vacation is over and plunging back into the swing of things up here at the high school has not been easy thus far after experiencing the warm breezes of spring for the first time.

The Varsity Sports Teams are still tearing it up on both the courts and the fields with their stellar play so far this spring and every team appears likely to qualify for the state tournament. A quick shout out to Nick Arment for raising money as part of his participation in the Shriners Football Game. This game is played every year under sponsorship by the Shriners and all proceeds that Nick raises will benefit burn victims in area hospitals. Now, in other news around the school:

• The high school Jazz Band will be playing in a benefit concert for Juvenile Diabetes in May. Also, the Concert Band will be playing at the annual walk for Multiple Sclerosis on Saturday morning.

• The fifth annual EDIBLE ART EXHIBIT will be held at CHS on Thursday, May 25th, at 6 p.m. The competition is open to people ages 4 through 104. The artwork can be by an individual, or it can be a collaborative piece and you are responsible for setting up your piece for viewing. Please register via email or telephone by contacting Nina Berkowitz at the Cohasset High School at 781-383-6100 or via email at nberkowitz@cohassetk12.org. There are many prizes from local restaurants and merchants!

First African American Airmen visit CHS

By Zach Etkind
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Tuesday March 28, three members of the Tuskegee Airmen came to Cohasset High School to share their extraordinary story and discuss the racism that plagued our military and society during World War II. Longtime Cohasset resident Jack Bryant brought two fellow airmen with him, Willis Saunder and Harvey Sanford.

The Tuskegee Airmen were a group of 996 black military aviators in WWII who overcame immense adversity to become the first African American fighter pilots to defend our country. Before the Tuskegee Airmen were trained, African Americans in the U.S military were considered unfit for combat and were generally assigned to stereotyped jobs as cooks and waiters, or were rejected completely. While the War Department was reluctant to send the Tuskegee Airmen into combat during WWII, their success and fearlessness in battle quickly changed the minds of many in the military. By the end of the war, the Tuskegee Airmen had flown 15,533 missions, destroyed 251 enemy aircraft, disabled more than 600 boxcars, locomotives and rolling stock, and escorted over 700 bombers, and ending the war as the only fighter group to never lose an escorted bomber to enemy fighters. In addition, they won more than 850 medals including 150 Distinguished Flying Crosses and eight Purple Hearts

The Tuskegee Airmen who spoke to the high school students stressed that as members of the Tuskegee Airmen, they were constantly fighting two wars – one against the enemy forces in Europe and another against the segregation and racist attitudes encountered in their own military such as rarely being congratulated after a successful mission and being prohibited from the Officer's Club. One airman explained how at times he didn't know who to be more afraid of, the Germans, or his own countrymen. Fortunately, the contributions made by the Tuskegee Airmen in WWII undoubtedly helped lead to the desegregation of the Armed Forces and abolishment of the War Department's racial policies.

The three airmen also spoke later in the evening to a standing room only crowd of over 100 adults at the Congregational Church. The most memorable moment of the night came when a man came forward and explained that he was a bomber pilot in WWII and a Tuskegee Airman "saved my ass."

The Cohasset Diversity Committee and Cohasset Middle High School Social Studies Department collaborated on the event. Students were impressed with the Tuskegee Airmen's accomplishments and were given time to ask questions after the presentation. The main thing these Tuskegee Airmen wanted to convey was the importance of education and maintaining courage, virtue, and a sense of duty in the face of adversity.

These pioneers are forever deserving of our admiration and respect.

Facts about the Tuskegee Airmen

- Tuskegee Army Air Field, located at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, was the training center for all African-American fighter pilots during World War II.

- 66 of the Tuskegee aviators died in combat.
- 33 Tuskegee Airmen became prisoners of war.
- They flew over 700 bomber escort missions and ended the war as the only fighter group to never lose an escorted bomber to enemy fighters.
- They flew 15,533 missions between May, 1943 and June 9, 1945.
- They destroyed 251 enemy aircraft: 111 were downed in aerial combat including 3 of the 8 German ME-262 jets shot down by allies during the war.
- They won more than 850 medals, including 150 Distinguished Flying Crosses, Eight Purple Hearts, 14 Bronze Stars, 744 Air Medals and clusters and three distinguished unit citations.

BIRTHDAY CONTEST

Lucy Knox, 8, climbs up with goodies while Olivia Arnold, 8, right, holds the list of clues for the birthday scavenger hunt which took the girls to the historical society on Saturday. There were three teams from the birthday party that scattered throughout town on their bikes looking for answers and prizes.

Village central to Cohasset life

It has always been a center, and particularly so when the Old Colony Railroad maintained a station in town. When train service ended in 1959, there began a gradual evolution of the kinds of shopping that one did in the village. In fact, "in the early 1950s Cohasset village was the major shopping center for the town. One could buy most necessities, including groceries, clothing and hardware in the village. There were three grocery stores, three clothing stores, and two hardware stores. There were also three restaurants, a liquor store, two drugstores, two beauty salons, three banks, a newspaper store, a real estate office, a jeweler's shop, a shoe repair shop, a dry cleaners, a barber, a dentist and a doctor's office next to the Community Center" (from Narrative History of Cohasset, Vol. III).

Until the late 70s there was another "village" in Cohasset. The village of Beechwood had its own post office, general store, fire station, library and community center. With the closing of Brown's General Store in the 70s, however, Beechwood village lost its commercial activity.

Many of the necessities once available in Cohasset village have migrated to Route 3A. The road was built in 1931, but not until the train stopped did a significant volume of retail business move to the new highway. Now it provides many of the necessities that the village once provided. Of some concern is that the new Greenbush train station, located on 3A, will draw still more retail trade to the highway.

Both to counter that concern and to renew the village, the town applied for and obtained a State grant to "revitalize" the village. Over a period of almost six years beginning in 2000, the town debated the kind of revitalization it wanted. With initial design funds provided by the generosity of Peter Roy and Gerd Ordelheide, the revitalization project evolved from a comprehensive renewal of the area from the village to the Cove to a more modest update of the village area itself, including rebuilding sidewalks, curbs and roads. The State funds also enabled the revitalization project to widen South Main Street at St. Stephen's Church and to add trees, two small pocket parks and decorative crosswalks. In addition, the "T" is obligated to rebuild Parking Way, our town parking lot, and to connect work on the Pleasant Street grade crossing with the revitalization work on Depot Court. Although the Greenbush train will not stop in the village, the T has not precluded building a whistle stop for foot traffic in a portion of land located immediately to the south of Sohier Street should there be demand for it and residents approve.

The structures in the village have, for the most part, changed very little in the last 50 years. Except for the Red Lion Inn, which was completely rebuilt, most of the other buildings in town are much as they were in 1950. Uses are different but the look of the town is about the same. I expect that will change. The Planning Board has proposed a village overlay district that would permit a residential and retail mixed-use district within the village. Others see an opportunity to create retail space facing Parking Way. However these ideas evolve, there is a strong desire to preserve the character of the village, its function as a working center and its linkage to the Common and Cove.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer is a member of the Village Revitalization Committee. His wife, Jacqueline Dormitzer, author of the "Narrative History of Cohasset, Vol. III" also contributed to this article.

Blazing a (golf) trail to Alabama

By GREG GATLIN

MUSCLE SHOALS, Ala. -- I told a friend I was heading to Alabama to play golf along the state's Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail. He asked if I'd be carrying a backpack.

Not exactly. Though I have to admit the idea of a golf "trail" did conjure up a similarly rugged image of trekking through woods from one course to another.

The trail is actually a brilliant network of top-notch golf courses and luxurious hotels that stretches from Muscle Shoals in the northwest corner of Alabama, east and then south through the state, all the way down to Mobile on the Gulf Coast.

In all, there are more than two dozen RTJ courses scattered across the state, the fruits of the largest golf course construction project in history. And you can play most of them for about $40 a round. If that's not brilliant, I don't know what is.

Herald Photography Director Jim Mahoney and I started our golf adventure with plans to play six rounds in four days. But it's one thing to play six rounds in four days when you're staying at a condo in Orlando. It's something quite different when you tee off at dawn, drive two hours between morning and afternoon rounds, then jump back into the car, drive three more hours, arrive at your hotel at 9:30 p.m., grab dinner and a quick night's sleep and get up for the next 7:30 a.m. tee time.

Still, the experience was unforgettable.

During our drive from the airport to Muscle Shoals, nothing in the surrounding landscape -- small farms, modest houses, trailers and humble churches -- hinted at world-class golf and luxurious lodging -- that is until we arrived at The Shoals.

By 2 p.m., Jim and I were teeing it up at Fighting Joe, one of two courses at The Shoals. Fighting Joe opened just last year and has been ranked by Golf Digest as one of the best new affordable courses. It's a links-style course that's long -- crazy long. Fighting Joe measures 8,092 yards from the tips. Even the pros don't play that long.

Fortunately, Fighting Joe, like most courses on the trail, offers a wide selection of tees, allowing you to play according to your skill level. It's got a pretty sightline and great driving holes. It also has those Robert Trent Jones greens that are heavily bunkered or protected by water -- and one pays dearly for coming up short.

ROBERT TRENT JONES GOLF TRAIL ALABAMA- Bagpiper Jim MacRae salutes golfers finishing the fourth hole as the sun begins to set at Ross Bridge in Birmingham. Behind the piper are the first tee box and the third green. The nightly tradition has been part of the Ross Bridge since it opened.

Jim put it best when he said, "I came to Alabama to play golf, but I spent most of the time on the beach."

We stayed that night at the new Marriott Shoals Hotel & Spa. Like most of the rooms we'd stay in over four days, this one was gorgeous, with a balcony overlooking the river.

Travel to Myrtle Beach, N.C. or pretty much anywhere in Florida, and you're sure to bump into fellow Yankees by the first tee. But in five days in Alabama, Jim and I heard nary a northern accent. On the RTJ, the locals come to play.

We were paired up the next morning on Shoals' Schoolmaster course with David, who ran a machine business, and Troy, a pastor. The pair had made the hour-and-a-half ride over from Huntsville.

Schoolmaster (named for President Woodrow Wilson, who got the Wilson Dam built and who was known as "The Schoolmaster of politics") is more of a parkland course with tree-lined fairways and a terrific back nine cut along the banks of the Tennessee River. Some of the largest small-mouth bass on record have been caught within a cast of a rod from where we were playing, David said.

The bass can easily wind up with your ball on Schoolmaster. On one tee, David hit an errant drive that almost stayed dry, but slowly rolled down a bank and trickled into the water in a most unsatisfying manner.

Troy then stepped up to the tee and hit a high-arcing draw out over the water. The ball hit with maximum splash.

"If yer go'n' git wet, that's the way to do it," David said.

After Schoolmaster, we jumped back into the LandRover we'd rented, heading south for Hoover, just outside of Birmingham, and the spectacular Renaissance Ross Bridge Golf Resort & Spa. Despite both having college degrees, including Jim's four years of engineering study, we never figured out the GPS system in the LandRover. But we got the six-CD changer working, which was all that mattered.

We arrived at Ross Bridge just before sunset, in time to catch a bagpiper accompany golfers as they putted out on 18 -- pure genius.

The 259-room Renaissance, with its Scottish castle theme, was recently awarded a four diamond rating by AAA, and it's earned every diamond. Balconies overlook the course, or the pool with its gristmill and waterfall that replicates a real waterfall on the course, dropping 80 feet to a lake. Amazingly, you can stay at the Renaissance for about $180 a room.

The Ross Bridge golf course is lush and beautifully designed, with many of the holes overlooking one of two lakes. From the first tee to the 18th green, the views are breathtaking.

After a morning round of golf there, we were back in the LandRover by noon and heading for Prattville's Capitol Hill, which features three courses: The Senator, The Legislator and The Judge. We played The Judge with a couple of young guys from nearby Montgomery.

The Judge was not in a lenient mood. You get a sense of what lies ahead as you stand on the first tee, looking out over a 200-foot drop to the fairway running along the Alabama River below.

Then it was back on the highway and down to Mobile on the Gulf Coast.

Despite the hit it took from Hurricane Katrina, locals say Mobile is going through a downtown renaissance. No doubt, the city has a long way to go, though it is charming with a scenic waterfront.

Saturday morning we played the Azalea course at the Lakewood Golf Club alongside the beautiful waterfront Grand Hotel. This was a gentler course with open fairways and beautiful magnolia trees, dogwoods and towering oaks dressed in Spanish moss. There's also an old civil-war era cemetery.

In the afternoon, it was off to Magnolia Grove, on the other side of Mobile, where we played The Crossings, which was one of the prettiest courses we saw on the trail.

In addition to the brilliant courses and luxurious hotels, you can pick up a luxury car that will be waiting for you at the airport through Hertz' Prestige Collection program. We put about 650 miles on the LandRover during our short adventure. But I suggest you give yourself a little more time or play a little less golf and enjoy the slower Southern pace of life.

Area residents to walk for MS

Hundreds of South Shore residents and people from across Massachusetts are rallying at the South Shore Community Center, Saturday April 29 for the MS LifeLines MS Walk to fight multiple sclerosis. A spring tradition since 1989, the event will have walkers follow a five-mile accessible path starting at 10 a.m. from the Community Center. Each walker is encouraged to raise a minimum of $100, but most collect over $200. News anchor and Chronicle co-host Anthony Everett will attend the Cohasset Walk and address the crowd of walkers and volunteers about his mother's experience with MS. Organized by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Central New England Chapter, over 200,000 walkers participate nationwide each year at more than 700 sites, and have raised over $30 million. Family and corporate walk teams and volunteers can register online, at www.msnewengland.org, or by calling 800-493-WALK as well as in-person the day of the event.

MS is a chronic, neurological disease that affects the central nervous system, causing unpredictable symptoms including fatigue, paralysis, and blindness. Most commonly diagnosed between ages 20 and 50, MS affects women two to three times more often than men. In the U.S., more than 400,000 people have MS, and 200 new cases are diagnosed each week. Those with MS or who know someone with MS can call 800-493-9255, or visit www.msnewengland.org.

APRIL 27 - MAY 4 2006

A spectacular 14 minute number presented by a husband and wife team, that starts with a graceful interpretation in the Aerial Silks, which then smoothly flows into a captivating Duo routine in the Straps, featuring Dmitrii Amaoutov, the original "Flying Man" from Cirque du Soleil, accompanied by his wife Irina.

Flying Man Lands in Plymouth

Cirque des Amis staged at Memorial Hall Saturday

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Dmitrii Amaoutov's official biography says the Russian-born circus performer started his career at age 8. In a recent telephone conversation, however, the artist formerly known as "Cirque du Soleil's Flying Man" clarified the details of his early life.

"Officially, I joined the bill at eight years old," explains Amaoutov. "But I've really been in the circus almost since birth. When you're very small, the circus is like playing a game. As an adult it is much harder. I love the work, however. It is in my blood. I cannot imagine separating the circus from my life."

That's good news, too, since the third-generation circus performer will be joined by his wife, Irina, and two children, Ekaterina and Vanya, and an international company of gymnasts, dancers and athletes when he brings his "Cirque des Amis" to Plymouth Memorial Hall for two shows on Saturday.

"My entire family is part of the show, which combines the best traditions of the Russian circus with a mix of theatrical elements and modern music. My son will be playing the guitar, too. The Circus is great because it accepts every kind of art that involves real talent. We've hired very gifted and professional lighting and costume designers to help us create a first-quality product."

Like "Cirque du Soleil," various companies of which now dot the Las Vegas strip the way headliners once did, "Cirque des Amis" works its magic without help from elephants, tigers or even dogs.

"The Russian circus has always featured animal acts, of course, but Cirque du Soleil introduced an animal-free approach that reinvented our art and that is still thriving," says Amaoutov.

It was that famed Canadian troupe that first brought Amaoutov to North America. For Soleil, he created his now legendary "Aerial Straps" routine, earning the moniker "Flying Man," and traveled the world as a featured performer before serving stints in sit-down productions in Las Vegas, Australia and Monte Carlo.

About 12 years ago, Amaoutov went out on his own and began to create his own touring circus as a base for both his career and his life.

"I built my company step by step, year by year. We slowly prepared a full show with which we could tour. It is a very different experience being responsible for everything instead of just one act within a larger show. Like all Russian circus performers, I am trained as a juggler, acrobat, trapeze artist and also a magician. Now, I'm also finding satisfaction as a director."

When he is not traveling, Amaoutov and his family live in Montreal. Russia, however, is still home.

"I left Russia to travel all over the world with Cirque du Soleil. We then decided to settle in Montreal. It is a very friendly place in a good country with good people," says the graduate of the University of Moscow's Theater Arts Institute, who has collaborated with dancers from the Bolshoi and Kirov ballet companies. "I left Moscow 16 years ago. The Russian circus still continues to be strong, of course, but the general problem is that there is really too small a budget for it to grow and improve."

("Cirque Des Amis" will present two shows, at 3 and 8 p.m. at Plymouth Memorial Hall, 83 Court Street, Plymouth, Saturday, April 29. For tickets and information, call 866-468-7619 or visit www.ticketweb.com or any Strawberries locations.)

Sanya Quirion (right) and her partner Anastassia Fomina perform "Sphere & Cradle", a unique routine that does not exist in any other cirque.

Movie review

Fight and flight

United 93 (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Passengers on Flight 93 plot to retaliate against the four terrorists who commandeered their plane.

Powerful and appalling, "United 93" asks moviegoers to relive the events of Sept. 11, 2001 from the point of view of the doomed passengers of that fateful flight. For many, those events represent too fresh a wound to allow them to see such a film. The truth is, "United 93" is upsetting.

But others will experience a brilliant piece of realistic filmmaking and a tribute to the pluck of ordinary Americans who find themselves facing extraordinarily dire circumstances.

The dreaded action begins at dawn as the terrorists planning to hijack Flight 93 out of Newark International Airport prepare themselves by bathing, shaving and praying. That we hear the words of Muslim prayers in these scenes is fraught with meaning regarding the perversion of religion by evil individuals.

Equally ritualized are scenes of the arrival of the flight crew and pilots and the fueling, stocking and boarding of Flight 93. The pace is also steady at the Federal Aviation Administration's operations control center in Herndon, Va., where newly posted operations manager Ben Sliney (credibly played by Sliney himself) arrives for his first unbelievable day on the job.

Shot in a you-are-there, handheld style that had me reaching for my Dramamine, the film is rife with little ironies and bleak foreshadowings. One attractive young flight attendant mentions her "babies" at home. The pilot tells an attendant how to knock on the cabin door to gain cockpit access. Strapping rugby player Mark Bingham (talented newcomer Cheyenne Jackson) arrives only seconds before the airliner door is locked shut.

You sit in your seat thinking, these poor, poor people.

The hijacking itself unfolds like some terrible human sacrifice. Meanwhile, other hijacked planes strike the World Trade Center, and another flight suddenly goes radio-silent. The president and vice president cannot be reached. NORAD tries to scramble fighter jets over Manhattan and Washington, D.C.

You may find yourself, like me, frustrated by Sliney's failure to notify every pilot in the air of the first hijacking and to tell them to lock themselves in their cockpits and land immediately. But there are 4,200 flights in the air.

Eerily, the screen "signatures" of the hijacked planes suddenly wink out when they strike their targets. The passengers of United 93 slowly realize their hijackers are on a suicide mission and something must be done to stop them.

Director/writer Paul Greengrass does not make the mistake of humanizing the terrorists; the film is not about them. But he does differentiate them. The vacillating leader (Kahlid Abdalla) seems like the most educated. The three younger men (Omar Berdouni, Lewis Alsamari and Jamie Harding), one of whom who straps a fake bomb to his chest, are more barbarous and bloodthirsty. One almost gleefully cuts a woman's throat.

The film's heart-wrenching climax comes in scenes featuring dueling prayers, one in English, one in Arabic, and Englishman Greengrass, who has lived with the Catholic-Protestant conflicts in Northern Ireland, knows something about how this will resonate.

Greengrass first came to the attention of American filmgoers with "Bloody Sunday" (2002), a gripping, documentary-like recreation of events leading to a 1972 massacre of innocent Irish civilians by British soldiers. But there was a gap of 30 years between the incident and the film. (He went on to make the terrific sequel "The Bourne Supremacy").

For "United 93," Greengrass says he was after a "believable truth," and he went so far as to cast genuine civilian and military flight controllers among the actors.

Although much of the action inside the plane is fabricated, much of the dialogue is based on actual words and messages spoken on cell and flight phones, many of them tearful farewells to loved ones that will have viewers weeping. The recent release of the actual flight recorder tapes has made all of this more urgent and topical, if no less horrifying. The film is unflinchingly honest and dignified, and Greengrass sought and received the blessing and input of the families of the slain.

In other words, this is no sleazy exploitation movie (the recent no-frills A&E TV film "Flight 93" was also surprisingly effective). As we know what the outcome will be, "United 93" most resembles classical tragedy, but it's tragedy that strikes home more squarely than any production of "Hamlet" or "Macbeth" is likely to do. If your nerves are up to it, "United 93" is a daunting and cathartic work of art.

Rated R. "United 93" contains violence, profanity and may cause emotional distress.

Big turnout expected for historic override

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This Saturday, May 6, Cohasset residents will take part in an historic override vote. Turnout is expected to approach presidential proportions, as the town decides whether to pass a $1.495 million or $725,000 operating budget override, or none of the above.

The polls will be open at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. While elections are typically held at Town Hall, a scheduling conflict required it be moved next door. Absentee ballots are available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime Friday, May 5. If you will be in town and able to come to the polls, you should vote in person on Election Day, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

"A turnout of 60 to 65 percent would be wonderful," Douglas said. She said the town has 5,146 registered voters. As of Thursday morning 274 had voted by absentee ballot, with more expected to do so during the day Thursday and Friday.

"A turnout of 60 to 65 percent would be wonderful."
— Town Clerk Marion Douglas

In the last presidential election, 85 percent of the town's voters took part with 509 voting absentee. Absentee ballots are often a gauge of how big the turnout might be.

Voting to pass a general override means residents in a community choose to raise property taxes more than the 2-1/2 percent allowed by the state through Proposition 2-1/2, to help add funds to the operating budget. State aid has been cut and Cohasset is a town with a very small commercial tax base, and officials say the funds coming in are not enough to keep its town and school programs moving forward.

Voters may vote either "yes" or "no" to pass a $1.495 million override, or "yes" or "no" on a $725,000 override question. An override needs a majority of "yes" votes to pass. If both fig-

This year's override campaign has divided neighborhoods. Those on both sides of the issue say the tone of the campaign has turned ugly. "Yes" and "No" signs have been reported as stolen and some residents are using their freedom of speech to criticize those who hold the opposite view.

Hostile tone sets new pitch

Signs stolen and some residents ridiculed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The tone of this year's override election has been described by many to be the most contentious in years and perhaps in the entire history of the town. A number of residents have reported incidents with their campaign signs and it seems action has intensified within the last week.

Others have reported being treated rudely by those on the opposing side at places like the Recycling Transfer Station.

Police Chief James Hussey said signs for both pro- and anti-override households have been affected. Signs have been stolen, ripped up and scattered around peoples' property, and some obscene messages have also been painted on signs. He said everyone has the right to disagree when it comes to politics, but the acts which have been taking place cross over into illegal behavior.

"We all need to respect each others' rights under the Constitution. We all have a right to free speech, and we have to be respectful of each others' opinions. People should not be damaging or defacing other peoples' property," said Hussey.

" We all have a right to free speech, and we have to be respectful of each others' opinions."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Signs were reported stolen last week and over the weekend near Rte. 3A, on Beach Street, various residences on King Street, and Jerusalem Road. Hussey said three or four more calls had come in at the beginning of this week. "We haven't recovered any which have been reported to us as being stolen," said Hussey, adding residents are encouraged to keep their eyes open for suspicious activity and come forward with any information they might have about the incidents.

The town will vote on two override questions Saturday: whether to pass a $1,495 million override; a $725,000 override or no override. If both questions do not receive a majority of "yes" votes, neither one will pass and the town will be required to stay within a budget for which property taxes are only increased by the allowable 2-1/2 percent.

Currently there are signs popping up all over town from both sides of the campaign. While not everyone who has had a sign stolen feels it is an event worthy of filing a police report, others say they have been very upset by what they have experienced.

King Street resident Nancy Garrison came home from an evening out Friday night to find her two "Vote No" signs standing on her front lawn. When she woke up the next morning, one sign which had been standing in her front yard "right outside my window," had been stolen. Another sign which had been placed closer to the street had been pulled up, torn into pieces, and thrown into her bushes. Garrison said some families on her street also reported their "No" signs had been stolen, while at other homes on her street, the "No" signs were not touched.

Garrison said what concerns her the most is that the person or people who touched her signs deliberately got out of their car and came onto her property, as the signs were not located close to the road. "I called the police immediately," she said.

Jerusalem Road resident Lee Jenkins said she had incidents with her signs both Friday and Saturday night. She has a series of five signs which she said outline negative impacts of passing an override. She and her husband found a sign stating "Poverty. Doesn't it look good?" painted on a piece of plywood in their yard Saturday morning. That night, "Vote Yes" signs were stolen from Jenkins'

Village work in full swing

Project finish expected May 30

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset village is a mess. The streets are torn up and dotted with orange traffic barrels, ledge has been removed, and detours vabound.

But when the dust settles by the end of this month, residents should be happy with the change, as the project will yield safer sidewalks, curbing and crosswalks, trees, pocket parks and regraded and repaved streets.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer has been involved with the changes to the downtown area long before he was on the board, and has continued his proactive role while in office. He said the project is on schedule to be completed by roughly May 30. Street paving will begin the week of May 8, followed by sidewalks and curbing. "This reconstructing phase of the project will move quickly with visual improvements daily," he said.

South Main Street adjacent to Saint Stephen's has been widened by the removal of a portion of the granite ledge below the church, to create a safer sidewalk.

The Village Revitalization Project encompasses the downtown retail area including South Main Street from the Paul Pratt

Remember to Vote on Saturday, May 6

Second Congregational Church (next to Town Hall)
8 am to 6 pm

This is your chance to control runaway spending!

Vote NO on the Override Questions

If passed, the increase in your taxes will be permanent.

You are being asked to vote for a permanent operating override. At $1.5 Million dollars, it is remarkable for its audaciousness. Unlike debt service overrides, it will establish a new higher base upon which all future increases are calculated. Like inflation, the cost never goes away.

The increase will begin a new cycle of still higher overrides.

Contractual obligations, pensions and health care benefits for current employees will consume all of the town's Prop 2 1/2 taxing capacity for the foreseeable future. Every new employee, new service or new state mandate creates a self-perpetuating cycle of more and higher overrides. If you do not say ENOUGH! your taxes will double in less than 10 years.

Escalating taxes are driving out Cohasset's middle-income families and seniors on fixed incomes.

Today, only 25% of those who provide services to Cohasset can still afford to live here. Most of these people are from families who for generations raised their children here and supported the town with their services and their taxes. They are a vanishing middle class. The seniors who for decades helped build the town and supported it with their volunteer services and their taxes cannot afford to remain.

We unequivocally support quality education in Cohasset public schools; we do not support misdirected spending.

We believe quality is characterized by several measures -- by academic success in the classroom; by students who go on to colleges or professions of their choice; by knowledge and ability demonstrated on SATs and continuous improvement on standardized tests. How can one justify a $200,000 generator or 8 new overhead positions when the obvious priority should be academic performance? Is it fair to ask the general public to subsidize full-day kindergarten or any nice-to-have activity when funding for academic subjects is the need? And, given the extraordinarily generous teachers' contract, isn't it appropriate to demand higher performance and accountability from the resources in place today?

Keep Cohasset Affordable!

Vote NO on the Override Questions.

A majority must vote NO on an Override question to defeat it.

OUR TOWN: OUR SCHOOLS: OUR FUTURE!

AS WE APPROACH THIS FINAL STAGE OF THE 2006 OVERRIDE CAMPAIGN EVERY CITIZEN SHOULD BE PREPARED TO MAKE A DECISION.

HERE ARE THE FACTS:

These are "Town Overrides"– both the $725k and $1,495k include funds for the schools, library, police and elder affairs office to mention a few.

THIS IS NOT AN "US VS. THEM CAMPAIGN". It's our town. We all vote and we all have the right to voice an opinion.

FACT:

As a town, we have seen decreasing support from the state in significant ways – argue over the exact amount but it is well over $1,000,000.

FACT:

As a town, we have said YES! to many infrastructure improvements. We still must pay for them. We are proud to have beautiful facades and we must continue to maintain and staff them.

FACT:

This override does NOT REQUIRE FUTURE OVERRIDES – every year we have the option to vote for whatever priorities we think are important to OUR TOWN.

FACT:

In the end, on MAY 6 you have a choice. You have the facts, and hopefully you care enough to make sure EVERY VOTER in your household votes.

FACT:

A YES! vote for $1,495k ensures we maintain our infrastructure and town supported services. It replaces critical services cut in the last three years, puts teachers back in the classrooms, and new books on the desks.

FACT:

A YES! vote for $725k is status quo. Our class sizes remain large, text books old, offerings for Advanced Placement will remain limited.

WE DO NOT TAKE STEPS TO REBUILD OUR TOWN!

FACT:

To limit confusion, supporters of improving our town should vote YES!YES! on Saturday, May 6th. Both Overrides can win, but the LARGEST OVERRIDE QUESTION to get a majority vote is passed.

Griffin tracks legal budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cutting back on litigation expenses has been the goal of the town for many years. In an expense report dated April 18, Town Manager Bill Griffin said he is happy to report, the town has spent roughly $12,000 less than it did last year.

In fiscal 2005, the original legal budget appropriation was $150,000. An additional $85,000 was added and expended, for a total of $235,000. For fiscal 2006, $150,000 was again originally appropriated, and the town added $40,000 to the legal budget at the Annual Town Meeting, for a total of $190,000. "I would note that, in fiscal 2004, a total of $318,426 was expended, so we are making some 'progress'," said Griffin.

Griffin came on board as Cohasset's Town Manager in January 2005, and began tracking legal and litigation expenses for that fiscal year, from the Boston law firm, Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, P.C., which serves as Town Counsel, for that fiscal year. He has continued that tracking for fiscal 2006, and has divided the bills into seven categories: real estate matters, labor matters, Zoning Board of Appeals, Planning Board, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, and general litigation.

"As the report indicates, through March 31 the town has expended a total of $103,985 in litigation expenses. For the same period last year, the town expended $115,951, a decrease to date of $11,996 for the same nine-month period," Griffin said. The report only lists litigation expenses, and not the $4,500 per month retainer fee the town pays Deutsch Williams. All tolled, the town has spent about 76 percent of its allocated legal funds.

The town has spent the most money to date on zoning board issues, with an allocation of roughly $30,400, or 29 percent of the town's legal spending to date. There have been 12 different zoning board cases, and the majority of the expenses were incurred in November and December of 2005 for matters related to Cohasset Cove.

After zoning, expenses associated with labor account for roughly 20 percent of what has been spent. Labor matters have cost the town $20,496 to date, and the majority of the costs are related to police union negotiations ($8,683), fire union discipline ($4,404), and items which come under the general heading of "labor matters," ($6,533).

Real estate issues account for roughly 17 percent of the town's payments, as $17,500 has been spent. While the Cook Estate cost the town roughly $6,800, general items included under miscellaneous real estate matters cost the town $7,900, making up the largest portion of the costs.

The Planning Board has had two legal matters to deal with this year, and together they total $15,125. That total equals 14.5 percent of the town's to-date legal expenses. The Board of Health has had one case, which has cost $6,769. The Conservation Commission has had six cases, which together total $6,943. The remainder of the expenses, or $6,673, has been spend on matters pertaining to the Cohasset Harbor Marina, CTC Communications, MBTA matters, cable licensing, and "general litigation."

Litigation expense report

Of the $103,985 expended through March 31 for litigation, the allocation by category is as follows:

Category	Expenses of total	Percent

Labor matters	$20,496	19.7
Real estate	$17,537	16.9
Planning Board	$15,125	14.5
Conservation	$6,943	6.7
Board of Health	$6,769	6.6
General	$6,673	6.4
Total		$103,985
Add $4,500 monthly retainer (through March)		$40,500
Total spent on legal to date		$144,485

ures fail, the town will work with a budget which does not increase property taxes more than the allowable 2-1/2 percent. If both figures receive a majority of "yes" votes, both pass, which means the higher figure prevails. In an override vote, the largest dollar amount to receive more "yes" votes than "no" votes always wins. The total number of yes votes does not matter.

If both overrides fail, the town as a whole will have to work within a budget of $32,891,761 — a budget which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2. Of that figure, $12,714,714 has been allocated for the schools, which is a 3 percent increase over the school department's fiscal 2006 allocation. Without an override, the school department says there will be a shortfall of roughly $505,000.

The town's $20,177,047 includes school-related costs, such as school building and field maintenance, health insurance, life insurance, property insurance, workers compensation, Medicare taxes, unemployment, pensions, debt service, and retired teachers' health insurance.

If voters approve the $725,000 override, the schools would receive an additional $530,000 (a 7.29 percent increase), and the town would receive $195,000 — of which $36,321 would be spent on fringe benefits for town and school employees. The school department says current services would be met with this level of funding, but new programs and additional personnel would not be added.

If voters approve the $1.495 million override, the school department would add $1.1 million to its budget (an 11.9 percent increase), and the town would add $395,000 to its budget. The school department would be able to add new programs and as many as 16 new school employees with the increase. The town would spend $216,321 of its $395,000 allocation on fringe benefits for town and school employees, and with the additional funding on the school side, there could be as many as 16 new school employees added to its payroll.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said it is important for everyone to know, "Our system can no longer absorb the effects of increased class sizes, lack of electives at the high school and deferring program improvements (i.e. engineering and technology) without impact. Our needs are real and will not go away."

MacCarthy said last November, the School Committee asked the superintendent to build a responsible budget, and "That has been done."

She added Cohasset voters also must know the School Committee wants to maintain the overall strength of the town's school system, and that takes funding. "The $725,000 override figure means no new programs, no additional high school electives, and no new staff to reduce class sizes. The $1.495 million appropriates an additional $1.1 million to the school budget. This will allow us to address our needs and move our school district forward," she said.

Terry Green of the Committee to Support Cohasset said it is imperative for Cohasset voters who believe more needs to be done to improve the schools vote "yes" for the $1.495 million which "restores critical education services taken away in the last three years."

"It is critical that every voter supporting the override shows up to vote on Saturday. Votes have been won and lost by as few as five votes, so every vote counts," he said.

On the other side of the issue, Anson Whealler of Enough, a political action committee against passing the $1.495 million override said voters need to remember voting an override in this weekend will be a permanent change. "It doesn't go away like some of the others do," as debt exclusion overrides are paid off over a number of years and then the debt goes away. The overrides which are on the ballot are operating budget overrides which become a permanent part of the tax base.

Whealler said the items which would be purchased this year with override funding would cost the town even more next year. Additional employees will add health insurance costs to the town's side of the budget and salaries will need to be paid which will include a raise every year. "People think they can afford it this year, but keep in mind, you're not just voting on this year," he said.

Above all, Whealler said regardless of how residents want to vote, the most important thing is that everyone knows how to vote to accomplish what they would like to see happen in the town. "You need to go into the voting booth with a good idea of what you need to mark on your ballot" to ensure every voice is heard, he said.

OFFICIAL BALLOT
SPECIAL TOWN ELECTION
COHASSET, MASSACHUSETTS
MAY 6, 2006

Marion L. Douglas, Town Clerk

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS

A. TO VOTE, completely fill in the OVAL to the RIGHT of your choice(s) like this ●

QUESTIONS

Questions 1a and 1b are separate questions. You may vote for or against each question independently. Each question requires a majority of those voting on that question to pass. If more than one question passes, the question with the highest dollar amount will prevail.

Question 1a: General Operating Override Pursuant to G.L. Chapter 59, section 21C

"Shall the Town of Cohasset be allowed to assess an additional $1,495,000 in real and personal property taxes for the purpose of meeting the operational expenses of the Municipal Government and Public Schools for the fiscal year beginning July 1, Two Thousand Six?"

YES
NO

Question 1b: General Operating Override Pursuant to G.L. Chapter 59, section 21C

"Shall the Town of Cohasset be allowed to assess an additional $725,000 in real and personal property taxes for the purpose of meeting the operational expenses of the Municipal Government and Public Schools for the fiscal year beginning July 1, Two Thousand Six?"

NO

Voter's guide

Voting at the special election is a simple process. Everyone has two votes, and everyone is being encouraged to use both. A "yes" vote counts toward passing an override figure. A "no" vote counts against passing an override figure. Leaving a question blank does not count for or against a figure.

Do you support both overrides? Vote "yes" for question 1a and "yes" for question 1b. An override question must receive a majority of "yes" votes in order to pass. State Prop. 2-1/2 regulations dictate when there is more than one override on the table, if both pass, the larger override figure always wins.

Do you support only the $725,000 override? Vote "no" for question 1a and vote "yes" for question 1b. Your vote against the larger figure will help ensure more "yes" votes are cast for the lower figure.

Do you support neither override? Vote "no" on both questions. Votes cast against both figures will combat the "yes" votes.

BE SURE TO VOTE

Hello Cohasset. How are you all doing during this wet, past week? The flowers are growing if nothing else. Anyways, tomorrow as we all know is a big voting day here in town. We all have opinions, thoughts and ideas and now is the time to come on out and vote for yours. I am hoping that by Sunday morning when we will most likely know the outcome, we all remember that we all still live here in town and whatever the vote, need to go forward and put things together as best we can. The saying goes something like, "It takes a village to raise a child." In the case of Cohasset, it takes us all to work with whatever the vote brings and come together to move ahead. Somehow, we can do it I think, how we do it is the biggest question. Make sure to come out tomorrow and vote and make sure to keep everything in perspective, especially when it comes to family, friends and residents.

KIDS HELPING KIDS

I want to let you all know about the event that was held last Friday at the Second Congregational Church. Thomson Jaffe, a local eighth-grader started "The By Kids 4 Kids Cabaret" idea and the show was last week. Entertainers from ages 11-16 performed and were absolutely wonderful. From piano playing to singing to Irish Step dancing, it was wonderful. When all was said and done, over $800 was raised to benefit the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation and the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. Thomson, along with all of the performers and supporters did a great job and it really puts your heart back into life so to speak. Working together when a cause has a focus and meaning is exactly what it is all about. Who knows, maybe plans are in the works for next years show?

OH BOY!

We have a wonderful little guy who has joined Cohasset as one of our newest residents. Marcus John Inferrera was born on March 15, 2006 to John and Sarah (Douglas) Inferrera and weighed in at 9 pounds 12 ounces and was 22-1/4 ins. long. Anthony is the big brother and Marion Douglas is the proud grandmother. Congratulations to this loving family on this addition to your family.

ONE-ACT PLAY

All are invited to attend a performance of the Cohasset Middle School's one act play "Small Actors" by Stephen Gregg on Friday, May 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Admission is $2. This production was presented at the Middle School Drama Guild's Festival on April 29 in Weston, Ma and gold honors were received for this wonderful performance. Please plan to attend and show your support for the theater arts!

MAD SCIENCE

The success and continuing achievement of the Carriage House are the result of ongoing support from many groups: the Parish Community, the parents of the children, and the community at large. To keep moving ahead in the area of early education, the school conducts a biannual fundraiser. This year the live auction/ fundraiser, titled "Mad Science" will be held on May 20, at 6 p.m. in Trueblood Hall. The evening is shaping up to be great fun with a BBQ dinner by RedBones, music, dancing, very creative "Mad Science" decor, and the live auction run by school parent/auctioneer Anthony Everett. Tickets are $35/person -- watch for your invitation in the mail!

If you have a donation idea, or question about the fundraiser, please contact Parish member Shirley Wallace (toddler room teacher at the Carriage House) or event co-chair, Lydia Everett at 781-383-6722.

Cohasset resident Patricia Sheerin reports record loss of body-fat without dieting (in fact she's eating more now), drugs or surgery. This writer was so intrigued by Patricia's story that a further investigation became necessary.

Patricia Sheerin
After

Cohasset residents are clamoring to know how she did it. Patricia reports the "secret" is the accountability, coaching and comprehensive system provided by her Fitness Together personal trainer. "At age 46, I have never felt better," says Sheerin. "The focused, personalized program designed specifically for me by my FT trainer has really been the answer to achieving my weight loss, fitness and appearance goals."

Following this personalized program, Patricia reports not only losing 14.9 lbs of fat in 9 weeks (reducing her body-fat by 10.5%), but also increasing her strength without adding any bulky muscle – in fact she's leaner and tighter than ever before, dropping two full dress sizes. Her energy and stamina have doubled and she is getting more attention and "looks" than she has in years – dramatically boosting her self image and self confidence.

When pressed for specific details on Patricia's "secret," she revealed there is an official guide available with powerful tips and strategies for men and women interested in achieving the level of success she has - just in time for the summer and bathing suit season.

'Objective' letter causes flap

Walsh apologizes for violating campaign law

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

School Superintendent Denise Walsh is looking to make amends for violating the campaign finance law by offering to personally reimburse Cohasset for costs incurred when she sent an informational override letter to the homes of every student in town.

The finance law states no public funds can be used to distribute information about a ballot question. With the town's divisive override election looming on Saturday, parents received a list of frequently asked questions from the school chief's office this week (also printed in last Friday's Mariner). Walsh insists the letter was meant to be purely informational.

Elementary students brought the letter home in their backpacks while it was mailed home to all middle-high school families.

"My intention was to provide clear, accurate budget information to parents and community members," Walsh stated in a prepared press release Wednesday. "I was of the impression that as long as I was objective and factual and did not advocate a position for or against the upcoming override vote, I could distribute FAQs to parents. The communication was not intended to advocate for a particular vote on a ballot question to voters or a class of voters; it was intended to be educational only."

Walsh went on to say that she has been advised that use of school resources is a violation of the law. "For this I do apologize. I will personally reimburse the town for time and materials used in the distribution of the FAQs," she stated. "I will also file (a state elections form) with the Town Clerk disclosing these expenditures."

She said she legal counsel for the School Committee met Wednesday morning with representatives of the state Office of Campaign and Political Finance to self-report the matter and "to assure them that it will not happen again."

After receiving the letter, some parents began to question whether it violated any laws. Using public funds to distribute information about a ballot question is illegal, and the letter was drafted by a school department employee, printed on a town computer, on school letterhead, and mailed from the school. The political action committee dubbed Enough — which is opposed to the $1.495 million override — filed a complaint with the state.

"Our members are pretty shocked this would happen," said Anson Whealler, president of Enough.

Denis Kennedy, a spokesman for the Secretary of State's elections division, said he would not comment specifically on Cohasset's situation without having all the information. However, he did say campaign finance law dictates town officials may not use public resources to proactively distribute unsolicited information regarding a ballot vote.

"Public resources should not be used for campaigns, that is what private ballot question committees are for," said Kennedy. "Speech and preparation of materials are both OK," if the materials are to be distributed at a meeting or given to someone who asks for them, he said. However, Kennedy said his office often receives questions about school involvement in elections and often reminds districts to avoid mailings and/or sending home any information with the students.

Kennedy said whether the contents of a distribution are intended to be purely informational or hope to sway a voter does not matter. He said funds used by town offices are tax dollars and may not be used for distribution of materials relating to a ballot question. Using school letterhead, ink from school printers, and the time spent by the employee who drafted the letter could all be considered use of public funds, he said.

The letters sent home with the children also violates state law because public employees who are not policy-making officials are prohibited from taking time during their workday to speak or act on behalf of a ballot question. According to the OCPF, "Public school teachers should not ask children to take literature regarding the substance of a ballot question home from school to give to parents."

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said he is sure Walsh did not mean to violate the law by sending out the letter. "Obviously she was under the impression that what she was doing was proper and legal and obviously she's also doing what it takes to make it right," he said.

As far as Enough filing the complaint with the OCPF, Slanetz said he believes that is counter-productive. "Frankly, it's forced the town to waste time and resources that could have been spent on the education of our children," he said.

Slanetz said when the question arose about the letter's legality, "The first step on their (members of Enough) part should have been to contact her. It would have been more constructive to contact her first," he said.

Kennedy said his office could choose to implement fines depending on the outcome of the investigation, which would likely be an amount equivalent to what it cost the town.

What town officials can do

- Discuss a ballot question, including at meetings of a governmental entity or at informational meetings of private groups.
- Take a position on a ballot question.
- Analyze the impact of a ballot question.
- Provide copies of the agency's analysis of and/or position on a ballot question, or other public documents, to persons requesting copies or to persons attending public meetings of a governmental entity.
- Hold an informational forum, participate in a forum held by a private group, and distribute a notice of the forum.
- Speak to the press.
- Post information on a government bulletin board or Web site.
- Allow private groups to use a public building for a meeting concerning a ballot question.
- Appear on cable television.
- Use their own personal funds to contribute to a ballot question committee or otherwise to support or oppose a ballot question.

For more information, please visit the Office of Campaign and Political Finance's Web site at www.mass.gov/ocpf.

What town officials cannot do

- Use public resources to distribute informational or advocacy materials regarding the ballot question once a question has been placed "on the ballot." Funds spent prior to a question being put on the ballot may also be subject to campaign finance law.
- Distribute even admittedly objective information regarding a ballot question unless expressly authorized by state law.
- Participate in fund raising to support or oppose a ballot question.

Hostile tone sets new pitch

neighbor's house, turned inside out, and an obscene illustration and statement were painted on their blank sides and posted in the Jenkins yard.

"I am disappointed but not the least bit surprised at the persistent vandalism. This is an example of how destructive and disrespectful certain segments of the community are. Civil debate has given way to the bullying tactics of coercion, threats and intimidation," Jenkins said.

"The lewd content of the two signs left on Saturday night was an affront to the entire community," she said. "This is not the way to conduct business in Cohasset."

Hussey said in his opinion, "The taking of the sign from the neighbor is just as big a concern" as the obscene sign left for Jenkins. He said the department was dusting for fingerprints.

Hussey said the community can be a great help in tracking down who is responsible for the stealing and vandalism. "People in the community need to be our eyes and ears," he said, and if anyone sees any suspicious activity, they should report it to the police as soon as possible. Those responsible for the vandalism are likely traveling in a car, and if witnesses see an incident taking place and can write down a license plate number, that will give the department something to go on.

Building Inspector Bob Egan said political signs are only allowed to be posted on private property. He said if signs are posted on town property, he has the right to pull them up, and on a few occasions when he has driven by and spotted signs on what is obviously town property such as a traffic island, he has taken them. "I don't throw them away" he said, adding he usually gets in touch with someone he knows who is affiliated with the group which posted the sign and returns it.

During this election, those on both sides are complaining about their fellow townspeople being less than neighborly over the override.

In today's paper Lynne Schwandt of Tower Road states in a letter to the editor that "Yes" signs have also been stolen.

And Barbara Buckley of North Main Street states in a letter she was mocked, attacked and insulted at the RTF for backing the override.

"I guess when one doesn't have facts to support an opinion, that tactics such as teacher-bashing, distortion of the truth and ridicule of voters must be employed. It's shameful," she stated.

Merle Brown of Beechwood Street had a "Vote No" sign on the back of his truck while he parked at the RTF on Saturday. Brown said he was there to work in the bottle shed and he also held "no' signs down by the RTF entrance for a while.

Brown said someone complained about an "illegal sign at the RTF" and a police officer told him he had to move his truck.

"I took the sign off and moved my truck but I went and talked to the police chief," said Brown, who supports the $725,000 override but not the $1.495 million override. "He's is going to investigate whether there is a ruling on that.

"What's the difference between having a sign on your car or a bumper sticker?" he asked, adding he didn't know of any bylaw restricting car signage.

CEA will provide rides to the polls

All Cohasset residents are being urged to get out and make their voices heard at the ballot box, this Saturday, May 6. To ensure seniors who might need a ride to the polls are able to cast their votes, the Council on Elder Affairs will be providing transportation. Voters will decide whether to pass a $1.495 million override, a $725,000 override, or vote them both down. Please call the CEA at (781) 383-9112 for more information on transportation.

Village work in full swing

Building (Historical Society headquarters) to the Community Center, Brook Street, Elm Street from Brook Street to South Main Street, and Depot Court.

Dormitzer said new pocket parks, decorative crosswalks, and many new trees, will serve as key features of the revitalization project. The pocket park at Depot Court and South Main Street will feature new trees with granite sets, city hall pavers, planters, and a large granite bench. The pocket park at Elm Street and South Main Street will feature new trees with granite sets and paving with city hall pavers. The curbing on Elm Street and continuing north adjacent to Saint Stephen's will be new granite with a rolled top edge to allow emergency vehicles to avoid cars backing from the diagonal spaces across the street.

Both parks will connect with decorative crosswalks paved with concrete pavers and banded with granite. All new crosswalks will feature this treatment. In all, the project will add 12 new trees including Bradford and Chanticleer Pears and Lindens plus evergreen shrubs and flowering perennials. The memorial island at Depot Court and South Main Street will be rebuilt and replanted.

South Main Street adjacent to Saint Stephen's has been widened by the removal of a portion of the granite ledge below the church, to create a safer sidewalk. All curbing used in the project will be new and uniform. The specification requires that it be granite, "flamed" or roughened on exposed surfaces to produce a natural look. The sidewalk surface is asphalt. If possible it will have some additional treatment to improve its appearance, Dormitzer said.

At this time, Dormitzer said the project is able to fund new drainage and catch basins throughout the Village and will repave South Main Street and Depot Court, but cannot repave or re-curb Elm and Brook streets. "The town is hoping for favorable news from the state on an increase in the current grant to cover Elm and Brook streets," Dormitzer said. Should those funds become available, the town would consider the under-grounding of wires on South Main Street from Brook Street to Elm Street.

John Knowlton of Northern Construction picks up rock and rubble by the side of St. Stephen's with an excavator while getting the area ready for the sidewalk to be installed. The project should be completed by Memorial Day.

The $1.8 million Village Revitalization project is being paid for through grants, not local property taxes. A good portion of the funding is coming from a state PWED grant (Public Works Economic Development).

Streetscape improvements have been sidetracked over the years due to disagreement over how much and exactly what should be done to revitalize the village area. Redesigns of the plans have cost the town time and money, and the town had to ask for an extension of the PWED grant to keep the project going. Northern Construction was awarded the bid for the project last winter.

Dormitzer said the project as it stands today is the outgrowth of a 16-year effort. He recalled back in 1990, Philip Smith, Cohasset resident and owner of Designers' Creations, proposed a Cohasset Village Renaissance to renew and improve the appearance of the Village.

"It was to be the beginning of a series of volunteer projects in the Village, including the building of the Town Pump, the improvement of the James Brook Walkway, the clearing of the pocket park adjacent to French Memories, and the painting of the murals depicting the seasons," he said.

Dormitzer's wife Jackie, along with Elizabeth Christoffel and Ann Whelan, evolved into the Village Revitalization Committee, formed by the Chamber of Commerce in 1996. The Chamber sought to improve the physical appearance of the Village to include new sidewalks, trees, landscaping, street lamps, and under grounding of the utility lines.

Among the ideas generated by the Revitalization Committee was the Village Farmers Market. Led by Anna Abbruzzese, it became a highly successful weekly event held every summer, which continues today. Between 1996 and 2000, the committee applied for a series of planning grants which resulted in the formation of the Village Revitalization Corporation in 2000. Funded by Peter Roy and Gerd Ordelheide, the corporation hired Dean Rizzo as its executive director and engaged the Cecil Group design firm to develop a Village Streetscape and Circulation Improvement Program. The scope of the program included the Village retail area, Elm Street and the Cove including an enhanced Harbor Walk.

The Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS and Juvenile Diabetes Research foundations will soon receive a donation on behalf of Cohasset's residents.

Thanks to eighth-grade student Thomson Jaffe who coordinated the "By Kids 4 Kids Cabaret," held at the Second Congregational Church in the afternoon of April 28, more than $875 was raised to be split between the two organizations.

"It was great. It's a real credit to Thomson for conceiving and organizing the event. She did all the organizing and working with students who were going to perform," said Thomson's proud mother, Susan.

Thomson decided to hold the fund-raiser for both organizations because they both support causes near to her heart. After seeing the movie "Rent," in which two of the main characters are HIV positive, she began doing research into the disease and wanted to do something to help the cause. She also has a friend who developed juvenile diabetes in kindergarten, and the two charities together allowed her to help causes which support children she has never met from around the world, as well as friends at home.

"I felt really good that I had succeeded in doing something to help people around the same age as myself, who are in serious discomfort everyday," Thomson says. "I did a lot of research on both foundations, and believe that the work that they are doing in very important. The result of the benefit exceeded my expectation (I had originally hoped to make $400, and I ended up earning almost $900)."

There was no charge for tickets, but attendees were asked to make donations in support of the two research groups at the door.

There were roughly12 acts, including a performance from the entire High School Jazz Ensemble, which brought the total number of performers up to 40 middle and high school students. There was also an Irish step dancing performance, students who played the piano and guitar, and musical duos.

The event drew a multigenerational crowd as everyone from elementary school students to grandparents attended. There were between 50 and 60 people in attendance, which Susan said "Is pretty impressive for a Friday afternoon." In fact, the day went so well, Thomson has plans to coordinate a similar fund-raiser next year.

Hockey, open skate to honor Kurt Gritzan

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Kurt Gritzan loved hockey. According to his parents Christine and Ken Gritzan, hockey was Kurt's passion. And like many young players he hoped to make it to the pros one day.

Kurt's dream was tragically cut short by cancer. He passed away on April 26.

But the 16-year-old's warm smile, friendly demeanor, and solid friendship won't be forgotten.

Corbin Faber, a junior at Cohasset High School and a friend and teammate of Kurt's, said one of his foremost memories of Kurt was a recent trip to Florida, in which he and Kurt joined three other good friends for a week's vacation.

"He was just a really good kid," said Faber. "The thing about Kurt was, even going through everything he was going through, he never drew attention to it. He never complained about it."

"He was just a really good kid."
— Corbin Faber, friend and teammate

This Saturday starting at 5:15 p.m., at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham, Kurt's many friends will have the chance to visit with one another and share their recollections in a special service and event in Kurt's memory.

There will be a short service followed by an inter-squad hockey game and then open skate for both students and adults. Cohasset High also plans to retire Kurt's hockey jersey.

Kurt was a contributor to the 2004-05 team that came within one win of qualifying for the state tournament. Faber says Kurt offered a lot more to the team than just his playing abilities.

"He was an inspiration," Faber said. "It was great every time he was on the ice. It just got the team so pumped up."

Cohasset High School Athletic Director Ron Ford recalls Kurt's first game for the Skippers that season.

"I remember him being out there on the ice, and it was pretty cool just to see him out there," Ford said. "He was absolutely beaming afterward. He made a real push to play that night."

This year, the hockey players all wore a "KG" sticker on their helmets in honor of Kurt.

Assistant Principal Mike Gill said when students first heard about Kurt's passing some used the guidance and counseling staff for support at the high school.

A youth prayer service was held Sunday at St. Stephen's.

Gill described Kurt as quiet and well behaved. He said he had a great number of close friends. "He really loved hockey and he never caused a problem for us at school," he said.

Kurt Gritzan's family and his many friends will skate in his honor Saturday.

For Kurt Gritzan's obituary, see page32.

'An utter joy to be around'

By Ben Virga
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Kurt Gritzan passed away Wednesday, April 26th well before anyone who ever met him was ready to see him go. He was a teenager, a son, a friend, a hockey player and, for so many people, an inspiration. Kurt suffered from cancer and the only part of having this disease that ever made his trademark smile disappear was when it took him away from playing hockey. His passion and love for the sport were truly symbols of how he lived his life and how much joy his presence spread to those he interacted with even if it was only for a few moments.

There are so many words that come to mind when the name Kurt Gritzan is mentioned. From charismatic, charming and nice to tough, strong, fearless and brave there was never a shortage of adjectives when it came to describing Kurt. In reality none of these words could even come close to doing justice to the character, integrity and compassion that defined Kurt as a person.

More often than not these words ring hollow when compared to the feelings Kurt allowed us to experience. Even though Kurt was ill, and the evidence of his struggle could be seen in his every movement, he never opened any conversation or interaction with anything but a smile. He always was aware of how his condition was impacting those around him and was able to make people three times his age feel more comfortable about his situation.

He consoled us when it was him we were trying to cheer up and propped us up when it was him we wanted to help stand. Kurt would brighten our day and it was not till after you were done talking with him that you realized you had started out trying to brighten his. Kurt could make us laugh when we thought we were going to cry and he could lighten the mood in any situation even though his daily struggle was never a laughing matter.

He consoled us when it was him we were trying to cheer up and propped us up when it was him we wanted to help stand.

Kurt never wanted any attention or special treatment and really begged to be treated as normal as possible. It was impossible to treat Kurt normal, not because he was sick, but because he was special and amazing and a complete and utter joy to be around. It was these qualities that made him being ill so unfair and made those who loved him question the wisdom of any higher power for allowing this to happen. While everyone who ever met him is deeply saddened by his passing we are also aware of how incredibly lucky we all are to have had Kurt as a part of our life.

We are lucky because we were able to witness firsthand Kurt's amazing presence and see someone who was the very definition of a caring, compassionate and empathetic person. We were able to see the way he made it OK for his friends to handle this emotional battle and how he kept them going even as their hearts were breaking when he relapsed this past year. In the end Kurt did show much for the people in his life that simply wanted to do something for him. He gave us so much hope when we started out thinking how hopeless this all had become.

We were able to share in his joy during those games and practices when his body would begrudgingly agree to let him participate in the sport he loved. We saw his toughness when he would leave 5 a.m. practice early to drive to Boston to get chemotherapy and his humility when he would ask for permission every time to leave the ice earlier than the rest of his teammates. He shared his passion when he would defy the doctor's wishes and put on his skates when he had no business being on the ice and gave us inspiration when he would do it again the very next game.

Kurt was so much more than anything that could ever be summarized or described while at the same time serving as a lesson to us all. He showed everyone he met that even when life is unjust or unfair you are still responsible for how you move within the world in which you live. There is no better example of someone who moved within his world with class, grace and beauty than Kurt Gritzan. He will be grieved, he will be missed but anyone who was lucky enough to cross his path will never forget him.

Ben Virga was Kurt's hockey coach at Cohasset High.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Sunday morning

The Cohasset Mariner has been a fixture in town since 1978 and the current editor has been at her post since March 1992.

So here at your newspaper, we have some perspective on the town and local politics.

Overrides in Cohasset are always contentious affairs. But this one – perhaps because the stakes are so high – will go down as one of the ugliest battles over a potential tax hike in the town's history.

Instead of civil debate and respect for differences of opinion, this override election, in some cases, has turned neighbor against neighbor. As emotions run high, the campaign has evolved into a bruising fight with figurative punches being thrown back 'n' forth.

Some view this election as "us" versus "them:" the "old" versus the "new," the townie versus well-healed newcomer. We know that is not the case. We also know this is not a "haves" versus "have-nots," an "old" versus "young" or a "parent with schoolchildren" versus a "parent with grown children" battle either. While many affluent residents support the override, there are those who do not. While many less affluent residents support the override, there are those who do not. Many parents back the override, but there are those who also oppose it. The same can be said for our senior citizens, some in favor, some not.

At the 11th hour, there is probably no hope in changing the tone of this election. As would be expected, there will be cheerleaders on both sides of the issue out in force all day Saturday exercising their freedom of speech along "election row."

But when 6 p.m. rolls around, there are going to be winners and losers. So where does Cohasset go from there?

We worry come Sunday morning Cohasset will wake up as a house still divided. We fear those on the losing side will be both disappointed and angry and the gap between the "yes's" and "no's" will be much wider than any numerical result tallied at the ballot box.

A healing process cannot begin without enough introspection to figure out how the town reached this divide. We have to believe that better, more open communication all around would be a good start. Perhaps appointing a committee to look at how to improve communication among the various boards and especially, between the school department and Town Hall would be a positive step. (We look at the success of the Economic Development Committee as an example of how a new committee with a specific charge can really make a difference).

Here at the Mariner we would like to do our part by writing more feature stories about innovative programs and activities at the schools. We, like all of you, have busy schedules – so we ask school officials, teachers, parents and students to send us ideas.

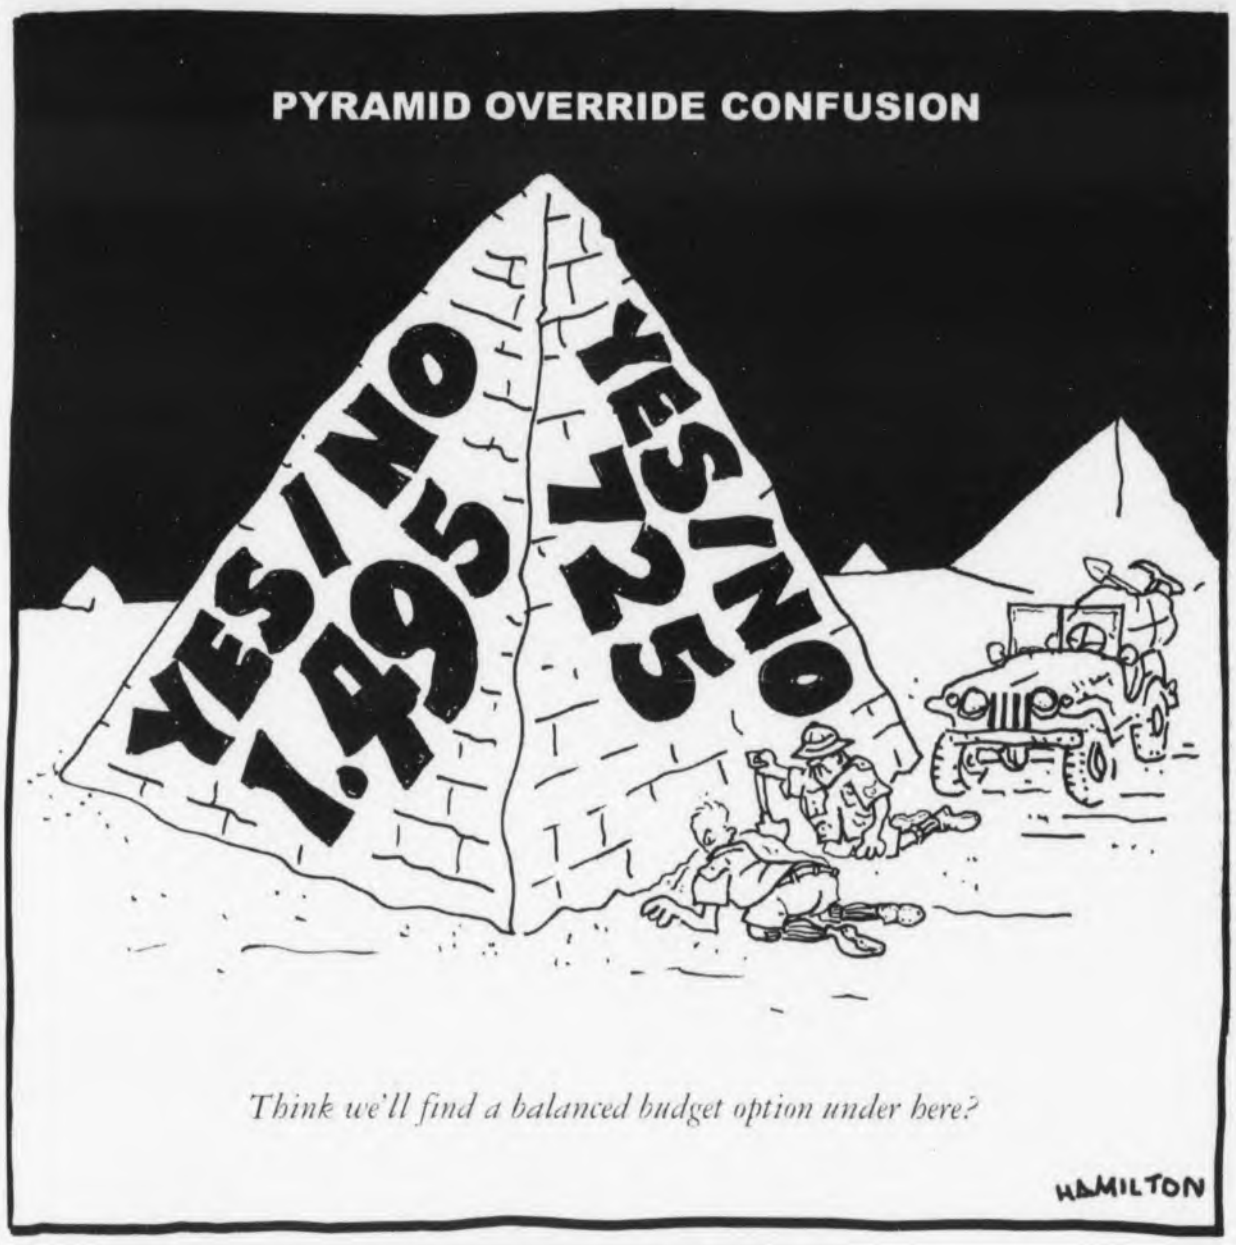
Yet, with all that being said – override battles will not go away until the town can solve its revenue problem. Here in Cohasset, there are efforts to grow the commercial tax base without changing the town's character – that should help.

But the real change has to come at the state level. Selectmen and the School Committee need to put Cohasset to the forefront of towns knocking on the doors at Beacon Hill to find ways to take more education costs off the backs of the property taxpayer.

Selectmen received a letter this week from North Andover which states it is also "struggling to provide adequate municipal and school services in an environment of ever-increasing mandates and rising costs."

The North Andover Board of Selectmen is asking Cohasset to support pending legislation, dubbed the "Acton Bill," regarding Chapter 70 (education aid) that would increase the minimum education aid available to a municipality. In Cohasset's case, that would translate into $1.7 million over its current distribution by fiscal year 2009.

Support for that bill is something we can all rally around – despite which side wins the majority on Saturday.



LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Opponents' tone uncalled for

TO THE EDITOR:

I feel shocked and saddened by the tone the opponents of the override have taken recently, particularly by the folks who were campaigning at the dump this past Sunday. Never would I have imagined that I would be mocked, attacked and insulted for my opinion by a fellow townsperson, particularly when my three young boys were clearly visible in the back seat and hearing every word. I guess when one doesn't have facts to support an opinion, that tactics such as teacher-bashing, distortion of the truth and ridicule of voters must be employed. It's shameful.

Override supporters know that in this era of shrinking state aid, exponentially increasing fixed costs and additional unfunded state and federal mandates, that both levels of the override are necessary to prevent further erosion of quality services and education in Cohasset. I am proud of those of us who have worked to educate voters with a clear presentation of facts, logic and analysis in a calm and respectful tone. It's too bad many opponents of the override are unable to say the same. It's just one more reason to vote yes, yes on Saturday, May 6.

Override: 'not just a one-time deal'

TO THE EDITOR:

I recently complained about the lack of zeroes in the pro override ads, mailings and posters.

This $725,000 or the $1,495,000 will be "forever."

It's not just a one-time deal.

Now, our superintendent of schools, Denise Walsh, has sent home with every child an informational sheet advising all the kid's families to push for this exorbitant override. It's unfortunate that on school time, using the school facilities and using school department paper is printing and distributing this "pro override" message.

It appears that the forcing of this unrealistic override by a few people is the only thing on their minds – no matter how it gets done.

We, that large group of us that cannot afford this, have to say no!

Fran Coffey Memorial Walk

TO THE EDITOR:

Many thanks to the Rotary, volunteers, and walkers who participated in the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk.

Fran would have been so pleased to see so many friends remembering him and contributing to his favorite charities. Father Waldron's " People in Need" in Roxbury and the Bishop Ruocco House for Girls in Lakeville certainly appreciate your generosity. We are fortunate to have such good friends.

'What we really value about our community'

COMMENTARY

CHARTIS TEBBETTS

At this late date, I think it is important to be reminded of what the override questions are really all about. Cohasset and all of our neighboring towns have been challenged in recent years to maintain town and school services. We are all struggling because the financial resources we need are not there. State and federal aid has been cut back. State assessments have increased. Populations of students and elders needing services have significantly increased. And citizens are rightfully concerned about increasing our property taxes, already difficult for many on fixed and/or limited income. The property tax is a regressive tax, and often reflects ownership of a highly appreciated asset, rather than available cash to pay bills.

The override options give all of us a chance to say what we really value about our community. 'Pride of ownership' is part of the deliberations we are each going through. Monday when I went to Town Hall to pay my taxes, I saw a neighbor drive into the parking lot in a large SUV. This same neighbor has signs in his yard saying he has had to give up coffee and bagels to stay in his home, and urges us to vote 'no' on the overrides. I rarely go out for coffee, and I drive a hybrid. On 8 gallons of gas ($24) I go about 380 miles. I imagine $24 takes his SUV about 120 miles (15 miles/gal.). If we both drive 12,000 miles in a year, he pays $2400 for gas and I pay $750. So you see, we really do have choices. I choose to spend a part of my savings ($2400 - 750 = 1650) on the increase in my real estate taxes, to show pride in my community and to continue to support the town that has been very good to me and my families.

If the increased tax burden is simply not possible, I have no quarrel with your 'no' votes. And if the override(s) pass, all of us have an obligation to help you deal with your struggle to pay your taxes and stay in the community that we all love. Asking for relief from the state and federal governments would be the logical place to start. If the override(s) fail, then those of you voting 'no' have an equal obligation to those who will need to manage with reduced services: our students, young families, neighbors who will lose their Town of Cohasset jobs, elders, and others.

If you can afford it and believe the sacrifice is worth it, please vote 'yes' on the override questions on Saturday. If you truly cannot afford to increase your property taxes 10 percent or so, your 'no' vote(s) are honest and completely understandable.

But if you can afford the 10 percent increase and decide to vote 'no', I urge you to reconsider. If the overrides fail, the quality of services in Cohasset will be lower for our most vulnerable citizens — the children and the elders.

On Saturday May 8th, I also hope we can begin to restore some of the civility that this and other recent campaigns have eroded. Whatever the outcome, let's stop the threats, the hostility, the false accusations, misinformation, and the negativity. Whatever the outcome, lots of us are going to need some help.

Chartis Tebbetts lives on Jerusalem Road Drive.

Dispute resolution with MBTA invoked

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

We have seen over and over in this project that the MBTA will find every opportunity to cut cost from the Greenbush project.

It's been several weeks since we've written an update in these pages and it is overdue. A lot is happening. So, here's what we know.

As you can see, amid much cheering, Sohier Street actually opened slightly ahead of schedule. The MBTA really worked hard to have this crossing operable before the Music Circus season starts. However, like the crossing at Lower King Street, construction is not really complete. After the Music Circus season is finished, the MBTA will complete this crossing. Remaining are the traffic islands, crossing gates, power pole relocations and other details. A new sidewalk needs to be completed on the Pratt Library side of Sohier Street. This new walk will run from the Music Circus all the way to Ripley Road, where it will connect to the existing sidewalk in front of the Pratt Library.

Lower King Street crossing still needs its finishing touches. We have no schedule for this completion.

North Main Street crossing near the Cohasset Golf Club and Woodside Cemetery is now closed for construction. We don't expect this to be closed for a very long time. Construction wise, it is a simple crossing since there are no utilities or drainage pipes that will need the attention of the contractor. Almost all of the work is confined to the top surfaces. We expect this to take about a month, more or less. Of course, like with any construction, weather is a huge unknown factor in determining completion time.

Pleasant Street is scheduled to be completed May 8th. We seriously doubt that this date will be met. But, we do expect completion to be one or two weeks from May 8th. If you happen to drive by this area note how high the rail tracks are with respect to the surrounding area. The crossing will be quite a bit higher than the old street level and surrounding areas will be reconstructed to blend in.

There are two issues we'd like to call to your attention. We think these are serious problems for Cohasset.

• First, the Mitigation Agreement that the MBTA signed with the Town calls for the MBTA to reconstruct the Town Parking Lot at their expense. Further, this agreement calls for a minimum of 182 Public Parking Spaces in the redesigned Town Parking Lot. The MBTA engineers entered into a tacit understanding with the prior Town Manager to accept 21 fewer Public Parking Spaces than the Mitigation Agreement requires. The additional parking spaces are designed to be on private property and, therefore, cannot be considered as Public Parking Spaces, since they are not available to the public.

This tacit agreement was in violation of the terms of the Mitigation Agreement, which states, "This Agreement may not be modified or amended in whole or in part except by a written instrument signed by all parties to this Agreement." The parties to the Mitigation Agreement were the Cohasset Board of Selectmen and the Secretary of Transportation. Neither of these parties has formally agreed or signed off on a reduction in the number of Public Parking Spaces to be provided by the MBTA. For this reason, The Board of Selectmen has voted unanimously to invoke the Dispute Resolution provisions of the Mitigation Agreement in order to have the MBTA provide the required 182 Public Parking Spaces. The last thing Cohasset can afford is a reduction in the number of parking spaces in our Town Parking Lot.

• The second critical item deals with the MBTA's original promise to create a pedestrian walk on Town property connecting the Town Parking Lot to the village sidewalks at Depot Court. This sidewalk connectivity was shown on the drawings submitted as a part of the Cohasset / MBTA Mitigation Agreement describing the Parking Lot and Pleasant Street crossing configurations. It was also designed to meet with the downtown Village Revitalization project, which as you know is well along. Since then, the MBTA has unilaterally pulled their limit of construction back, away from the intersection toward the Pleasant Street tracks and eliminated the connecting sidewalk. This leaves a gap between the MBTA construction and Revitalization construction – sort of a No Man's Land. The Selectmen have agreed that this pedestrian access is a key component to making this whole area work in a pedestrian safe manner. Consequently, this sidewalk and reduced limit of construction will also be added to the topics under the Dispute Resolution process.

We have seen over and over in this project that the MBTA will find every opportunity to cut cost from the Greenbush project. As taxpayers, cost reduction is fine with us unless it reduces the features they had agreed to provide to the Town of Cohasset in our Mitigation Agreement. As recently as April 7th the MBTA told us they were trying to find a way to help us. This discussion appears to have gone nowhere. Based on what has transpired to date, the Town will probably have to begin Dispute Resolution.

Revitalization

Speaking of Revitalization, we are in the worst part of that project now, which includes tearing up and redoing the streets. We know that this has been very inconvenient for all concerned, but the worst in nearly over. The base coat of asphalt should be laid in the street areas early next week. Then things will get better quickly. Base coats of asphalt will also be placed in the sidewalk, and then the new granite curb will be set into place. Once these steps are completed, the top asphalt coat can be placed in the street and sidewalks. These steps will happen in rapid succession, so additional downtown disruption will be minimized.

The Town has also gotten funding to put new storm drainage on Brook and Elm Streets. This was a part of the original project, but was dropped when the monies we had were insufficient to do all of the Brook and Elm Streets work. Now, we are able to add back the drainage in these two streets. Perhaps, if we find more money, we will be able to complete the street and sidewalk work at a later date. The drainage work will start immediately and will be finished in a week or a week and a half. We will only do one street at a time and coordinate with the ongoing work on South Main Street so that traffic flow can be maintained. It is still out intention to have all of the major construction work complete by Memorial Day.

A few thoughts from the Windy City

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

As I watched him hurry across the street and into a bar I learned something else I'll pass along: in Chicago they sell bus tickets in bars.

Dear Cohasset:

Unfortunately I can't write an article for the paper this week because I'm in Chicago on business, but I thought I'd at least drop a line to tell you how my trip is going.

I spent the first six hours stuck in Logan Airport, because all flights into Chicago were delayed due to high winds. We finally got on board but I swear that every year they inch the seats closer together. The guy in front of me tilted back and suddenly his head was in my lap. I remember the days when the only people barred from flying were Palestinian terrorists and a couple of my New Bedford relatives. Since then they've expanded the no-fly list to include anyone with knees. Anyway we touched down into a crosswind gust that nearly blew the plane off the runway but we made it.

Chicago is a city out west— almost as far as Indiana. It's called "The Windy City", but apparently the nickname refers to political rhetoric and has nothing to do with the weather. I got that info from a Chicago native I met outside the airport. I love picking up local tidbits like this — stuff the typical clueless tourist doesn't know. The man also told me his wallet had been stolen and he needed $10 for a bus ticket home, so I gave him the money and wished him well. As I watched him hurry across the street and into a bar I learned something else I'll pass along: in Chicago they sell bus tickets in bars. That could be very helpful to know.

My daughter had asked me to get her something from the American Girl Place, so I checked it out. They had solid mahogany beds for under $400, which I thought was fantastic until I saw the size of the thing. More like a doll's bed if you ask me. The only item they had in the $20 range was a catalog, so I picked up one of those. I hope she likes it.

Right across the street is the Chicago Water Tower, which is this famous building designed to help fight fires. By some miracle of serendipity it was completed just a few years before the Great Fire of 1871, which burned every structure in the city to ashes except for the water tower, because it was made of stone. They've kept it around and even spruced it up a little since then. They really love that tower.

As I headed back to my hotel an old woman came up to me looking a little batty. "I hear music all the time," she said. As gently as I could, I told her she needed help and brought her to a policeman. Turns out it was just her cell phone. That happens to me a lot. My phone plays Beethoven's Fifth and it's usually about half way through the song before I realize it's ringing. In my defense that second movement is kind of quiet. I should probably switch to Mahler.

Of course the other big thing about Chicago is Oprah. I don't mean Oprah herself is big. Well actually she is kind of big. Except on her magazine cover. That's another thing I learned here: all those cover photos were taken during one particular week in 1998, and they managed to shoot enough to last well into the next decade. It's that kind of PR planning that makes Oprah such an inspiration.

The people in Chicago are unusually friendly. Total strangers will meet your eye and smile as you enter their shop. I couldn't figure out why everyone was so well-behaved. Then I found out there's a huge reading convention going on and the city is overrun with teachers from all over the country. I was lunching at a swank downtown restaurant, wining and dining a few folks from Wachovia Bank, and three women at the next table scolded me for wearing my baseball cap backwards and having my feet on the table. I said, "Hey, I think you left a few children behind." They sent me to the manager's office but I totally snuck a piece of broiled salmon into my sport coat and scarfed it later during the meeting.

Well, say hi to everyone for me. I'll be sure to write an article next week.

—John

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, but he's currently stuck in Chicago's O'Hare Airport, where his flight out has been delayed due to high winds.

Capital offenses

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The U. S. Supreme Court is about to decide whether the Founding Fathers had sodium pentathol, pancuronium bromide and potassium chloride in mind when they wrote the Eighth Amendment.

That's the one that bans cruel and unusual punishments, like watching Tom Cruise movies and other tortures.

The key figure in the case is Clarence Hill, a Florida man who killed a cop in 1982 and has been waiting on death row for 23 years for his sentence to be carried out by lethal injection.

That's the way it's done in all but one of the 38 states that still have to death penalty for capital offenses. Nebraska still uses the electric chair — or "Old Sparky," as the macho talk show hosts like to call it.

Lethal injection involves three drugs: sodium pentathol to kill the pain, pancuronium to paralyze and potassium chloride to induce a heart attack. Hill's people claim it still causes pain, therefore it's cruel and unusual.

As near as I can make out, the nine justices are being asked, "Is it okay to hurt him when we kill him?"

Huh?

Fortunately, Massachusetts will not have to worry about the question since our last execution was May 9, 1947, at 12:17 a.m. to be exact when Dutchy Gertson of Everett and Philip Bellino of Boston faced Old Sparky for killing Tex Williams, an ex-Marine from Haverhill, who they feared would rat on them for a dice game holdup.

The last execution with a distinct South Shore flavor was Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti on Aug. 23, 1927, for the murder of Frederick Parmenter, the shoe company paymaster, and Allessandro Beradelli, his guard, during a payroll robbery in South Braintree seven years before.

Before that there was Harry Marshall (aka Enrico Mascioli) of Hull, who was paid $35 by Mrs. Lena Cusumano to kill her husband, Frank, in Nantasket in 1910. They must not have fooled around with appeals in those days for Marshall was executed June 6, 1912. Mrs. Cusumano also got death but her sentence was commuted the day before.

Oscar Bartolini, a handyman from Quincy, was sentenced to death for the murder of Grayce Asquith in the Willows section of Weymouth but the sentence was commuted by Gov. Leverett Saltonstall in 1939 and he was eventually freed on parole in 1960.

What is believed to be the first execution in English-speaking America was carried out on the South Shore when John Billington, one of the original Pilgrims often referred to as the Black Sheep of the Plymouth Colony, was hanged in 1630 for pointing his blunderbuss at his neighbor John Newcomen and blowing him away.

The only woman executed in Massachusetts was Bathsheba Ruggles Spooner of Worcester, who hired three soldiers, one American and two British, to do away with her husband, Joshua. All three were hanged July 2, 1778, after which Mrs. Spooner was found to be five months pregnant.

Probably the most famous execution in Massachusetts was that of Harvard Professor John Webster, who beat Dr. George Parkman over the head with a piece of kindling over a $400 debt and cut up the body into little pieces. He was hanged in August, 1850.

Shortly after, the noted lawyer Benjamin Butler was grilling a witness in another case a bit too harshly and was cautioned by the judge that the witness was a Harvard professor.

"I know, judge," said Butler. "We hanged one the other day."

Or so the story goes.

HEALTH NOTES

Sun and bugs can have a nasty bite

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

May is National Melanoma/Skin Cancer Detection and Prevention Month.

Spring is here, and it's time to talk about how you can derive the most from the lovely place in which we live. Spring causes us to abandon the bunker mentality of winter and get outside. The standard stuff we teach our kids to dress appropriately, we sometimes forget ourselves. For example if it's going out into the woods, protect yourself against scratches, bug bites, ticks, etc. wear long sleeves; use a hat, take something warm when the weather changes, cause if you don't, it will. And do the protection thing: socks over pant legs to protect from biting insects and ticks. Deet: above 25 percent for adults, less for kids and netting for infants.

And don't forget the spring necessities for the house and outside. Put up the screens, get out the hoses and gardening paraphernalia. Clean up the winter's debris, and while you're at it, look for sites where standing water can collect – Turn over or remove containers in your yard where water collects, such as old tires, potted plant trays, boats, buckets and toys.

• Clean out birdbaths and wading pools once a week.

• Clean roof gutters and downspout screens regularly.

• Eliminate standing water on tarps and flat roofs.

• Do not allow water to collect in your garbage can.

Any standing water is an invitation to mosquitoes and other insects to spawn larvae which will become the insects that plague us all summer.

Exposure to the sun

And don't forget to once again start protecting yourself from the sun. We've mentioned the hat; perhaps with a wide brim, and also, sunglasses, and if you're out much it's probably time to start the sunblocker. Melanoma's a constant threat. Exposure to sun at an early age is a major risk factor for melanoma later in life.

May is National Melanoma/Skin Cancer Detection and Prevention Month. The month is dedicated to increasing public awareness of the importance of skin cancer prevention, early detection, and treatment, including basal cell, squamous cell, and melanoma. According to the United States Cancer Statistics: 1999–2002 Incidence and Mortality Report, 44,582 new cases of malignant melanoma were diagnosed in this country in 2002, the most recent year for which statistics are currently available. That same year, melanomas of the skin claimed the lives of 7,513 Americans. Although death rates from basal cell and squamous cell carcinomas are low, these cancers can cause considerable damage and disfigurement if they are untreated. However, when detected early, approximately 95 percent of these carcinomas can be cured.

Exposure to the sun's ultraviolet (UV) rays appears to be the most important environmental factor involved in the development of skin cancer. When used consistently, sun-protective practices can prevent skin cancer. On the other hand, UV rays from artificial sources of light, such as tanning beds and sunlamps, are as dangerous as those from the sun and should also be avoided. Although both tanning and burning can increase a person's risk for skin cancer, most Americans do not consistently protect themselves from UV rays. A survey sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) found that approximately 43 percent of white children under age 12 had at least one sunburn during the past year.

So this spring, get out and get some exercise, but use good sense and protect yourself from spring's natural risks. If you need to discuss anything we've talked about here call Joe Godzik, the Health Agent, at the Board of Health.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

'Every year we're asked for more'

COMMENTARY

ANSON WHEALLER

Your money and your kids. It's hard to think of two other topics that are as emotionally charged. Some think these two concerns are on a collision course in tomorrow's override vote. But I think differently.

Tomorrow's vote is not a referendum on the excellence and future of Cohasset's schools. I think of it, rather, as in intervention for a town that has become an override junkie. Think of the very word "override." Doesn't it connote a temporary measure to be used infrequently in emergency situations? As in, "If ketchup starts squirting out of that machine over there, hit the override button in a hurry, or we're in for a flood!" But that's not the way it has come to be used in our town. Here the override button is the de facto way we permanently circumvent the governmental thrift and frugality intended by Prop. 2-1/2.

Every year we're asked for more. And then more on top of that. But what has happened to the idea that tax dollars are still our dollars? And that we are entitled to public officials who wring every last bit of public good out of every last cent we pay before even thinking of asking for more? Whether we are rich, middle-income, or poor; whether we are elderly or just starting out; whether we have kids in school or are empty-nesters, I think we deserve no less than this. Isn't that the way most of us have to run our own homes? Why should we accept less from our Town?

So this is why I think every Cohasset parent should find it acceptable — even imperative — to vote against the two override questions on the ballot: it's your money, and you will need it. Your children's education does not end at Grade 12. My younger stepson will receive his master's degree in May, so I am painfully aware that the average yearly cost of a four-year private college is about $32,000 today. How much will it be when your children are ready for college? How much will you have paid in override taxes by that time? How many children do you have? Are you prepared?

Without the two override articles, the Cohasset schools will still thrive. Some tough choices will have to be made, but they should be made. Don't you face tough choices in your own budget? For the things that are truly important, the money will always be found. Don't you find that to be true in your own home?

I invite you to vote NO on both override questions. After all, it's your money. Save it for your kids.

Little primer based on 'facts'

COMMENTARY

TERRY GREEN

As we approach this final stage of the 2006 Override Campaign every citizen should be prepared to make a decision. By now, most of the messages are so diametrically opposed it probably has become confusing so a little primer based on "facts":

• These are "Town Overrides" — both the $725K and $1,495K include funds for the schools, library, police and elder affairs office to mention a few.

• Contrary to some opinions, this is not a "we vs. them" campaign. It's our town. We all vote and we all have the right to voice an opinion - facts included or not.

• As a town, we have seen decreasing support from the state in significant ways — argue over the exact amount — but it is well over $1,000,000.

• As a town, we have said "yes" to many infrastructure improvements. We still must pay for them. We are proud to have beautiful facades and we must continue to maintain and staff them.

• This override in NO way requires future overrides — every year we have the option to vote for whatever priorities we think are important to our town.

In the end, tomorrow May 6th you have a choice. You have the facts; it's critical that every voter in your household goes out to vote.

• A YES vote for $1,495K replaces critical services cut in the last three years, puts teachers back in the classrooms, and new books on the desks. It ensures we maintain our infrastructure and town supported services.

• A YES vote only for $725K is status quo. Our class sizes remain large, textbooks old, offerings for Advanced Placement will remain limited. We do not begin taking steps to rebuild our town.

To limit confusion, supporters of improving our town should vote YES/YES on Saturday, May 6th. Both Overrides can win, but the largest $ Override Question to get a majority vote is passed.

Thanks for your support.

Quality vs. quantity

TO THE EDITOR:

There are two lessons I have tried to instill in my children, one: "what goes around comes around," in other words be kind and respect your neighbor. Two: "quality vs. quantity".

It seems to me sadly, the quality vs. quantity lesson has escaped some people in Cohasset lately. There are many who would have us believe that the quantity of money we pour into our school system equals the quality of education our children will receive. I do not agree. As in so many other area of life, sometimes we must get creative, and think of other ways to solve problems besides money. Granted it is the easy way to a quick fix, but that is all it amounts to. When that money runs out, more needs to go into that bottomless pit.

To me the quality that we need to remember is lesson one, what goes around comes around. I have only lived in Cohasset for 41 years, however I have learned the best quality this town has to offer is my good neighbors. These are wonderful people I have learned from, grown up with, people who have chosen to stay, live, raise families and work in this beautiful place. These people in my opinion, are the heart of this town, they know very well the second lesson: quantity does not always equal quality. These are the people this town cannot afford to lose. Think with your heart as well as your head when you vote no, no, next Saturday.

Override benefits old and young

TO THE EDITOR:

It is not often that both young and old citizens — people on opposite ends of a social spectrum — suffer from similar deprivation, but in Cohasset today, they do.

As a year mired in constant conflict (everything from teacher contracts to bomb threats) comes to an end, it seems that the student body and its needs have become invisible. Without well-prepared students, a school cannot function and the benefits of a successful override will reach far beyond projected expenses. Since colleges and post-secondary institutions are becoming exceedingly competitive, students are expected to build a transcript that boasts intensive classes. How can anyone be expected to take an Advanced Placement exam if the voting population of Cohasset does not assume its responsibility to provide a teacher and a textbook?

Of course, this override will not only affect the school community. As a volunteer at Cohasset Elder Affairs for five years, it has become increasingly clear to me that the displacement of coordinators and staff members would divest this town's elderly population of invaluable opportunities that it so utterly deserves. The potential absence of classes, transportation, and annual events will hamper this organization terribly, and to allow its senior citizens to be pushed aside or neglected (just like the town's students) is intolerable.

Passing both override options is the only way to ensure that, at last, two formerly overlooked communities in Cohasset are bestowed much warranted attention.

Top 10 reasons to vote 'no'

TO THE EDITOR:

Top 10 reasons to vote against the overrides

10. During the past 18 years, there have been 9 overrides. Only one override was anywhere near even the lower amount requested this year.

9. Massive overrides will reduce Cohasset's middle-income population. The town has always included an economically diverse population. Now we are risking turning Cohasset into a haven for yuppies.

8. Rapidly rising real estate taxes will also force many older residents to leave Cohasset and their network of friends. If you are in this group, voting against the override may be critically important to remaining in your home.

7. I am told that total school expenditures including the school portion of town expenditures and before deduction for offsets are about 65 percent of total town expenditures. This amount is for the benefit of 1515 students who account for about 20 percent of Cohasset's population. The other 80 percent of residents get to share in only 35 percent of expenditures.

6. Parents of schoolchildren, parents of preschool children and other concerned residents report widespread dissatisfaction with the schools. Last year we ranked number 12 out of 14 comparable school systems on MCAS tests.

5. We need serious education reform to address these dismal results. Throwing money at the schools without changes in curriculum and teaching practices is not the solution.

4. Our children deserve better schools.

3. Poor MCAS results hurt property values. Homebuyers looking for a quality education for their children have many choices with lower taxes and better education.

2. Higher real estate taxes will also hurt property values by making homes in Cohasset too expensive to own for many potential buyers.

Drum roll please!

1. These overrides are bad for Cohasset. Moving forward without change, which the school committee and administration propose, leaves the problems unresolved. Reject these overrides now and demand that next year the administration develop a reform program for restoring quality education. Then we can better understand the costs of creating a quality school system.

Retired resident supports overrides

TO THE EDITOR:

As a 42-year resident of Cohasset, I support the overrides on even though as a retired person, it will present a financial challenge. When we moved here in 1962, we looked at several communities on the South Shore because we wanted to be on by the ocean. As young parents, our first priority was an excellent school system. We liked the diversity of the community, long-time residents, fishermen, farmers, new people and summer people. The housing for the most part was affordable.

Many things have changed: less diversity in income, the high cost of housing and loss of open space. But one thing has remained constant — the desire to have a good school system to prepare our children for a rapidly changing world. Schools cost money and Massachusetts places much of the financial responsibility for education on local governments. For communities like Cohasset, with no industrial base, the burden falls on the property tax, a regressive tax that allows for no variations in income or exemptions. But the state and federal governments do give local governments some money for education, but recently they have cut back on funding while mandating expensive programs, such as MCAS and special needs. Unfortunately, it is easier to place the blame on our local officials, but we must let our members of Congress and state legislators know that we need these funds. A hopeful note: there is a move in the state legislature to restore some of that funding.

Having served on the Advisory Board, the Capital Budget Committee and the Planning Board, I know that local elected and appointed officials do their best to analyze the Town's needs, scrutinize expenditures and present the best budget they can for the voters at Town Meeting to debate, amend, reject or adopt.

Let's not forget that these volunteers are taxpayers, our neighbors and our friends. They gain only the satisfaction of serving the Town.

Democracy depends upon its citizens to be informed and to participate in the democratic process. Sadly, I find that Cohasset has changed in some ways: less economic diversity, loss of open space, very expensive housing, and an occasional chill wind of suspicion and resentment.

But for the most part, the desire to provide our children with the best education to prepare them for a rapidly changing world, has increased and I hope we will work together with a spirit of respectful inquiry toward that shared goal and a love of our community. which is as strong as ever.

Voters ask for reasonableness

TO THE EDITOR:

Rob Spofford's pro-override article last week provided little concrete support for his view; rather, he trotted out tired generalities like: services will suffer, maintenance is important, etc. His key point: "I challenge anyone to provide specific ideas and areas where they can find true fat in these budgets."

As a resident who, like most of my friends, has some appreciation for the issue items but not down to the line-item level, let me say: providing specifics in not our job. It is yours. But here is what we generally expect:

• That spending growth, over time, approximate the sum of the rate of inflation and the rate of population growth.

• That the Town not take on ill-advised projects like the Cook Estate. At the outset of that effort, we were told the Town would likely flip that property for a cool $1 million. Turns out we lost $300K.

• That the Town spend its money in a reasonable fashion. (I watched a few years ago as we spent $38 million to upgrade the middle school and the high school. As part of that project, we tore down a perfectly functional gym and built a new one that is so big, we struggle to heat it.)

Voters shouldn't have to provide specifics. We only ask for leadership, prudence, and reasonableness. Incidentally, my wife and I have four small children and no issue is more important to us than education. But this override, if passed, will do little to improve education. It will, however, perpetuate a dysfunctional planning and spending system.

It's about quality education

TO THE EDITOR:

What was good enough is no longer!

The questions to be answered at the poles on Saturday are not votes "for" or "against" the people who run or ran our town. The questions to be answered primarily address one thing: The quality of education in Cohasset.

Make no mistake; Saturday's vote is not about whether you think the town has done a good job of spending our tax dollars. This is not about sending a message to someone who you think is doing a lousy job. This is not a referendum on decisions made in the past. This is not about forcing someone out of town. This is not about whether or not we can increase revenue sources in addition to the tax base.

This is about the good of our community as a whole. It is about whether we are willing to make sure that our schoolchildren are provided a quality public education. It is about making sure that the acutely needed resources are available now to put our school system back on track toward being the best it can be. It is about providing appropriate class sizes for learning. It is about giving our children the opportunity to learn the most relevant and essential topics needed for today by providing advanced math, English and foreign language studies for our high school students. It is about providing needed reading assistance at the middle school level and it is about replacing outdated text books. The needs are real.

What was good enough for us is no longer!

Do you take umbrage with a management issue regarding the town? Great! Let's talk about it next week and work constructively to address issues. The ballot box is not the venue to prove a point.

Shame on us if we put "Proving a point" above the best interest of the town's children. As the adult members of our community we are responsible for its children. Doing all that we can is enough!

Please vote YES for both override numbers.

Time for fairness

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm a grandmother and a widow who moved to Cohasset over 15 years ago to be near my daughter and young grandchildren. I have witnessed many changes in Cohasset and have been astounded by the lack of accountability in the school system.

For years I have listened to people like School Committee Chair, Adrienne MacCarthy postulate on how the people of Cohasset have not been spending enough for the schools.

If that is so why are our real estate taxes ranked 9th in the state? Also why is our outstanding debt ranked 14th in the state — most of which is the money spent on the schools.

Currently I am paying 2-1/2 times more than Ms. MacCarthy in real estate taxes and am labeled 'anti-education'. She, on the other hand, is constantly carping about the few fees she spends for her children's activities. I've heard her say how smart she is to be paying so little in taxes. Well, Ms. MacCarthy is not paying her fair share.

She should have spent her tenure on the School Building Committee making sure that we had energy efficient and low maintenance facilities. Instead our tax dollars are going into energy inefficient and high maintenance buildings that she and Selectman Rob Spofford saddled us with, leaving less money for actual education. Plus people like me are being priced out of Cohasset.

On the School Committee she should be watching the dollars and making sure that non-mandated and non- education programs like child care, lunch and full day K were paying the fees to cover the costs instead of making people like myself subsidize her children.

While watching a school committee meeting last June, I saw her second a motion to cut teachers while increasing administrative positions. I also witnessed her voting against trimming SPED transportation costs. Plus she does not feel that full day K should pay the actual expenses that program incurs. From what I've read, full day K lost $200,000 in this year's school budget because of undercharging tuition and still there is no move to change the tuition and save $250,000 in tax dollars for '07. Instead Ms. MacCarthy is waiting to see how the override does at the polls – if it passes then people like me will continue to sacrifice to subsidize these fee programs.

It's time to bring Fairness to Cohasset and have the parents fully pay for their children's lunch, childcare and full day K.

Please allow people like me to continue to live here. Like so many others in my position, I love my home and want to remain a contributing member of this community.

Please Vote No on both override questions and then demand prudence and fiscal responsibility from our elected officials.

'Not Cohasset values'

TO THE EDITOR:

The total, 20-year, 5 percent compounded cost to Cohasset taxpayers for the $1.5 million tax override, for those care to look one day beyond May 6, is a staggering $51.8 million – and for what? It's for non-essential, admitted wish list spending conceptualized, for the most part, by town employees who do not reside in Cohasset, who will not have to pay such painful taxes and thus, apparently, don't know nor care about the seniors, single parents, retirees and young families that they dislocate or damage as long as they get money from others to pay for their wish lists! Indeed, even Santa Clause would vote no to such thoughtless gift requests!

Who among us has not heard, over the past weeks, from a friend or neighbor who genuinely reports that such additional tax increases are the end of the line for them and they will be forced to sell and move to avoid financial ruin.

How can one save for college tuition for their kids when paying confiscatory taxes? How can one afford the escalating costs of energy and gasoline to get to work when paying out-of-control real estate taxes? How can one maintain their residence when paying excessive taxes for wish list spending. Why is it that so many parents are afraid to place a "vote no" sign on their lawn out of concern that they might lose their job or have their kids endure retaliation? Or, a new, extremely unwelcome scourge on the Cohasset scene, have their "no" sign stolen in the dark of night and/or replaced by an obscenity sign! That has happened! Zealousness is tolerated, but over-zealousness is a crime!

We see insensitivity to the welfare of others driven by lack of foresight. Lack of caring for fellow citizens and families motivated by selfishness of cause. Distortion and misrepresentation of budgets and agreement costs in order to "win at all costs!" These are not Cohasset values. These are not values we want our children to learn, nor have our elected officials support, nor have our seniors, retirees, friends and neighbors endure. These values merit only rejection – loud and clear.

'It all begins to add up'

TO THE EDITOR:

I appreciated Jim Hamilton's satirical illustration of the "creative mathematics" that has been consistently used by past and present override advocates to win even if it takes misleading the public. Jim was correctly highlighting the absurdity of rounding the higher override article of $1.495M down to $1.4M on override proponent signs and literature. Interestingly, I mentioned this unethical tactic to my daughter, who graduated from Cohasset High and has three school-age children, and now lives in Oregon. She agreed that the tactic was totally disingenuous and unethical. However, she did point out that $1.495M rounds down to $1M rather than up to $2M. When I worked in the Pentagon, we had a saying: "a billion here, a billion there-after awhile it begins to add up." Almost 300,000,000 people live in the USA, less than 8,000 in Cohasset. Maybe we should be concerned about "a $100,000 here, a $100,000 there-after all, it begins to add up."

We have all heard the term "economies of scale." Cohasset has unsuccessfully been trying to offer everything (academic subjects and extracurricular activities) that larger School Districts can do more easily. When I was on the School Committee, I looked at the "offerings" of neighboring towns and was particularly impressed with the breadth of choices in the Hingham School District. The Hingham School District's performance indicators are also good. Cohasset has done "token" regionalization primarily in the area of sports. I suggest that serious discussions be initiated with Hingham on exchanging coverage for both academic subjects and other activities (not just sports, but all types of extracurricular activities).

The Cohasset School District has at least one thing in common with the business sector: "hiring lags." However, businesses project savings based on "hiring lags" into their annual budget process to arrive at their all-important "P&L"(profit/loss projection). A hiring lag happens when it takes longer than projected to hire for a replacement or new hire. Quite often, there are major "hiring lags" when someone quits to take a job elsewhere, retires, or decides to leave for maternity or other reasons. Typically, businesses budget for a 3-5 percent "hiring lag." What is different about the Cohasset School budget is that it assumes no "hiring lag." We know that 80 percent of the Cohasset School budget is spent on personnel. If we use the lower 3 percent "hiring lag" number; we arrive at "found money aka a "slush fund" of $288,000 for a $12,000,000 Cohasset School budget. The 5 percent number would equal $480,000.

School overhead too high

TO THE EDITOR:

In its April 28, 2006 edition, the Cohasset Mariner continues it series titled "How does Cohasset Measure up?" This issue presents "Education Overhead". It shows Cohasset education overhead to be 27 percent higher than its Benchmark Peer Group. Yet the schools are asking for an override of a million and a half dollars to add to their overhead.

Before taxpayers reward the schools with additional funding from an override, the schools should demonstrate their ability to get their overhead in line with the other towns with which we compare ourselves.

Paul L. Lualdi

Yes signs also stolen

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading the Mariner last week, I decided to write about the stolen "Vote Yes Yes" signs. Many of the signs supporting the override have been stolen. It is not only the "Vote No" signs that have been attracting the thieves.

While I have the microphone, I would also like to emphasize that Cohasset is not the only town contemplating a large tax override. Norwell, Randolph and Milton, to name a few, are also in a similar situation. When I hear the opponents to the override suggest that it is fiscal mismanagement in Cohasset, I have to wonder how all of these towns could possibly be mismanaged. This brings me to the conclusion that the cut in state aid is affecting many citizens of Massachusetts.

Good schools come with a price

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

Paul Antico's recent column called upon our town officials to keep future budgets within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2. He bemoaned our long-term debt and asked, "Why didn't anyone with a closer knowledge of the town's finances stand up and say that we couldn't afford these capital expenditures?"

Ten years ago, we held a Special Town Meeting under the tent at the Music Circus in August to take up the question of the new Osgood School. Voters were aware of the long-term implications of assuming that debt, but still approved it after a lengthy debate. Conversely, at a fall Town Meeting a few years ago, voters rejected a capital debt exclusion to build a new police station because we were told our debt ratio was now out of line. For the same reason, voters last year rejected the 50/50 for the Little Harbor sewer project.

The point is, budget issues, overrides, and the affordability of capital projects have been discussed in Cohasset ad nauseam for many years. Our town officials have been nowhere near as uninformative nor the voters as uninformed as Mr. Antico suggests. Mr. Antico and others, who blithely assert that because our taxes are going up, our town must be mismanaged, need to view Cohasset's current financial dilemma from both an historical and a comparative perspective of municipal finances in Massachusetts.

Our cities and towns have been dependent on state and federal aid in various forms since the Depression. For example, 40 years ago this month the sales tax was enacted by the legislature at the behest of Gov. Volpe solely to provide local aid for cities and towns because property taxes were out of control. Over the years local aid has fluctuated with the ups and downs of the economy. However, what is unprecedented in the current era is that even with the improvement in the economy, local aid still is declining, a situation beyond the control of town officials.

If you listen to the critics, one might get the impression that Cohasset is mismanaged beyond all others. Mr. Antico states that our taxes are increasing faster than surrounding communities. But he does not take into account that we have undertaken state-mandated sewer improvements; that we have approved a 2 percent tax surcharge for the Community Preservation Act; and that we have no commercial tax base. Moreover, almost every other city and town in the state is facing the same dilemma of increased local taxes vs. cuts in services. In nearby Norwell for example, voters are facing a three tier budget override: $840,000, $1.53 million, or $1.95 million.

Mr. Brooks used the term mismanagement several times with reference to Cohasset in his recent column. He referred to Concord, where he said he lived until seven years ago, as a "top notch bedroom community." But according to the State Dept. of Ed., Concord spends about $8800 per year per pupil, whereas Cohasset spends about $7400. In other words, a town that Mr. Brooks thinks is so wonderful, Concord, spends almost 20 per cent more per pupil than his new hometown of Cohasset.

Mr. Whealler wrote in last week's Mariner, "Something is wrong when your local property tax bill exceeds your state and federal tax bill combined." But has Mr. Whealler ever seen a state or federal employee put out a house fire, or respond to a 911 call, or apply CPR to a heart attack victim, or operate our transfer station, or cut the grass on the Common, or educate our children in the public schools? Compared to the massive bureaucracies of federal and state agencies, our local government is a model of efficiency. By the measure of, "You get what you pay for," Cohasset town government has the feds and state beat, hands down.

"No new taxes!" is a simple-minded response to our complex and structural budget issues, utterly failing to acknowledge reality and lacking any sense of shared obligation by the members of a community. No one wants to pay more taxes. But as with everything else in life, good schools and good local services come at a price. If we truly want Cohasset to reflect the sort of place we want to call home, then a "Yes" vote on the overrides is essential.

Greenspace program is May 16

Rain gardens, a feature of the recently-publicized "Green-space" program, will be the focus of an open meeting on Tuesday, May 16, jointly sponsored by the Gulf Association and the Cohasset Garden Club.

The meeting will be held at Saint Anthony's Parish Center, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

A rain garden is a bowl-shaped garden designed to collect and absorb runoff from a roof, road, or driveway, thus preventing storm water from rushing down the storm drain and polluting our rivers, ponds and bays.

A homeowner can make one by filling a low-lying area with a blend of percolating soils, mulch and hearty plants. Native low-maintenance flowers and grasses work best, providing color and interest throughout the seasons and tolerating wet and dry conditions.

Guest experts at the May 16 meeting will describe the whys and hows of building rain gardens. They are Sally Coyle of Coyle & Caron, landscaping design firm, and Mark Clark of Norfolk Ram Group, which is assisting the Cohasset Water Department in implementing the rain garden concept for protection of the Lily Pond watershed.

Meeting attendance is open to all. Refreshments will be served.

Boys tennis team makes history

Skippers hand Norwell its first league loss in 129 matches

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

If anybody was going to do it, it was going to be Cohasset.

The Norwell High boys tennis team entered last Thursday's match in Cohasset riding a 128-match winning streak, a run that spanned more than a decade.

The Skippers had given the Clippers many tough matches over the years, and in that contest last Thursday, they got over the hump. Behind straight set victories from singles players Nils Sceery and Dan Sullivan, and doubles teams Chris Pescatore/Chris Donze and Victory Hartman/Ryan Crough, Cohasset earned a history-making 4-1 victory.

"That was an awesome win for us," said Pescatore. "We were pretty confident going into it. Everyone won their first set, and we just went from there."

This match saw the reunion of "The Chrises" at first doubles, with Donze returning to the lineup for the first time this season. He and Pescatore played together last year, and Donze's return helps give Cohasset a major weapon at first doubles.

"I feel like we know each other well and complement each other a lot," said Pescatore.

In what Sceery commended as a class act, Norwell coach Jay Swartz approached the Skippers team after the match and congratulated them on their win.

"I expressed to them that if [the streak] was going to end, I wanted to lose to a very good team that's well coached, and that's what happened," said Swartz.

Sceery topped Norwell sophomore Rob Ankner 6-1, 6-2 in a match that was more competitive than the score would indicate. Sullivan defeated Clippers senior Scott Kitchen, 7-5, 6-4.

Norwell freshman Jared Wright earned the lone point for Norwell at third singles over Cohasset's Blain Morin. The third set of that match went straight to a tiebreaker, won by Wright, but Morin's teammates believe he had a good chance to win a regulation third set had it come to that.

Two days later, the Skippers got on the bus for an early morning (10 a.m.) match at Cape Cod Academy. Wins from Sceery, Hartman/Crough and Pescatore/Chris Ackley earned Cohasset a tough 3-2 win.

Tracksters split season opener

By Fletcher Smalzel
CORRESPONDENT

Last year's track debut pitted Cohasset against their rivals from neighboring town Hull. This year, however, the situation has changed drastically, as the two schools have combined forces to create one multi-town team.

Early in the year, it appeared that the new teammates from Hull would give a boost to both the boys and the girls track programs. Unfortunately, all the girls slated to be on the roster from Hull dropped off the team before the season got underway.

The boys from Hull that have stuck with the team, however, are going to pay huge dividends, says coach Al LaFountain.

"The boys bring nine (athletes) to the table, and every one of them contributes in four events," he said. "Our distance crew is strictly (Hull students). Last year, we had a couple of runners and a full amount of throwers; this year, now we have both throwers and runners, which completes our team."

Cohasset captain Paul St. Pierre agrees that the addition of Hull to the program will enhance the team's success, saying, "We're looking to go far this season because of the numbers we have, as opposed to last year."

Making the hike to Harwich for the team's first dual meet on Monday, both the boys' and girls' teams were hoping to make the trip worthwhile. The boys team earned a dominating victory over Harwich 84-42. The girls fell short, 86-50.

For the boys, junior Brent Daly led the way for the Skippers, taking first place in the 100m with a time of 11.6 seconds. Daly also ran away with the 200m, earning a time of 23.9 seconds, more than three seconds faster than the runner-up. Reed Wendorf-French was also able to grab a first place finish in the 300m (47.9 seconds).

The impact of the new Hull arrivals was noticeable, even this early in the season. Jake Augenstern, who has emerged as the Skippers' top 800m runner, took first in that event on Monday. John Cleverly, a long distance runner, has improved Cohasset's depth in that field. Cleverly participated in the mile and ran a time of 5:12. Finishing just 15 seconds later was Cohasset's own track veteran,

CHS girls tennis tops Norwell, too

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For the first time in nine years, the Cohasset High girls tennis entered a match against Norwell without the proverbial bullseye on its back.

After winning the South Shore League all those years, it was the Clippers who knocked the Skippers off that perch last season. Last Thursday, however, Cohasset served notice that it may be ready to reclaim top billing.

Led by some strong performances in singles and doubles, the Skippers went to Norwell and came away with a convincing 4-1 victory. The match of the day for Cohasset came at second singles, where senior Susan Curry came back from a 2-6 first set loss to take the next two, 6-1, 6-4, to top Norwell senior Taylor Cleaves.

Curry appeared to be cruising in the third set, serving 5-2 with a triple match-point. Cleaves came back, however, to win five straight sets and break Curry's serve, and then holding her own serve to close it to 5-4.

The next game went to deuce, but Curry responded with two strong serves in a row to win the game and the match. Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan said afterward she was impressed by both players.

"Taylor picked up her game at the end and showed a lot of composure. She never quit," Meehan said. "That's a tough thing to beat, when they're not giving it to you. Susie took it."

Norwell coach Judy Field credited Curry, saying, "she played a great match." The Norwell coach added that the loss for her player may not be such a bad thing.

"Taylor has had some very easy second singles matches, and I needed to have her realize that she needs to step up," Field said. "It's not always going to be a cakewalk."

The last match to finish was actually first doubles. The Cohasset duo of sophomore Sally Meehan and junior Charlotte Landon dominated the first set, 6-2.

The second set was a much different story, as Norwell juniors Rachel Thomas and Marissa Dalferro broke Cohasset's serve to tie it up, 6-

Such is the recent pattern for CHS baseball team

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

More than halfway through its season, the Cohasset High baseball team stands where it started a month ago.

Just as many wins and losses.

At 5-5, the Skippers are certainly well within reach of their main goal, which is to finish at least .500 and qualify for the state tournament. At 3-3 in the South Shore League, the Skippers also have a shot at a league title that is there for anyone's taking.

Cohasset head coach Al Gallotta is taking a glass-half full approach.

"I think we're a couple one-run losses away from being a 7-3 team right now," he said Wednesday. "On the other hand, we're a loss or two away from being out of contention for a South Shore League title.

"Overall, I'm pretty confident that we have the ability to at least split those last eight games and get into the tourney."

Unlike some of their athletic peers, the Skippers' schedule has been relatively untouched by the recent spate of bad weather. Following yesterday's game in Abington, Cohasset is looking at a reasonable three-game schedule next week, which should allow Gallotta to maintain a relatively normal pitching rotation entering the home stretch.

The Skippers got a very strong outing on the mound from sophomore Brian Hill in last Thursday's 5-3 win over two-

Lady Laxers enter grueling stretch

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

At this time next week, the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team will have a far clearer idea of where it stands in the state tournament picture.

Playing five games in six days will generally do that.

Various postponements and the like have left the Skippers with a schedule next week that borders on the absurd: Monday at Notre Dame, Tuesday against Hanover, Thursday against Sandwich, Friday at Marshfield, and Saturday at Barnstable.

And before that, there was yesterday's showdown against Hingham (played after the Mariner went to press) and a matchup today at home against NDA. The Harborwomen knocked Cohasset out of the postseason last year, and Skippers head coach Chuck Jaffe was looking to this game as a big test.

Jaffe says the girls were ready, as Tuesday's practice was one of the best of the year.

"The intensity level was really up," he said. "It's one thing to talk about being an elite team; it's another to be an elite team. You have to play and practice hard everyday. Everybody was really into it (Tuesday); they were just flying around and fully engaged in what we were doing."

Softballers on a hot streak

Wins over Norwell, Scituate make it 3 in a row for CHS

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset High softball squad is at it again.

With two more wins last week over Norwell and Scituate, the road looks smooth for the Skippers. Smoother than the roads to Freedom Field, at least.

After coming off their nail-biting comeback against Carver, the girls refueled their tanks for a trip to Norwell last Thursday. It was worth the trip, to say the least.

Senior captain Erin Liddell and junior Alida Tangherlini lit the fuse early with base hits in the first inning, scoring Virginia Spofford and Kristin Monaco. And when four more Skipper runs came out of the top of the second inning, some wondered if a blowout was in store.

Not the case. In the bottom of the second, the Clippers strung together a number of dangerous base hits that forced some Skipper errors. A daunting eight Norwell runs surfaced before Cohasset could end the inning.

Down by two, the Skippers rolled up their sleeves to get to work once again. And they did. With pitcher Katie James keeping the Norwell offense at bay, the Skipper bats pounded in eight more runs in the rest of the game. Final score: 14-8.

"We got a little scared in the second inning," admitted Cohasset head coach Deb Bostwick. "The girls just kept chipping away, though, and we came through with the victory."

Bostwick praised James, Spofford, Tangherlini, Anna Haggerty, Carly Zappalo, and Carly Salerno for their offensive production. Monaco, Haggerty, Zappalo, and Liddell also performed well in the field. In addition to going 2-for-3 with a double at the plate bat, James let up only five hits from the mound.

"It's great to have someone like James who can play different positions," said Bostwick. "In general, the girls are really versatile in terms of playing everywhere on the field."

With two more wins last week over Norwell and Scituate, the road looks smooth for the Skippers. Smoother than the roads to Freedom Field, at least.

The Skippers dedicated this league victory to the late Cohasset High School student Kurt Gritzan, who had passed away the night before.

The Skipper fire continued through Saturday when the girls played host to Scituate for their fourth game of the week.

"The girls were tired mentally and physically going into this game from the busy week," acknowledged Bostwick. "Still, they stuck it out and managed to get another win."

The stands remained quiet for the first couple innings as both teams tried, and failed, to get their offense rolling. Then came the third inning.

Base hits from Tangherlini, Zappalo, Haggerty, and Spofford woke up the crowd. As junior Christina Pinkus stepped up to the plate, the excitement escalated. With a full count, Pinkus sent a rocket over the center field fence for a two-run homer. This rally eventually produced eight runs on the scoreboard for the Skippers.

Aside from four Sailor runs in the top of the 7th, the Skippers coasted to a 12-8 victory.

Campanelli, Liddell, Pinkus, Spofford, and Zappalo led the offensive charge, all contributing to the total of 14 Skipper hits.

Liddell, James, Haggerty, and Monaco controlled the infield, while Spofford at the mound suffocated any potential Sailor offense.

"It's great that we already have all our positions figured out at this point in the season," said Bostwick. "Once we can learn to come out strong in the first inning, I think we'll do even better."

In addition to a versatile defense, the Skippers hitting has really come along.

"Our offense is much more consistent this year," explained Pinkus, a top hitter herself. "If we can keep up our hitting and cut down on the errors, we will do well."

Coming out strong will be a necessary task as the Skippers take on Sacred Heart, Mashpee, Abington, and Avon this week.

Virginia Spofford lays down an RBI bunt single in the second inning of last Thursday's win over Norwell.

John McCarthy.

In the field events, junior Colin Conway took first place in the discus as he hurled it a whopping 108.7 feet. More success by Cohasset's throwers came from Nick Cambi. Cambi, a junior at CHS, finished first in the discus event, with a distance of 37.8 feet.

Although the girls' final results were not exactly what the team was looking for, there were some noteworthy performers on Monday. Sheelah Scott finished in first place in the mile with a time of 6:21. In addition, Georgia Murley and Alyssa Hinman finished second in the 100m and 800m, respectively.

The boys' early season win is hopefully a sign of a bright road ahead, and even though the girls' final score wasn't as impressive as that of the boys', the potential is high for the Lady Skippers. Also, it is important to bear in mind that Monday was only the first dual meet of many to come; and with help from LaFountain and his staff, the girls should improve greatly as the season progresses.

Rec Dept. offers boot camp fitness program

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering a bi-weekly Boot Camp Fitness Training Program, to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity meets from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings on Cohasset Common, in front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, with checks payable to the Town of Cohasset. You may register at any class.

This session concludes Thursday, June 15, and the second session begins the following week on the 20th.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for men and women of all levels of ability. Please dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope to class, and wear running shoes.

Keep in mind, success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as a competition with others.

time defending league champion Norwell. After allowing three runs (on two hits and four walks) in the first, Hill posted all zeroes after that, allowing just one hit and two walks over those final six innings.

The Skippers got two runs in the bottom of the sixth to break a 3-3 tie. Alex Goetz led off the inning with a double, and came around to score on an RBI single by senior Chris Ofsthun. The speedy outfielder then stole second, and scored the insurance run on a run-scoring base hit off the bat of fellow senior Chris Bryan.

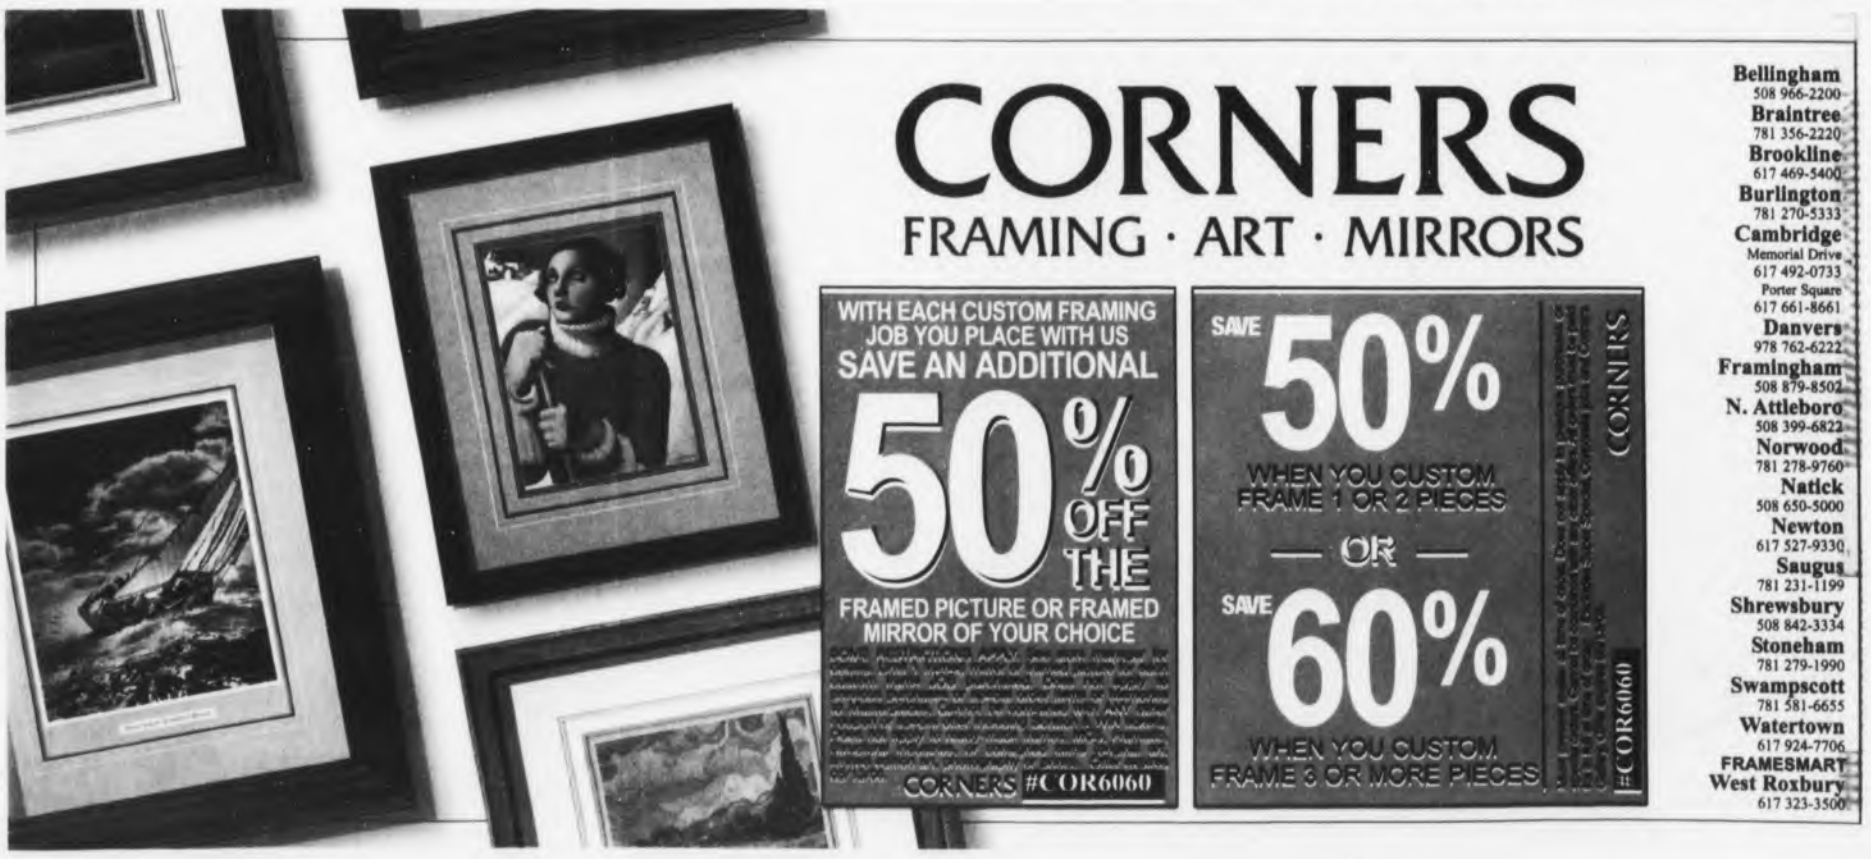
"That was a very good win for us," said Gallotta. "We played well defensively, and we had great pitching and some timely hits."

Things did not go quite as smoothly in Monday's 5-1 loss to league-leading Mashpee. Bryan was on the mound for this one, and kept the visiting Falcons scoreless through three. Mashpee did get three runs, however, in the top of the fourth on four hits and a walk.

Bryan allowed the first two batters in the fifth to get on base, and Gallotta went to sophomore Sam DeGiacomo in relief. DeGiacomo allowed the two inherited runners to score, but otherwise pitched well and wound up tossing three shutout innings.

"He pitched very well over those last two innings. He threw the ball hard," Gallotta said of DeGiacomo. "It was encouraging to see him pitch as well as he did."

Those games next week are home against Carver on Monday, at Harwich on Tuesday and at Hull Thursday. Those three, as well as yesterday's Abington contest, are all league games.



YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

Cohasset boys

The boys Blue U15 team hosted Norwell this past Sunday in what turned out to be a very lopsided victory for the home team 15–6.

After putting the game out of reach by the end of the first quarter, having outscored their opponents 9–1, the players got a chance to try out some new positions and to work on some of their set offenses as the remainder of the game played out equally well for both sides.

The defense of Mark Seraikas, Patrick Dunn, and Chris Brown shut the Norwell squad down immediately, while goaltender "in-the-making" Derek Youngman continued to establish himself as the heir apparent with another strong performance in the net demonstrating a fearless determination to keep opposing offenses off the scoreboard.

John McGoldrick had a breakout game, netting four goals on offense and then finding his "true calling" battling in the trenches with a long pole on Close-D and anchoring a formidable second half defensive trio of Jack Nelson and Chase Murphy that all played like veterans at their new positions. Luke Ernst took turns at middie and attack contributing 3 goals and 3 assists for the double hat-trick, a feat also duplicated by Olly Forrer playing both ways.

Wil Lynner jumped up to midfield to add an assist, Nick Lieberman (1G/2A) found his passing stride, and Terrence Durkin added one each from midfield and attack (on a shot that looked more like a strong 4-iron then anything else!) Ian Porter, Dean Driscoll, and Jack Carrier also helped to "seal the deal" each netting one a piece.

The U15 White squad beat Plymouth at home Sunday, extending our undefeated streak to four games.

Plymouth's seven year young program was self admittedly struggling this season. Cohasset took them at 6–1 by half time and finished the game at 13–1. Not a tremendous spectator event but we did our best to work on extra ball movement, clears, and ground balls. Per usual, Andrew Littauer, Taylor McQuade, Dave Hernon, and goalie Jack Murphy, shut down any attempt at offense Plymouth could muster.

Alex Kinnealy (1G), Geoff Evans (2G, 2A), Conor Queenan (3G, 3A), Tom Flibotte (4G, 2A), Jake Kissick (2G), Austin Meyers (1G), and Andrew Whitney (1A) contributed to the scoring while Charlie Coffman and Chris Hayes contributed equally in hustle and team work.

While not a true test of our abilities, the game did demonstrate good field positioning and an increasing level of confidence in ball handling and awareness amongst our players. The boys will continue to work on our skills and execution in practice and look forward to our next challenge.

Cohasset Grey U-13 played their second game on artificial turf this week away at Pembroke. The Greys fell behind early 2-0 to a determined Pembroke squad but rallied with hard work by Jamie Timothy (2G), Alex Evans (1A) and John Collins (1G) all finding the net. While the Greys went into the half tied at 3, Pembroke had many chances but the defense of Geoff (The Wall) Swain, Robbie Hillman and Danny Czerkawski protected Kyle Healy (12 saves) in the first half.

Brennan Bukowski tended net in the second half and turned back 6 tough shots with added defensive help from Pat Kearney who also had another beautiful end2end transition for a well earned strike. The Greys pressed hard in the second half with continued pressure by Kyle Livingstone, Forster Eymer, Blake McGowan and Zach Strecher.

Greys kept it in the Pembroke end with Gus Helbock, Teddy Patsos and Jimmy Lydon all contributing on getting to the loose balls. The Greys had a number of late chances in the fourth quarter but just missed converting for a tying score. This team is full of determined and skilled laxers who fell short in the box 5-4 but finished strong in teamwork and opportunities.

The boys Blue U13 team suffered a heartbreaking loss (their first of the season) to an overly physical, but very talented Norwell team coming up just short in an 11- 8 loss at home.

This was an exciting game from the very beginning with multiple lead changes and each team slugging it out "toe to toe" throughout the game. Rob Mahoney continued to improve his inside game netting 3 goals on the day while also taking a few shifts on midfield.

The defensive corps of Ben Curley, Blake Erler, Derek Froio, and Dan Barnes had their hands full all day, but managed to keep the opposing offense in check throughout most of the contest. Willy Brown, though handcuffed by a new stick that didn't want to cooperate, stopped multiple rockets from between the pipes and saved more than he allowed in.

On offense, Dean (2G/2A) and Mitch (2G/1A) McNary again provided the "backbone" with key answering tallies as they switched back and forth from midfield to defense to help keep things in check, with John Mills adding a single tally.

The key for Norwell was the outstanding play from their goalie, who routinely made some high school level kick-saves to frustrate the hometown boys. The turning point came in the beginning of the 4th quarter with the score notched at 8 – 8 when Cohasset got caught with a shift mismatch that yielded 3 unanswered goals from Norwell's top offensive threats as a result of several unchallenged clears.

This lead proved to be too much to overcome as Norwell used their remaining possessions wisely and kept control of the remaining time on the clock to take home the win.

The Cohasset U13 White traveled to Marshfield last Sunday. Under beautiful sunny skies, the team matched up against a skilled and mature Marshfield squad.

Cohasset started Matt Swanborg in the cage, giving goaltending stalwart Chris Murphy the opportunity to play in the open field as a defenseman. Cohasset battled hard all game, but found it tough to penetrate a strong Marshfield defense. Despite a number of fine saves by Swanborg, Cohasset trailed 6-0 at the half.

Cohasset came out in the second half committed to hustling play and matched Marshfield's second half scoring by netting two of their own. When the horn sounded Marshfield was on top 8-2.

Cohasset scores came from Coleman Hernon on a feed from Drew Nahill and from Nick Tangherlini unassisted.

On Sunday the U11Cohasset Blue squad beat Norwell, 14-0. In a nutshell, it was the best showing of teamwork and hustle for Cohasset Blue all year.

The most obvious improvement in the level of play this weekend was the excellent participation by third grade new comers. This along with the consistently great contribution from our fourth graders led to the dominant win this Sunday.

Zach Coggins won the opening face-off, and great passing/teamwork was evident right out of the gate, as Zach zipped it to Cole Maher on the left side of the goal who in turn found Colin Whelan on the right side of the crease who then sniped it in to start the scoring.

With Tommy Powers winning the next face-off, Cole Morrison notched the 2d goal on a great pass from Max M, and then Colin W found Tommy P for the third. In all, the boys scored 7 goals in the 1st quarter: Colin Whelan (2), Cole Morrison, Tommy Powers, Max M, Martin Buckley and Jack Conte, who went coast to-coast to end the quarter. Cohasset's defense was super, and we controlled the field of play.

The second quarter started with a bang as Connor Green, who assisted on a first quarter goal, scored one of his own early in the 2d, shortly after Matt A assisted Zach. Cole Morrison notched his 2d goal and at the half we were up 10-0. In the hustle dept., Martin Buckley and Jeff Powers aggressively chased down loose ball after loose ball and both Rennie Westcott and Harry Seraikas were strong on both defense and offense.

With Mats Nelson relieving Henry Brown in goal in the 2d half, Henry opened up the scoring in the 3d on a crisp pass from Max M, and in the 4th Cole Morrison, Jeff Powers (assisted by Colin and w/ a nifty 360 move) and Max M. closed out the scoring.

Throughout the 2d half, as Norwell improved their level of play, players such as Hollis Hunnewell and Jake Burchill stepped up their own games and got in on the action too. In all, the group has begun to work as a single unit, improving the quality of play and contributing to the resulting score.

The U11 White team wearing their blue jerseys for the first time this year traveled to Marshfield and came away with a tough 5-2 win.

Third grader Cameron Steele opened the scoring with a shot 2 1/2 minutes into the game. After some great defense by both teams, Mark Brown found the net to make it 2-0 half way through the 1st quarter. As time was running down in the quarter Tom O'Brien came up with a loose ball and with a great shot made the score 3-0, which is how the quarter ended.

The 2nd quarter was filled with great defense from both teams with the only score coming from another 3rd grader Adam Benson on a great feed from Mark Brown. At the half the score was 4-0 in favor of Cohasset. The 2nd half started rough as Marshfield got on the board before the 1st minute was up.

Cohasset's defense seemed to be lost as Marshfield quickly got another goal to pull within 2 in the 1st 3 minutes of the half. The defense quickly came together behind goalie Will Golden (9 saves). With 15 seconds left in the quarter, Mark Brown scooped up a ball at the midfield line and raced down field and rifled a shot past Marshfield's goalie as the horn sounded ending the 3 quarter.

Both teams played great defense in the 4th quarter with Cole Kissick, Charlie Michalowski, and Jack Stranganelli all coming up with several crucial ground balls to stop Marshfield from scoring to end the game.

Girls youth lacrosse teams keep rolling

For the second consecutive week, the four girls youth lacrosse teams filled with kids in grades five and up swept their opponents, dominating opponents and allowing the coaching staff to achieve a milestone victory.

The four wins – compiled against teams from Hull and Sandwich – brought the all-time record of the girls at these two age levels to 102-27-10, allowing coaches Chuck Jaffe and Jennifer Palmer to pass the century mark in victories. The coaching duo has run all of Cohasset's 15-and-Under and 13-and-Under teams since the girls program was started in 2002.

The 15-U (grades 7 and 8) White team started the effort to get the coaches over the top, running out to an early lead over visiting Sandwich. The Cohasset team opened an 8-2 halftime lead on the strength of eight different goal-scorers: Hannah Burgess, Amy Meikleham, Lindsay Allard, Kaci Kucinski, Lindsay MacNaught, Isabelle Franklin, Paige DeSisto and Maddy Altholtz. Kucinski added an assist in the half.

After allowing Sandwich to creep back into the contest at the start of the second stanza, Cohasset showed its fitness and firepower, taking back control and cruising to victory. Kucinski and Burgess each scored twice to complete a hat trick, with Franklin and Allard adding solo markers. Allard also was credited with an assist on Kucinski's second goal, giving her 16 assists in her youth lacrosse career, enough to make her the program's all-time leader in helpers.

Thomson Jaffe and Molly McElgunn split the goaltending duties and combined to make six saves; all four of the goals Jaffe surrendered, and two of the six McElgunn gave up, came on penalty shots, enough to allow Sandwich to close the gap to 14-10 but not enough to drop the White team from the ranks of the unbeaten at 4-0 on the year.

The landmark win was delivered by the 13-U (grades 5 and 6) White team, which needed to come from behind to get the job done and lift its season record to 3-1.

After surrendering the game's first two goals, Cohasset scored three to get a lead. Allie Farren converted feeds from Stephanie Brierly and Hope Kissick, and her goals sandwiched a penalty-shot goal off the stick of Whitney Jaffe. Sandwich, however, scored twice to regain the lead, and Cohasset squandered several good scoring chances as the visitors went to the break with a 4-3 lead.

There was no wasting the scoring opportunities in the second half, however, as Cohasset blew the game open. Just as with the older White team, the key was a balanced attack; Jaffe scored twice and Farren once to complete hat tricks, and Kissick, Kristen Alexander, Nicole Hajjar, Sage Stebbins and Sarah Evans all had single goals as Cohasset took home an 11-6 win.

Ellie Tedeschi got the win in the goal, stopping five Sandwich shots in the process.

The Blue 15-U team started the coaches en route to their second 100 wins, rolling to a 10-4 win over a depleted Hull team that was bolstered by a few Cohasset girls.

Kaci Kucinski netted a career-high six goals in the win – giving her 10 points on the day – netting a hat trick in each half of the contest. Kaleigh Teague ripped home a Bridget Cahill feed, and Hannah Burgess added a goal as part of a 5-1 first half, the team's lead helped significantly by five saves in net from Thomson Jaffe.

Burgess and Eliza Kinnealey scored goals around Kucinski's score, and only a late flurry of Hull goals – one of them by Cohasset's Paige DeSisto, who also scored while playing for a Norwell team a week earlier – allowed Hull to get as close as the 10-4 final score suggested. Molly McElgunn made three second-half saves.

The Cohasset Blue 13-U team – like its sister White team – got off to a slow start in its game, going into halftime tied at three on the strength of goals from Maria Buckley, Carly Oddleifson and Whitney Jaffe. Jaffe and Alison Whelan scored goals to give Cohasset a small cushion, but Hull fought back to tie the contest at five with just over 10 minutes remaining.

From there, it was all Cohasset, with Mariel Teague blasting home a Katherine Brown feed, and Whelan netting a Buckley pass to grab control. Danielle Healy and Christina Healy then scored back-to-back goals before Jaffe finished her hat trick and ended the game with a 10-5 final score. Stephanie Brierly made four saves in the Cohasset net, as the Blue team raised its record to 3-1.

At the 11-U level (grades 3 and 4), the Cohasset Blue team returned to its winning ways with a 3-2 win against a combined Hull/Norwell team. The win was sweet revenge for a second-half collapse and loss the prior week against many of the same Norwell players.

Molly Fitzgerald got things started in the first half by scooping a ground ball in front of the cage and firing one past the goalie. After a "Hullwell" pass bounced through a crowd of players in front of the cage and rolled into the Cohasset net to tie the game, Charlotte Allard came flying off the wing to power a shot home and give Cohasset a 2-1 lead at the half.

Hullwell tied the score at 2 early in the second half, before Cohasset took control by winning nearly every ground ball the rest of the way. Allard scored again to make it 3-2 and Cohasset dominated play but had three apparent scores waved off by the game official for crease violations.

Caty Gilman was outstanding on defense, intercepting two Hullwell passes in front of the cage and clearing the ball to the midfield each time. Anna McCarthy came up with two big plays by hustling to ground balls behind the Hullwell cage and scooping them in traffic. Christina Tedeschi and Dagmar Seppala controlled the midfield by winning ground balls and transitioning the ball to the attack. The 11-U Blue team improved to 3-1 on the season.

The 11-U White team, meanwhile, lost its first game of the year, dropping a lopsided 9-2 decision to a team from Sandwich. Katie McCabe and Lexa Grasz scored the goals for Cohasset, which had a tough time controlling draws; the score might have been worse had it not been for Sandwich having multiple scores called back for crease violations.

The White team had a much better go of it on April 23, when it defeated Braintree by a 4-2 score. McCabe and Grasz scored goals in that game too, and were joined by Elizabeth Baker and Emily Robbins. Isabelle Dunne added an assist to round out the scoring.

Both of Cohasset's 11-and-Under girls will play at home on May 7 against teams from Scituate, while the older girls will be on the road playing in Scituate. For more information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, check out www.cohasset-lacrosse.com.

Saturday morning, the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association held its annual Little League Parade.

The Skippers went into the Hingham game sporting a 4-2 record, with their most recent games being a 14-4 loss to Norwell and a 11-3 win over Cape Cod Academy.

Norwell 14, Skippers 4

The team came into this game last Thursday facing two obstacles: it had been a very emotional day in Cohasset, as CHS student Kurt Gritzan had passed away the night before after a long battle with cancer.

Second, the Skippers hadn't played a game in almost two weeks, as the CCA game that had been scheduled for the 24th was postponed due to weather concerns. Norwell, meanwhile, had just played defending Division 1 state champion Westwood three days earlier.

"We were definitely hurt by missing that Cape Cod Academy game," Jaffe said. "We were trying to shake off the rust, and they had the rust beaten out of them by Westwood."

Despite that, the game started out pretty evenly and Cohasset controlled the ball for the majority of the first 10 minutes, yet it was the Clippers that held a 4-1 lead at that time. The game was 7-2 at the half, as the Skippers continued to created chances, but couldn't convert.

The main reason for that was the play of Norwell senior goalie Michelle Granara, who stopped nine of the Skippers' 11 directs for the game and made several other great saves.

"For my money, Michelle is the best goalie in the state right now, and she showed why against us," Jaffe said. "If she had an average day, that's a 14-10 game, not 14-4. She was that good."

Cohasset got two goals from junior Lindsay Durkin, one from freshman Gabriella Flibotte and one from senior Mia Lieb-Lappen. Senior JoAnna Hamilton was strong in the cage, and junior Aisling Guinee play the final eight minutes of the game in the net.

Skippers 11, CCA 3

This Saturday morning affair was played on an extremely short field against a shorthanded team, due to the unusual game time (10 a.m.).

Cohasset ran off to an 8-1 halftime lead and substituted liberally the rest of the way, playing mostly its reserves in the second half to go home with an 11-3 win.

Flibotte scored four goals, and Durkin added three goals and an assist. Junior Caren Garber scored her first of the year and picked up an assist, junior Emily Coggins scored her first varsity goal and Lisa Spirito and Lieb-Lappen scored solo goals. Senior Cassie Rosano picked up an assist.

Hamilton was seldom tested in the first half, stopping two of the three shots that CCA managed to put on net. She saw action at attack in the second half, the first time in her high school career she had played outside the cage. Guinee stopped eight shots in the second half to ensure that CCA never had a chance to get back in the game.

Leading scorers

Through the first six games, Durkin leads Cohasset in scoring (24 goals, five assists, 29 points), followed by Flibotte (16-3-19) and Spirito (13-2-15). After the program lost its two top scorers from last year in Lauren Rizzotti and Mackenzie Holway, Durkin has stepped up in a major way to lead the Cohasset attack.

"I think Lindsay may be the toughest player in the league," Jaffe said. "She's usually a lot smaller than the defenders that are trying to stop her, but she's totally unafraid to go in against double- and triple-teams. Her shot is very, very good."

Chris Davis (8), pictured above making a move on goal during a game against Barnstable earlier this season, had two huge games in the CHS boys lacrosse team's recent victories over Norwell and Plymouth. Stepping up for an injured Aidan Buick, Davis had three goals and four assists against Norwell on Friday, and followed that up Monday with another seven point performance (four goals, three assists. Against Norwell, Mark Flibotte led the way with five goals and two assists, while Mike Bunstein had four assists. Goalie Ben Libby supported the Cohasset attack with some great play in net, recording 15 saves. Flibotte had a remarkable game against Plymouth, going for seven goals and three assist. Bunstein racked up four more points (two goals, two assists), while Dan Trendowicz notched three assists. The Skippers had a showdown on the road against Hingham yesterday; next week, they travel to Hanover (Tuesday, 4 p.m.) and Sandwich (Thursday, 4:30).

Boys tennis team makes history

"As nice as the Norwell win was, the fact that we managed to beat a good Cape Cod Academy team after taking a two-hour bus ride is impressive," said Sceery.

The match was decided by the third set at first doubles, which Pescatore and Ackley were able to pull out, 6-4. This was the duo's first match together.

"I kind of figured it was down to us because everyone was watching pretty intensely," recalls Pescatore. "I thought we played pretty well. It was definitely a hard-fought match. We started out a little shaky, but by the third set we were clicking pretty well together and attacking everything."

"Our doubles have been really solid," said Sceery. "Chris Ackley has really stepped up his game. Victor and Ryan have also been major factors for us."

Skippers 4, Mashpee 1

For this league match on Monday, the Skippers were without Sceery, who was taking the first of many AP exams (it was French on this day).

Sullivan and Morin both moved up a spot in the lineup and earned victories. Pescatore and Donze took first doubles without losing a single game, and the second doubles tandem of junior Josh Dupre and freshman Ivan Sceery won in straight sets.

6, and force a tiebreaker. Meehan and Landon would win the tiebreaker (7-2) to clinch the match with some excellent serves and winners at the net.

Sophomore Susan Bitetti earned the lone point for Norwell, handing Cohasset senior Chelsea Grossman her first loss of the year in a 6-1, 6-0 match.

At third singles, Skippers sophomore Meg Anderson topped Norwell senior Kathryn Ankner, 6-4, 6-0. At second doubles, senior Remy Lee and junior Elizabeth Landon earned a 6-3, 6-3 win over the Clippers' duo of senior Jamie Regan and sophomore Katherine Kelley. Lee was filling in for regular starter Emilie Shea and played a typically strong match.

Coach Meehan said after the match that this may be her best team at Cohasset.

"We've had more talented teams. To be successful, luck is huge, and talent is up there," Meehan said. "But chemistry is huge, too. It is team tennis. This group of girls, down to the 34th kid, has gelled so well. When I say this is my best team in 15 years, I really mean it. This is a solid team with a lot of depth."

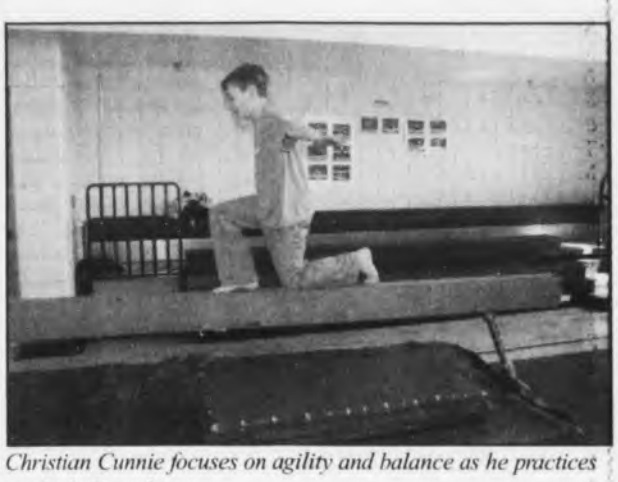
Gymnastics program at Deer Hill a success

The Cohasset Recreation/One Creative Place after school gymnastics program at Deer Hill School has been a big hit this season. This educational gymnastics program, run by Deer Hill physical education instructor Michael Weydt and fourth grade teacher Kayne Beaudry, has more than 40 student participants.

Weydt attributes the popularity of the program to good old-fashioned fun. "Where can children go today to swing or climb ropes, turn around on bars and jump off or over equipment in a safe, creative manner?" The program takes place daily after school for third, fourth and fifth grade students.

Beaudry said, "It's wonderful to see different age levels and abilities come together to learn, teach each other and grow in such a positive environment."

Sam Curatola learns to master the high bar.



Christian Cunnie focuses on agility and balance as he practices on the balance beam.

Wonder what your baby is thinking?

Baby Signs Lecture: A way to communicate with babies before they can speak is at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, at 7 p.m., May 25.

Have you ever wondered what your baby is thinking? Are there times when you wish your baby could talk to let you know what is wrong? The Baby Signs Program gives babies and their caretakers the ability to communicate through the use of simples signs often months before babies could otherwise speak.

Elyse McPherson, certified Speech and Language Pathologist and Independent Certified Instructor for the Baby Signs Programs will be presenting the Baby Signs Program and its usefulness as a parenting tool. Research has found that using the Baby Signs Program with babies has dramatic benefits, including decreasing frustration for babies and parents/caretakers, enriching the parent-child bond, boosting emotional development, helping babies talk sooner – even raising IQ scores. Come and learn more about this program and bring your questions.

The Cohasset library is located at 35 Ripley Road. This event is open to the public and free. Seats are limited. Sponsored by the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club, www.scnewcomers.com .

Arc of the South Shorenames development coordinator

David C. Calhoun, executive director of The Arc of the South Shore, recently announced that Claudia Cuscianna has joined the organization as development coordinator. Cuscianna will be instrumental in increasing donor support to The Arc of the South Shore, which provides advocacy, support, training and services to more than 1,500 South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities each year. She will oversee all donor giving programs, as well as the Annual Fund and grant writing, while also recruiting and supporting volunteers and memberships.

Cuscianna has more than seven years of experience in the fundraising industry. Prior to joining The Arc of the South Shore, she worked in donor relations at Partners Home Care in Rockland. She was also a corporate membership officer at the Museum of Science in Boston, and a membership and educational program officer at the Smaller Business Association of New England in Waltham. Cuscianna is also a member of Women in Development.

"Claudia's experience, dedication and compassion for our services make her an invaluable addition to our team," Calhoun said. "We are excited to see the opportunities she will create for The Arc of the South Shore, our members, their families, and communities we serve."

"I strongly believe in the community-based outreach programs offered by The Arc of the South Shore," said Cuscianna. "An organization that provides services for individuals with developmental disabilities, as well as for their families, is laudable. I truly believe I can make a difference by being a part of this organization and sharing its wonderful accomplishments with the communities it serves."

A Quincy resident, Cuscianna received a Bachelor of Arts degree in political science and history from Curry College in Milton. She also received her French Diplomacy and Translations Certificate from Ecole Lemania, Lausanne, Switzerland. In her spare time,

Claudia Cusianna

Cuscianna is a volunteer at the Pine Street Inn, the Museum of Science, and the Japan Society in Boston. She enjoys swimming, horseback riding, and spending time with her husband Manny, and their two-year-old daughter, Avelina.
